Council Members Lose Zeal

Four Virginia Beach councilmen will not serve another term; in exclusive interviews they discuss personal and professional reasons for their decisions.

By Mike Gooding

Sun Staff Writers

They are four men with much in common, collectively amassing 29 years of public service to Virginia Beach. Come June 30 they will share another distinction. They will all become former city councilmen.

The terms of Dr. Clarence A. Holland, Patrick L. Standing, F. Reid Ervin, and Dr. Ernest T. "Joe" Buchanan III expire within weeks. None of them sought re-election this past Spring. According to Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., it's a shame that none of the four chose to continue on Council. "We'll sure be losing a lot of talent," he said. "Their absence will create quite a void."

McCoy says the councilmen may have decided to step down because they were losing their zest for the job. (Three of the four councilmen agreed). "I know I'm beginning to get some of that feeling myself," McCoy said. "After a number of years in politics your enthusiasm begins to wain. Although I never really said that decline in them, I can understand how it could happen and lead them to their decisions. It could possibly happen to me in the coming four years."

McCoy has confidence the city's governing body will continue to operate efficiently, despite the great loss in experience and leadership that will soon take place. "I don't think Council is going backwards or anything, but I'm sure we're going to miss them. I'm just sorry so many of them had to leave at once."

Each of the outgoing councilmen has his own reasons for stepping down. In separate interviews conducted last week, the four legislators pointed to personal reasons, such as lack of enthusiasm, as primary criteria in deciding not to run for office.

Holland

In terms of tenure, Clarence Holland is the senior member of the outgoing crew. The 53 year-old practicing physician was first sworn into office in September, 1970. He became mayor of Virginia Beach in July, 1976, a position he held for two years.

Following more than a decade of work on Council, though, Holland thinks he may have had enough. "If you are not careful, after a while you can become blasé in the job," he said. "It is hard to maintain all of the concerns and enthusiasm for so many years. I didn't want it to be that way with me. If I'm not contributing,

I'd just as soon not be in it any more."

Holland also indicated personality differences among council members contributed to his decision. "I am very discouraged by all the bickering on Council," he said. "There is more of a 'me' philosophy at work than an 'us' philosophy."

Holland attributes this division within Council to the size and structure of the legislative body. "The size of the council is certainly too large, but the city is too large and diverse, I think, to reduce the size and still adequately represent all interests," he said.

Holland suggests a commission be formed to redistrict the city into five boroughs. Only two at-large seats would be included in an ideal city council according to Holland, reducing Council's total membership from 11 to seven. Council is currently comprised of seven borough, and four at-large seats. "That way, you'd have a more realistic governing body that would provide sufficient coverage if we included a combined Blackwater-Pungo borough...I don't feel we've done a bad job, it's just that I feel we could function better with seven people."

"I don't feel we've done a bad job, it's just that we could function better with seven people" - Holland

Holland, who represents the Bayside borough, says Council still has a few bugs to iron out in its structure. "We're still going through growing pains," he said. "I don't know if Council has matured yet. We spend too much time dwelling on the day-to-day issues and not enough emphasis is placed on the future." An area of future concern for Council, according to Holland, is city financing.

Holland says the City of Virginia Beach, like Council, still has a way to go until it reaches maturity. "It will probably be in another 10 years," he said.

Among the issues beckoning to be addressed by civic leaders in order for Virginia Beach to reach that stage, Holland says, are transportation, water, and the arts. "We'd better start playing catch up with our transportation system," he said.

"Getting our water situation settled will give us the appearance of being a first-class city. I was a pusher for an independent system in 1971-72 and an opponent of the Norfolk contract, so I pushed the issue of Virginia Beach becoming a part of some system. We have to have some hand in the governing of our water.

Concerning the arts in Virginia Beach, the Hampden-Sidney alumni said "we're not up to snuff. One of our needs in order to become a first-class city is to have a strong cultural base. Now, we can't expect a national symphony here, and I'm not sure we should try to put together a Chrysler Museum, but the arts are very important."

These issues are important, Holland says, because joined, they can stimulate the private sector, induce more businesses, attract more tourists, and bolster the economy through tax revenues.

"Building is never going to be at the same level as it was in the mid 1970's," he said. "Tourism has begun to take over and it is going to be the number one industry in Virginia Beach for a long time."

In view of this, Holland said it is imperative for the city to assist local businessmen, in any way possible, to attract more visitors to the resort city. "I may be in a small minority," he said, "but I feel you have to put out for the hotel, restaurant and retail businessmen. You have to give them a break, be it by tax advantages or assisting with improvements."

Looking back on his dozen years with Council, Holland says one of his major complaints is the media's repeated calls for a strong, visible city spokesman, a mayor elected by popular vote. "When I was mayor, I felt we did a good job, yet you couldn't classify Clancy Holland as a strong leader," he said. "Overall, I think the press has done an excellent job covering Council. If I had just one complaint it would be that the media seems to harp on the need for a strong leader."

"I don't know that you need to have that kind of person in Virginia Beach. I'm not really for an elected mayor; we're just not at that point yet. We don't need a full-time mayor who is only interested in political power and the financial aspects, I'm a strong proponent of the council-manager system," he said. Asked whether the City would ever have a publicly-elected mayor, Holland said, "I hope that through the remainder of this century we stick with what we have."

Holland still enjoys government at the local level, but admits he needs some time away from it. "I have to sit back now and figure out what I can do to be of service to my city. I'm not in a position to say now if I'll ever run for office again."

In the meanwhile, Holland is optimistic that the four new faces on Council will do a good job. "I'm a big believer that new people bring in new ideas and solutions."

Standing

One outgoing councilman who is quite sure he will never seek office again is former mayor Pat Standing. "I don't intend to be active in City politics again," he said. "Eight years is enough."

Standing, a merchant and investor by trade, was first sworn into office in July, 1974. He became mayor in 1978 and held the title until 1980. His University of Virginia degree in city planning has served him and the City well according to McCoy. "He has a great working knowledge of the internal structure of the city," he said.

"I can't say I'm tired of being on Council in the sense of it being a futile effort," Standing said. "I really want to see Virginia Beach do well and I think we've done a lot. But when I started on Council I was 34 with a few gray hairs. Now I'm 42 with a lot of gray hairs."

"The city will continue to gravitate, but it will be a different kind of growth, one that is more normal" - Standing

"My decision not to run again is strictly personal, not because I couldn't win or because I had somebody chasing me out of office. I want to spend more time with my family and do some traveling," Standing said.

An at-large councilman, Standing says one aspect of the job he is fed up with is media coverage of Council. "The image of Council is inaccurate, and that perception is brought about by the press," he said. "To believe what you read in the newspapers, Council is nothing but a body run by business-oriented groups. The press says there's a lot of factionalism and petty bickering on Council, which may be true, but it is certainly not the whole story."

"The press has tried to create controversy because it's news," Standing concluded.

Despite problems with news coverage, Standing says he has experienced many fulfillments resulting from his association with Council, chief of which was the completion of The Virginia Beach Pavilion. "It was a real peach to get the arts and conference center," he said. "I see the city remaining active in expanding upon the assets of Virginia Beach. Tourism is our major industry and it will continue to be the number one asset."

Standing predicts Virginia Beach will keep expanding in the years to come. "The city will continue to gravitate, but it will be a different kind of growth, a growth that is more normal," he said. Since Virginia Beach merged with Princess Anne in 1963, development has been abnormal in the region, Standing says, because expansion came too rapidly and communications were not good between the government and the private sector. "Business and the government structure have got to work together," he said. "It is imperative that the business community makes its power structure more available to the City."

Much Experience Leaving At Once

"When we were a very young city we didn't have that kind of cooperation," he continued. "But the maturity process is part of the process of natural evolution." Despite the growing pains, Standing remains upbeat in discussing future prospects for the beach. "The tax rate, the quality of life, the work force all add up to the fact that Virginia Beach is going to prosper," he said. "The city just needs to take its time and develop its roots."

As for Standing, his roots are already firmly planted. "Everything I've got invested is here in Virginia Beach. I'm not moving."

Ervin

After June 30, Reid Ervin plans to devote all of his attention to his contracting business, Reid Associates, Inc., of which he is president.

"Actually, there are several good reasons why I didn't run," Ervin said. "I'm a strong proponent of a two-term limit on City Council. Of equal importance, after eight years it is hard to maintain the high level of enthusiasm I once had. You've got to remember, there is not a high level of compensations for this job. Politicians are never highly respected."

"We have to provide an outlet for the arts. A city is not just curbs, gutters, sidewalks and industrial parks" - Ervin

Ervin is uncertain whether he will ever serve the city in any capacity again. "I never try to make predictions about the future," Ervin, 61, said. "It all depends on my health. The way I feel today, I'm not going to run for office again."

Ervin is a former vice-mayor. He joined Council in September, 1970, was upset in 1974 elections, and sat out for four years. In 1978 he was elected again. He holds a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Duke University. McCoy calls Ervin "the most knowledgeable city councilman I've ever met, especially in structural areas such as buildings and roads his knowledge is unlimited."

Unlike Holland and Standing, Ervin denies personal clashes hamper the effectiveness of Council. "I don't agree with the assessment that there's a lot of bickering," he said. "We have 11 good people, with good educations, who represent a broad body of experience. When I hear that Council lacks harmony, I point back to the times when we had so-called harmony and all we saw was unanimous votes. In my opinion, that is bad government."

"There is absolutely nothing wrong with a 6-5 vote," Ervin said, because "there is always room for healthy disagreement. I don't always agree or disagree with John Baum, Clancy Holland or Meyers Oberdorfer. You just can't divorce yourself from your political convictions." In response to Council critics, Ervin said, "we've got a good council. I've seen no evidence of any conflict of interest or favoritism. This council is completely honest. I have a great deal of respect for all of the members. I only hope the next council is as successful."

For Council to achieve eventual success, Ervin, like Holland, says reducing the size of City Council is essential. Unlike Holland, however, Ervin encourages the election of the mayor by popular vote.

"I don't know if it's any more difficult to run council with 11 people than it would be with seven, but personally I'm a favor of redistricting the city into seven boroughs of equal size and population," he said. Asked if he had voiced this opinion to his peers, Ervin said he had, "10 or 15 times." Ervin's plan calls for an entire at-large election because "that is the only way you can elect a mayor by popular vote." An at-large councilman himself, Ervin said such a system would provide "a little more respect for the office of mayor."

"I'm going to encourage the change every time I get the opportunity. Business and civic leaders ought to force the issue as well," Ervin added.

The primary concern of the next council, according to Ervin, is ensuring Virginia Beach has a "well-run, high quality of life." One method of reaching this goal, he said, is to promote the arts. "It has to come from the people, and the city ought to encourage it," Ervin said. "So far as I'm concerned, without the arts you can never be a first-class city." The government must take the lead in promoting the arts, Ervin says. "We have to provide an element for the arts, an outlet. A city is not just curbs, gutters, sidewalks and industrial parks."

Falling under Ervin's list of civic projects the city must develop are parks, recreation, education, service clubs, the boy scouts, and the girl scouts. "These sort of things give us relief from the day-to-day cares of the world. If we compare ourselves to Philadelphia, New York, or Boston, we obviously still have a long way to go. But, if we don't shoot for quality service, our people will be walking around like zombies. If you don't believe me, go out to the coal-mining towns of West Virginia or Detroit, Michigan. Those people live like zombies."

Like his departing associates on Council, Ervin is also concerned with the growth in which Virginia Beach is involved. Much of the problem, he said, is due to the rapid expansion here in the late 1960's through the mid 1970's. "We've been a bedroom community for years," he said. "Big business was frightened by annexation. Out of fear, the city formed practically overnight."

Following this period of seeming unsupervised development, Ervin said the city leaders began to gain more control over the growth process. "Now, we're re-creating the whole town, molding ourselves into what we'd like to become by the turn of the century," Ervin says the outlook is promising that the city's growth will take the right path if, he said, "we maintain tight controls on the purse strings."

Asked if he had any advice for the councilmen who will replace him and the other three, Ervin said respecting constituent needs is the key. "Most of my ideas were borrowed from the man on the street," he said. "Listen to the people and read a lot and you'll be able to get a whole lot accomplished."

Buchanan

Up until a year ago, Joe Buchanan was a man in the street himself. But, when then-councilman Donald Merrick was ailing and unable to continue his elected duties, Council unanimously appointed Buchanan to the post.

Tidewater Community College saw a little less of Buchanan, its 42-year-old dean of student services this past year, as he dove head-first into the sea of City Council responsibilities. It was this strain on his professional livelihood, plus personal obligations, which forced Buchanan to step down. "My job at TCC calls for me to spend a great deal of time working on budgeting problems. It just seemed to me that I ought to get this job done first," he said.

Buchanan said another factor in his decision to not seek re-election is the impending birth of his second child. Finally, Buchanan cites the fact that "some really good, well-qualified people wanted to run."

Buchanan said trying to balance his Council duties with his professional career and home life is very taxing. "It seems like everything I get into is hard. My work is hard, and being on City Council is hard. The public perception of Council is far different from the reality of that work, which is hard."

One of the difficulties of the job deals with the size of the Council, according to some other members. Not so, says Buchanan. "Books I've read say that when you get too many more than 10 people on a committee, it is an inefficient body and you get problems. I disagree with that. I think 10, or in our case 11, is a good number. Upon occasion, Council works real well."

"Council had best begin seriously dealing with the city's water problem because we have less than eight years left" - Buchanan

Although satisfied with the number of councilmen, Buchanan says he is dismayed with the actions of some of his peers. Specifically, Buchanan charges his fellow councilmen are deliberately leaking classified information to the media. He says this is a dangerous practice. "We've had, over the last nine months, several matters that may be lawfully discussed in executive session that somehow came to the attention of the press," he said. "Now, I know I didn't say anything, so it must have been one of the other 10. This sort of stuff is potentially damaging to the city."

Nonetheless, Buchanan plans on championing this cause until his last day in office. "I believe in bringing my full energy to it until the very end," he said. "I've asked the city attorney if, in his opinion, information discussed in closed session becomes the property of the city. No council member has the right to give away city property. It is absolutely critical we determine how to handle this because I don't think the public interest has been served the way we are currently operating."

Buchanan, who represents the Lynnhaven borough, says another issue of utmost importance to the next Council is water, its cost, and how the city is going to meet the need for it after its contract with the City of Norfolk expires at decade's end.

"This will be the major purchase in the history of Virginia Beach," he said. "Council had best begin seriously dealing with this topic because we have less than eight years to get a new system in operation."

Buchanan, a Florida State University alumni, calls Virginia Beach a "cosmopolitan city" which he predicts will continue to grow and flourish. He says that one day he would like to be a part of city management again. "I may be running again, I may not," he said. "With two children under the age of five, though, it will be a few years before I'll be able to devote 20 hours a week to Council again." Meanwhile, Buchanan said, "I'd like to spend a little time on the farm."

Buchanan says the recent Council election had so many candidates in the field, the best candidates may not have won. "I don't know if having 24 candidates can allow for a reasonable discussion of the issues," he said. "With so many people running, the issues tend to get blurred."

After June 30, though, those issues will no longer be the problem of Joe Buchanan, Reid Ervin, Pat Standing, and Clarence Holland. Instead, the newly elected council members Nancy Crech, J. Jack Jennings, Louis Jones, and Robert G. "Bob" Jones, along with the seven incumbents, will be left the job of running the city and filling some mighty big shoes.

Holiday Business, And Deaths Up

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Whew!

Made it through another Virginia Beach Memorial Day weekend without serious mishap. The only inconvenience incurred over the hot three day holiday was a little Virginia Beach sunburn. And a combination of Tropical Blend, fresh pineapples, and a pool averted much of the discomfort.

On the oceanfront, innkeepers report high occupancy rates and few problems over last weekend. Unfortunately, with this good news also comes bad. Two lives were lost in Virginia Beach over the Memorial Day weekend. But we'll get to that later.

First, the good news.

Staring northerly, the 203-unit Sheraton-Beach Inn, 36th and oceanfront, had planned 100% room occupancy for last Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. But it didn't happen.

"We weren't booked all the nights," said night manager Art Carson. "I think the weather had a lot to do with it."

"We came out pretty good, with an average of 95% occupancy for the three nights. It was about 99% Sunday night, 98% Saturday night and 90% Friday. We were planning 100% occupancy for all three nights."

This summer, for the first time, there is no parking on Atlantic Avenue, and a center turn lane. These measures are to help move traffic on the strip.

"There are a lot of traffic jams," Carson said, "but I think the traffic moved a little smoother than last year. I just wish the weather had been better."

At the 48-unit Seahawk Motel, 26th and Atlantic, there hasn't been a free room for the last three weeks.

"We were booked all weekend," said desk clerk Isabelle Travers. "We had a good weekend. We never had a night with a room empty. We haven't, I don't think, had a vacancy for the last three weeks."

"The traffic was backed up. It's always like that. But I think it's running better without the parking on Atlantic Avenue and with the center turn lane."

Sheri Lovitt, desk clerk at the 82-unit Kona Kai Motel, 18th and Oceanfront, said business was good but complaints on the traffic were high.

"Everything was fine for us over the weekend," she said, "and for a few nights before that. We didn't have any vacancies over Memorial Day."

"The traffic was bad, though, bad, bad. A lot of people were complaining about it. Some said it took them a half an hour to get from the end of the interstate to the oceanfront. It took an hour to get from one end of Atlantic Avenue to the other."

Bobby Dozier, sales clerk at the 124-unit Hilton Inn on 8th Street and Oceanfront, says he has lived in Virginia Beach all his life and has never seen a busier Memorial Day weekend.

"We were 100% full all three nights," Dozier said. "The weather somewhat cooperated with us. Sunday we had a lot of people check out early, but we filled right up again with walk-in traffic. It's as dead as a doorknob here tonight (Monday). I don't think anybody is full."

"The no parking on Atlantic Avenue I think helps the traffic situation, and I think the middle turn lane also helps a lot. But this past weekend was as crowded as I've ever seen it and I've lived here all my life."

Memorial Day deaths

As the Sun reported last week, the only Memorial Day weekend traffic fatality to occur in Virginia Beach since at least 1974 occurred in 1979.

This Memorial Day weekend two people lost their lives in Virginia Beach. One in a car crash and one in a house fire.

On May 31 at 7 a.m. Norfolk resident Jodylyn Pace, 26, died after running her car onto the median and crashing into a tree on Shore Drive near the middle gate of Fort Story. She was pronounced dead at the scene. Pace's passenger, Elizabeth G. Nilsen of Norfolk was taken to Virginia Beach General Hospital and listed in stable condition. Second Precinct Virginia Beach Police Officer P. J. Lanteigne is investigating the accident.

Virginia Beach resident Robert Wayne Leggett, 23, of the 400 block of Patton Lane in Virginia Beach was found dead in a May 29 house fire in the 4800 block of Talden Street. The exact cause of death has not been determined. Leggett was discovered in the house at 11:30 p.m. Virginia Beach Detective J. T. Vanderhieden is investigating the incident, which occurred in the city's third precinct.

Around the city Sergeant Joe Curran, first precinct, reports it was a quiet Memorial Day weekend in his end of the city.

"It's been real quiet for the holiday weekend," he said. "To my knowledge nothing out of the ordinary has happened. We were kinda looking for an average holiday weekend."

Lieutenant R. F. Lippert, third precinct, reports a fairly quiet weekend, noting not many accidents and only seven drunk driving arrests.

Money Talk

Editor:

On the subject of money and banking, Robert Hemphill, who was credit manager of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, once said: "It (money and banking) is the most important subject intelligent persons can investigate and reflect upon. It is so important that our present civilization may collapse unless it is widely understood and the defects remedied very soon."

As we look at the deepening national crisis with nearly 10 million Americans out of work and many of whom not knowing where their next meal is coming from or where the money will come from to pay the next rent or mortgage payment, we must help one another during these times of distress. Here are two main problems, as I see it. First, there is not enough low interest credit. Second, there is not enough money, period.

Today, there is some talk about returning to a "Gold Standard." However, a Gold Standard is not money or low interest credit, so it really won't do much good. Neither will the gold medallions recommended by the recent Gold Commission. Without legal tender status, the gold medallions are nothing more than an investment commodity. Only the medallion will be able to buy them, so they won't do any good for those sectors of our economy that need low interest credit to revive them, like the automobile and housing industries. So, I would like to propose the following plan to provide the nation with gold and silver coins and with low interest credit all at the same time. The low interest credit will be used to help the farmers, small businessmen, automobile and housing industries and provide direct help to city, county and state governments.

It is this: Take the gold bullion in Fort Knox and turn it into gold coins with a legal tender value of $1,000 per Troy ounce and $500 per half-Troy ounce. Also, mint silver coins in one Troy ounce denominations with a legal tender value of $20 each and one half Troy ounce with a value of $10 each. It has been estimated that there is enough gold in Fort Knox to create 200 Billion dollars worth of gold coins at $1000 per Troy ounce. The Federal government is to store the coins after they are minted, but to immediately spend 70 billion dollars this year to pull the economy out of the depression (this is not a recession, people - this is a depression!).

There should be an immediate 20 Billion of these coins lent exclusively to the savings and Loan industry at 3% for refinancing at 7% for new homes. Also, a special provision for loans at 6% for homes to be built with earth sheltered or solar heating features added. An immediate 15 Billion lent for use in low interest loans (8%) for fuel efficient American cars. Another 10 Billion in low interest for the farmers. Another 15 Billion in direct grants to State and Local governments to help them out in their financial crisis. Last of all, another 10 Billion in direct loans through the Federal Housing Administration at 8% for the purchase of existing homes. Note, that of the 70 Billion spent, only 15 Billion is actually given away to State and Local governments with no strings attached. The other 55 Billion provides low interest credit directly from the government.

In addition to this, our government should place the Federal Reserve System under the Department of the Treasury. Wouldn't it be nice to see Paul Volcker have to go out looking for a job? If you agree with these proposals, then send a copy to the President and your Congressman and tell them to get with it!

Reader Attacks Gooding's Editorial

Editor:

The article I just read in the May 19 issue of the Virginia Beach Sun makes me ashamed and apologetic to our visiting tourists.

Even a brand new reporter should not write an article as such.

These unjustly categorized people are people too. They come here to relax and enjoy their vacations.

We stimulate their appetites to visit our fair city through widespread advertisement, and once here belittle them for being here. Their hard earned money is spent freely in our fair city, promoting jobs to our local folds, in turn who spend their earnings in our regular shops.

The beach boys are despised for tourism, certainly not supported by our own, otherwise we could open all year round enjoying a steady business.

The tourism dollars help to keep our taxes down. I for one enjoy hearing about their hometowns and their opinions of Virginia Beach.

Sure the beaches are crowded, the hotels full, and the shops busy, but is the same when I go on vacation elsewhere. I would certainly hate to think, when I visit another city, that they feel about me and my money as Mike Gooding does about tourists here in Virginia Beach.

May Queen Lora Matthews

P. A. Honors May Queen, King

It was a special day recently for several Princess Anne High School sophomores.

Lora Matthews and Jimmy Hunt have been elected May Queen and King for 1982.

Lora, 16, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Matthews, who live in the Malibu section of the city. In winning the title she received a crown, sash, and 20 red roses.

The May Queen and King, and the court were originally nominated by their teachers. Students voted on two ballots to determine the winners. Other winners included: Julie Wagner, first runner-up; and Jimmy Linderman, second runner-up.

Matthews said the honors are awarded based on how active the students are in school, and on popularity.

"I was shocked," Lora said about winning. "I really wasn't expecting it. I thought there were a couple of others who get it before me."

Lora is active at Princess Anne in Trinty Keyettes, S.C.A. (She'll be second vice president next year); Madrigals; and Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

The diplomas were not made out of sheepskin and the mortarboards had no tassels, but to 12 Virginia Beach youngsters, the lack of props made little difference. To them, it was, nonetheless, graduation day.

The ceremony, which took place last week, was the commencement exercises for the Playhouse Day Care Center, located at 2960 South Lynnhaven Road. In business for more than 10 years, the center currently has 45 students between ages two and five enrolled in the day care program.

According to Dorothy

Carroll, the school's teacher, the children participate in a variety of a structural and supervised activities. "Our senior kindergarten strives to provide a balanced curriculum preparing children to enter the public school system," she said. Among the subjects studied, Carroll said, are phonics, reading and math.

The center is open year-round from 7:15 a.m. to 5:45 p.m., Monday through Friday. Further information can be obtained from the center's owner and director, Celeste Smith, at 340-9627.

Education Deters V.D., Pregnancies

Health Officials Refute Author's Views On Sex

By Mike Gooding,
Sun Staff Writer

Points not valid

Sex education classes have promoted promiscuity and should be removed from Virginia Beach public schools and schools nationwide the vice president of Catholics United for the Faith told 300 Pavilion listeners last week.

But City public health officials, citing national trends, say programs such as the voluntary sex education courses headed by Virginia Beach health educator Diane Walker, promote sexual awareness and are beneficial in preventing pregnancies and venereal diseases.

James Likoudis, at a meeting sponsored by the Tidewater chapter of Catholics United for the Faith, Citizens Against Unacceptable Sex Education, the Christian Education Association of Virginia Beach, the Beach chapter of the Eagle Forum, Sun Life Publishing, Christian Family renewal, and the American Life Lobby, said any classroom teaching concerning sex is wrong because it replaces the role of parents as sex educators and promotes and amoral view of sex.

Such classes provide "false, inadequate information concerning the consequences of sin, "and do away with the "built-in bashfulness and shame" that normally precludes teenagers from engaging in sexual activity, he said.

Children, such as those participating in optional after-school sex education programs at six Beach elementary and junior high schools, are "being brainwashed to accept contraceptive lifestyles," said Likoudis. Organizations, such as planned parenthood and others that favor sex education, are attempting to impart upon youth the notion, "if it feels good, do it," Likoudis said. "Sex education has no place in our schools," he concluded.

"The notion that you only make matters worse by educating the people is simply not valid," says Dr. George C. Sjolund, director of the Virginia Beach Department of Health. As evidence, Sjolund points to recently released figures on selected natality measures for women ages 19 and under in the state. For the month of February, 1982, there were 462 births to unwed mothers age 15-19. Conversely, for the same month, there were 580 abortions performed on women in the same age group. "They must not have known what they were doing," Sjolund said. According to the latest figures, more than 1,000 teenagers in Virginia became pregnant in 1979. Of those, 604 chose to have abortions. Teenage pregnancies surpassed 22,000 that year and the national figure of one million was called "epidemic" in nature.

A further concern to public health officials is the ever-present threat of sexually transmitted diseases. Gonorrhea is the most common of these communicable infections, but also threatening are syphilis, herpes simplex, non-gonococcal urethritis, vaginitis, urinary tract infections, trichomoniasis, chancroid, lymphogranuloma venereum, genital warts, lice and scabies. According to Sjolund's statistics, gonorrhea is far and away the most often treated disease in Virginia. In February, there were 1,475 documented cases in the state. The closest contender was chickenpox, of which there were 114 cases.

National statistics released by Zero Population Growth are just as staggering. Among the organizations figures are:

- Teenagers bear nearly one in five babies born in the United States; two fifths of these births are out of wedlock.

•One in 10 teenage women becomes pregnant each year.

•One in six teenage women who have premarital sex becomes pregnant.

•Teenagers account for one-third of all legal abortions performed in the U.S.

"The problem," according to Sjolund, "is they just aren't getting reliable information anywhere. There needs to be an open flow of knowledge and information." Sjolund says the root of the difficulties people such as Likoudis have with sex education lies within their own feelings and inadequacy. "They have a fear of expression of information because it will somehow change the values they hold important."

Jerri Bunch, a nurse practitioner at the Health Department Clinic at 19th and Baltic Avenues, agrees that a further proliferation of pertinent sex education information is what is needed to curb this "epidemic" of pregnancies and V.D. amongst teenagers. "Who in the world are they going to get their information from?" she asks.

Bunch says she understands the motivation behind the likes of Likoudis. "Would you want your 13 year-old daughter having sex?" Bunch said. Teenagers will, she says, continue with their sexual activity despite the efforts of Likoudis. "They're not going to stop having sex," she said. "I see maybe one virgin a month."

Bunch calls efforts to curb sex education "ridiculous." "I don't know what adults are afraid of. Telling kids not to have sex or withholding information and services is not going to help. We need to start sex education in the elementary schools. Puberty is too late.

"I think what a lot of parents are afraid of is that we are going to take first graders and show them porno flicks."

Bunch says the four Virginia Beach family planning clinics see as many 60 new patients per month who fear they are pregnant or have V.D. routinely, Bunch says, 40 young women per month return to the clinic after having been there at least once before for pregnancy testing. Bunch says her oceanfront clinic performs 150 pregnancy tests on teenagers a month.

Many of the teens she sees, Bunch says, are ignorant of birth control facts. "A lot of them think if you do it for the first time you can't get pregnant," she said. "They think you can stay unpregnant by douching with Coca Cola, they play the rhythm game, or they thought it was the wrong time of the month to get pregnant."

Teenagers are not to be blamed for these misconceptions, Bunch says. "They are impulsive. They live for the moment. It is typical of adolescents to be unable to relate their consequences with their actions. They just can't think six months down the road."

Instead, Bunch says, the media is partially to be blamed. "Look at 'The Dukes of Hazzard,'" she said. "That girl on the show is always running around with her boobs hanging out of her blouse. And 'Dallas,' people are always having sex with each other on that show. The kids have sex in the magazines, movies, everywhere all around them. How are they not going to be thinking about it?"

Gardening Book Available

"Inside-Out: The Kitchen and Garden Weekly Handbook," which features weekly gardening advice and seasonal recipes specifically for U.S.D.A. Temperate Zone 8, has just been released by JCF Corp. of Virginia Beach.

This soft-cover, spiral-bound book was written by Jean Winslow and Edna Harvey Wolverton and illustrated by Chris Kelley Kornegay, all of whom reside in Hertford, North Carolina, which is located along with Tidewater and the rest of eastern North Carolina in U.S.D.A. Temperate Zone 8. The authors and illustrator collaborated on this book as a result of working together for the past four years to produce material for "The (Hertford, N.C.) Perquimans Weekly," Hertford, N.C.

Correction

Due to a proof reading error in last week's Memorial Day driving editorial, it was indicated that there were "hundreds of thousands" of motor vehicles in Virginia that are neither registered or taxed. That should have been "hundreds or thousands."

Organic Minerals Affect Beach SoilSun

Extension Agent
Greg Loorgan

What is soil?

Soil is that very thin layer of material coating the earth's dry surface that keeps man from becoming extinct. It is also a complex, carefully balanced biological system. Undisturbed soil consists of many layers each with a very different consistency. The uppermost layer is called the topsoil. The topsoil is proportionately rich in humus or organic matter and contains roots, bacteria, fungi, insects and an occasional animal. It is the topsoil that is responsible for the existence of life as we know it.

Topsoil consists of four main ingredients: air, water, minerals and organic material. Although all of these exist in a very finely mixed form, air and water comprise about fifty-percent of the volume. They represent what is called the "pore space" or open areas. The other half of topsoil is called the "solid" and consists mostly of minerals with some organic matter. Under ideal weather and cultural conditions, a good topsoil would be half pore space divided equally between air and water and half solids containing ten percent organic matter. Ten percent organic matter seems too small to most people. They think a good topsoil contains almost all organic matter and some minerals. The fact is that natural organic soils only contain ten-percent organic matter. Therefore, the rich topsoil you or your neighbors purchase contains lots of minerals, at least ninety percent of all the soil solids. In Virginia Beach, the mineral content of the soil is another name for clay. Good topsoil then, in other words, is half pore space and half soil solids, ninety percent of which is clay. As one can see, a little organic matter makes a big difference in our soil.

Organic matter comes in many forms. Lawn clippings, leaf mold, manure, peat moss, pine bark and sawdust are just a few forms. When incorporated into the soil, these organic materials greatly influence soil properties, far greater than their low percentage would indicate. Organic matter is responsible for giving structure to the soil. Instead of being very sticky and hard to dig, organic matter makes clay loose and crumbly. However, organic matter is continually being broken down. Consequently, it is a rather transitory soil component and must be renewed over the years. Essential nutrients are also a benefit of organic matter. If no fertilizer is used, organic matter is the sole source of nitrogen and a major source of phosphorus and sulfur. It is also the main source of energy for soil micro-organisms. They are responsible for making the other plant nutrients available by means of their biochemical activity.

In addition to improving the structure of soil and supplying nutrients, organic matter also increases the amount of water soil can hold and the proportion of this water available for plants. One might ask why do we need more water when clay seems to hold too much already? Clay does hold a lot of water, but it does not hold enough air. Lack of air is the problem, not too much water. Roots need oxygen. When a soil is saturated with water, all the air and oxygen is pushed out and the roots suffocate. The result is a wilted plant. Organic matter increases the amount of water a soil can hold while still maintaining a sufficient air or oxygen supply. Therefore, the best remedy for our clay which is a poorly drained soil is to incorporate organic matter. One can till in topsoil, but remember topsoil only contains ten percent organic matter. A better solution is to till in material such as peat moss, lawn clipping or other organic matter sources. In this way, all of your money and labor is being spent on solving the problem. Tilling in topsoil means that ninety percent of your money and labor is spent adding material that you already have - air, water and minerals.

Suppose your topsoil was removed during the construction of your house. What you end up with is basically subsoil. Subsoil contains little or no organic matter and very little nutrients. Subsoil pore space is much smaller than topsoil and, therefore, can not hold as much water and definitely not much air. What can be done with such poor soil? Add organic matter! Subsoil already has plenty of minerals. By adding organic matter, pore space is increased and, obviously, the organic percentage is increased. With increased pore space, the soil will hold more water and, more importantly, more air. Add nutrients and your subsoil has become topsoil. Remember, however, organic matter is not a permanent part of the soil. Continuous additions are necessary. In the case of the garden, these additions present no problems. The lawn area may present a problem. Continuous additions by tilling are not practical, but healthy grass sends enormous amounts of roots throughout the topsoil. These roots die and are constantly being replaced. As a result, grass plants continuously supply the soil with the organic matter of the roots. With proper preparation and a healthy turf, subsoil can become an asset of your property.

Topsoil is a very important part of a successful lawn and garden. It is also important to remember that success in your yard can be achieved regardless of how poor your soil has become.

Tinker

Jewell

Tinker Takes Over NAS Oceana

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

The F-14 Tomcat and A-6 Intruder sat nearby as the U.S. Navy Atlantic Fleet Band struck up the national anthem, and nearly 1,000 enlisted personnel and officers in crisp white uniforms stood at attention, their fingertips barely touching the tips of their caps in salute. More than 500 guests were on hand, facing the large American flag which thoroughly covered one large wall in Hangar 500 at Naval Air Station, Oceana in Virginia Beach.

Beneath the flag, Capt. Robert W. Jewell, Jr. and Capt. Charles L. Tinker stood at the front podium at attention, as the "Star Spangled Banner" played on. The occasion was the change of command ceremony last week in which Tinker became commanding officer of the $400 million military complex, relieving Jewell, who held the post the past 21 months.

In reporting to the Virginia Beach master jet base, Tinker becomes the station's 25th commanding officer. A veteran fighter pilot, he came to Oceana from Naval Air Station Whiting Field in Milton, Florida, where he served as commanding officer since August, 1980. Tinker, in remarks during the ceremony, said he was "delighted" to take over at Oceana, and he pledged to continue the base's strong commitment to working with the City of Virginia Beach.

"I assure you we will continue to be actively involved with the community in the spirit of mutual benefit," he said.

Jewell, in his farewell address, said Oceana serves an essential role in the nation's national defense. "Oceana is vital to the national community and to world peace," he said. Like Tinker, Jewell emphasized the importance of maintaining ties with the Virginia Beach community. Jewell mentioned such mutual projects and concerns as fire fighting, drug enforcement, water conservation, the Neptune Festival, and the Sailor of the Year ceremonies as examples where he and local civic leaders had cooperated in the past. "The experience has been most gratifying," he concluded.

Real Admiral John Fetterman, Jr., commander of Tactical Wings Atlantic, was guest speaker for the event. He called Tinker and Jewell "outstanding" leaders. "They've done the job and they've done it well," Fetterman said. The rear admiral underscored the captains' remarks about local support, saying "the community plays an important part or element in the Navy, and we call it morale." When local citizens feel good about the Navy, he said, the Navy feels good about itself. "Civilians have to go out and spread the word," he said. "The Navy is doing everything in its power to protect its country. Here at Oceana, the Navy is guarding our sea lines in accordance with national objectives, which are, in the end, the preservation of peace."

Jewell leaves Oceana to become Chief of Staff for the Commander of Naval Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, headquartered in Norfolk. He has a bachelor's degree in political science from Old Dominion University. His military decorations include the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, the Meritorious service Medal, the Navy Unit Commendation, Meritorious Unit Commendation, the Vietnamese Naval Distinguished Service Order, the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross, and various campaign and service awards. A native of Kanakee, Illinois, he resides in Virginia Beach. He has three children, Carolyn, Brock and Robert.

Tinker's awards include the Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal, one individual and 19 Strike Flight Air Medals, three Navy Commendation Medals with Combat "V", the Meritorious Unit Commendation, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, and the Navy Distinguished Service Medal. A native of Vandalia, Illinois, Tinker is married to the former Mitch Murdock of Pensacola, Florida. They have three children, Chuck, Chris and Kemp.

Beach Schools Fare Well In Recent Survey

Sun Staff Report
Parents, teachers and students in Virginia Beach are, by a large majority, very satisfied with the City's school system according to the results of a recently released survey by the Virginia Department of Education Administrative Review Service.

The study, conducted every three years statewide, is designed to evaluate the quality of all aspects of a given school system. Conducted last

October, the study included written surveys in addition to on-site observations by a team of state Department of Education officials who monitored the administering of the questionnaires and inspected the individual schools.

"It is such a positive thing," said Virginia Beach Public Schools

Public Information Director Joe Lowenthal. "So often, nationwide you hear about parents, teachers and students complaining about their schools. Then, here in Virginia Beach, we get over two-thirds of our people responding positively. It must mean we're doing something right."

Lowenthal attributed the high marks to the fact that Virginia Beach is recognized as having an excellent public school system. "The beach has a rather interesting population," Lowenthal said. "It is affluent. It is educated. And it expects a very high degree of quality in its schools. We have to maintain a good system or we are going to hear from the citizens, therefore, we must have a real good program."

The survey is broken down into three areas: responses from parents, teachers and students. Parents gave the most favorable responses, topping 90 percent agreement to a majority of questions.

Lynnhaven Mall Receives Award

By Bill Parness,
Special To The Sun
Lynnhaven Mall was among six shopping centers throughout the United States and Canada to be cited in the International Council of Shopping Centers' 1982 awards program.

Recognized in the category of energy savings and reduction, the regional mall was cited as "an effective demonstration of emphasizing energy conservation as a basic element of design from the outset of a project. Its systems approach uses a broad range of cost-saving devices and techniques to provide center management with flexible tools to manage energy use, control costs and aim for still further reductions that will benefit both the developer and the retailer for whom common area maintenance charges are lower than they might otherwise be."

A project of Melvin Simon & Associates, the 1,125,000 sq. ft. (gross leasable area) mall was opened in March 1981. During its first year of operation, the complex achieved a consumption rate of 28.2 KWH/FT²—almost two units better than the company's best experience to date. It was also a 26% improvement over the average for Simon centers without energy management systems, 18% better than those with such systems and 16% better than those with energy management systems and central cooling plants.

The design minimizes the costs of retail area lighting and cooling—considered the two largest elements of energy consumption in malls—"without compromising the comfort of customers or the esthetic appeal of the mall," ICSC commented.

Under the design, there is no separate heating in the retail areas. Extensive use of skylights with special reflective glass permits enough natural light for interior landscaping and reduces the need for artificial lighting in the mall. A sophisticated system of control devices monitors energy demand. Heating and cooling equipment are turned on and off alternately to maintain a constant temperature, timing devices control use according to hours of occupancy and other devices control internal and external temperature.

The award to Lynnhaven Mall was recently presented at the ICSC's annual convention in Las Vegas. Currently celebrating its 25th anniversary, ICSC boasts some 10,000 members spread throughout the United States, Canada and 36 overseas countries.

Beach Patrol To Be Examined

Harassment and vandalism along the oceanfront boardwalk. The merchants are sick of it. The tourists are sick of it. Residents are sick of it, and so is the Virginia Beach Police Department.

Next week, Virginia Beach Sun staff writer Mike Gooding joins Beach police in a Friday assault on juvenile delinquents and others who make the resort strip a less than desirable place to be after the sun goes down. Gooding writes a first-person account of a night with the Beach Patrol and what the City's police officers are doing about crime on the street.

New Central Library Providing Future Cornerstone

Library SUNlines

By Beach Librarian David Palmer

On Monday, May 24 the Virginia Beach City Council voted to purchase a seven acre site on Virginia Beach Boulevard for the construction of a proposed central library. This vote capped several years of planning during which the Virginia Beach Public Library carefully reviewed its past history, its current physical plant and the library service needs of a population projected to be 400,000 by the year 2,000. The proposed 90,000 square foot central library is the result of this analysis and is the cornerstone for improved public library service in the 1980's and beyond.

Unlike most urban libraries, the Virginia Beach Public Library did not develop a large, comprehensive main library around which are clustered neighborhood branches. Instead, based upon the city's large geographic area, its growth patterns and the lack of a single, clearly identifiable central business district, library planners chose to construct multiple, decentralized branch libraries in strategic population centers throughout the city. These buildings were designed to be visible, to be convenient and to make accessible reference and information services as well as broad book and periodical collections.

By the late 1970's it was becoming increasingly evident that library construction was not keeping pace with the city's burgeoning population. Based upon an exhaustive research effort that compared, analyzed and melded together the best of national building standards with practical experience and the distinct needs of Virginia Beach, it was determined that the city was 129,000 square feet deficient in terms of library space.

Although this space deficiency is most dramatic in the overcrowded Bayside and Kempsville Branches, the most critical impact may be, in fact, on the library's internal support divisions. One such example is the Technical Services Division which orders and prepares all library materials for public use. It is severely overcrowded and under the present conditions would not be able to handle the increased work loads necessitated by the opening of any new library facilities.

By early 1982 the Virginia Beach Public Library completed the review of its capital development and the proposals were officially approved by the Library Board. The City Council's approval of a central library site is the first step in implementing this plan. Under this program the public library will continue to meet the recreational, cultural and informational needs of Virginia Beach citizens through the continuation of a strong, self-reliant branch library system. In addition to the branch system, the plan formally proposes the construction of the 90,000 square foot central library. This building will not only provide access to a broad, in-depth range of materials, heretofore not available because of space limitations, but it will also provide the library's internal support divisions with much needed space which will eventually facilitate future library construction.

In an upcoming article we will explore a second phase of the Virginia Beach Public Library's capital development program which will focus on renaming "branch" libraries "area" libraries and the impact that change will have on public library service in the city.

CONSTANT COMPANIONS

"Those three are always together," remarked Lisa's mother. She was referring to her little daughter, who is seldom seen without her beloved collie and her well-worn rag doll. They are constant companions.

"Lisa is very sensitive about friends," her mother continued. "And this week she came home from Sunday School with a very important lesson. Her teacher told her about God's love and how He never leaves us. Lisa came skipping into the house and announced, 'Now I have three good friends and the best one of all is Jesus.'"

Little Lisa had indeed learned a wonderful truth. All of us need to discover it for our own lives. For every life needs the companionship of God. Let your church bring this hope and promise to you.

Virginia Beach Patrol Stalks "The Hot Spot"

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Reporter

Country and western music aficionados, replete with feathered cowboy hats and snakeskin boots, saunter onto Pacific Avenue from Country Comfort, a Virginia Beach bar, with the Marshall Tucker Band on their minds and a six-pack or two in their systems. Nearby, perched atop Harley-Davidson motorcycles, a band of bedraggled bikers in black t-shirts and combat helmets from the third reich sits in front of another Beach bar. The new wave crowd is in evidence as well, up the coast a bit at the "Crystal," where narrow-plastic framed sunglasses, skin-tight glittery pants, and outgrown crew cuts are all in vogue.

And during the summer at the end of the night, when the pubs close, police say all hell could break loose when these clashing personalities converge.

This corridor is known as "The hot spot" to the 25 Virginia Beach policemen who walk the beat there nightly. Located on 17th Street between Atlantic and Pacific Avenues, the hot spot is "where there's going to be some real trouble some day" according to one police officer.

So, they are there, the men in blue, making their presence known seven

School Board Approves Brickell's Cuts

Sun Staff Report

The Virginia Beach School Board slashed more than $1 million from its operating budget last week, keeping pace with cuts mandated by City Council. Under the revised budget, devised by School Superintendent E.E. Brickell, outlays were decreased for new buses, repairs to buildings and equipment were reduced, student activities were cut, and eight school nurses are to be removed from the city's payroll.

"We are robbing Peter to pay Paul," said school system public information officer Joe Lowenthal, explaining the budget-cutting process. "The problem is that none of the cuts appear to be severe right now. What they are, really, are hidden cuts. So, we don't paint a building or fix a roof for a few more years, we just put it off. I've got a feeling, though, it's going to come back and haunt us later."

The 11-member board, in a special session, cut the budget by $1,148,139, leaving a contingency fund of $55,563. The moves were necessitated when City Council allotted Virginia Beach City Public Schools $113,861,944, nearly $1 million short of the $114,830,944 school administration officials had sought.

"Before last year, City Council always gave the school board exactly

New Manager Keeps Personal, City Image Up Front

Sun Staff Report

They breed 'em polite down in Texas. "Yes, sir, yes sir," draws the men from Texas when asked about his first week on the job as Virginia Beach City Manager.

Public perception of himself, his job, and the city is the whole ball game to Thomas H. Muehlenbeck, the former deputy city manager in Austin, Texas. "It is extremely important to me how people view city government," he said. "People in a public office need to develop a sensitivity to the needs of the community, so we have to put forth our best and listen to what the people are telling us."

"I look at my role as city manager as one of listening and acting upon what I hear," Muehlenbeck said. "I must be a sponge and absorb every thing."

One facet of life in Virginia Beach Muehlenbeck has already assimilated is the high degree of public awareness and interest in municipal affairs. Those who constantly question the governance structure and call for change are good for city management, Muehlenbeck says. "We as city leaders learn to be flexible and our administrative skills become sharpened. This," he said, "makes for good government."

Muehlenbeck brings a strong record of "good government" to the $70,000 per year job, having served in similar positions in Texas, Kansas, and Georgia. "My experience will be a big help in this diverse community," he said. "I managed a suburban community near Atlanta, and I had a beach community in Galveston, Texas."

nights a week. Last Friday night, it was officers A. Sokolik and J. Inan who got the job of monitoring this particular location.

The 23 officers, the sergeant and the lieutenant who make up the division of the Virginia Beach Police Department's second precinct called the Beach Patrol can be found almost anywhere along the 30-block area of the city known as "the strip" a congested cluster of flashing neon signs, arcades, souvenir shops, hotels, restaurants, and taverns that cater to the town's two million annual tourists. The cost of the police project is estimated to fall between $150,000 and $250,000 according to Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles Wall.

Four canine teams stalk the boardwalk, German shepherds in tow, watching for surf Nazi's and other troublemakers. A two-man team is permanently assigned to the Poppermint Beach Club steps, where one can peer down into passing Atlantic Avenue autos and easily spot beer-drinking motorists. Officers C.W. Chambers and D.A. Brackins stood in front of one oceanfront hotel last Friday without their Smokey Bear hats on, searching for anything out of the ordinary. Ocean Eddie's is visited often by the police, who are usually responding toirate calls from neighboring hotel owners who do not appreciate Eddie's affinity for loud music. The loop at Rude's Inlet gets a lot of attention from the second precinct because it usually attracts a parking lot full of four-wheel drive vehicles and a passel of locals, who spend their nights with their radios cranking and their alcohol flowing freely.

But not last Friday. It was quiet last weekend. Veterans of the beat say last week's uncharacteristic calmness is not indicative of things to come this summer. "Just wait until school lets out in a few weeks," said Sokolik. "We'll probably be spread a little thin then," added Wall.

The Fourth of July is pointed to by most observers as when things will really get hot in Virginia Beach. In the meanwhile, the second precinct is averaging 350 arrests per weekend, including both physical arrests and issuing of citations. Offenses generally incorporate a host of misdemeanors such as drunk in public, impeding traffic, abusive language, and urinating in public, impeding traffic.

Beach Patrol Controls Behavior

Additionally, the Beach Patrol is responsible for citing traffic violations and recently wrote up nearly 1,000 tickets during the Memorial Day weekend.

Lt. Bill Barnes, head of the Beach Patrol unit, attributes the small number of arrests thus far this season to high visibility of his officers. "When you see a cop on every corner, you're less likely to do something wrong," he said. Still, "some people are just begging to get arrested," said Sokolik.

We are not going to tolerate people falling down drunk in Virginia Beach," said Barnes. "This is not acceptable behavior. Our job is to keep the society aware of certain limits of behavior to which we expect them to adhere."

Barnes explained that the vast majority of those arrested by his unit are local residents, aged 16 to 25, who "have turned raising hell into a fine art." Barnes, who works nine months of the year working with the city's SWAT teams, is on special assignment for the summer with the Beach Patrol. It is the second consecutive year he has requested the duty.

"It is important that we make an effort to control this behavior because our city depends on tourists," Barnes said. "If you come into town, and you're paying $90 to $100 a night for a hotel room, do you want a bunch of beer-drinking kids in the parking lot playing loud music all night long?"

Barnes says most of the people on the streets are "really nice," and even those who are arrested "are nice 99 percent of the time." In fact, Barnes said, he is not against beer-drinking. "The people just come out here to have a good time. It seems like the more they drink, the more activity their fun requires. The real problem is strictly biological. If you put liquid into a human being, he has to let it out."

The oceanfront merchants appreciate the police department's efforts. A hot dog stand owner cheerfully greets each officer who passes his place of business. An arcade operator tosses a friendly wave to a passing patrol car. Young women constantly stop the policemen, asking for directions or merely to chat. "The women feel secure talking to a man in uniform," says Barnes. "It's one of the fringe benefits of the job," adds Sokolik.

There are drawbacks in working from 7:30 p.m. to 3 a.m., Barnes says, chief of which are domestic problems.

"If the girls wouldn't talk to the guys," says Barnes, "there wouldn't be any problems."

"Multi-marriages are the norm rather than the exception in law enforcement," he said, explaining the strains of being a policeman.

Barnes feels that his and his men's presence along the troublesome oceanfront strip is vital to the community. "The only thing that will work is enforcement of the law," he said. "The social sciences are a farce. Do you know of anyone who has ever been rehabilitated? All we do by sending people to prison is breed a better brand of criminal."

So, Barnes continues to walk the beat, along with Sokolik, Iman, Chambers, Brackins and the others, doing his part to make Virginia Beach a nice place to visit despite the derelicts.

Virginia Beach City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck

New Manager Calls Position "Super"

Muehlenbeck expects to draw heavily on those experiences when tackling Virginia Beach's problems. He says he is too new to the job to adequately assess all of Virginia Beach's needs, but Muehlenbeck says he is familiar with at least two immediate concerns: instituting a water program for the city and developing a capital investment plan. No matter what the issues are, however, Muehlenbeck says he will always consult with a number of people before rendering any verdicts.

"I want to facilitate a team management process to hone in the various projects around the city," Muehlenbeck said. "I can't do it all myself. I have to pull in a lot of people."

Despite the headaches of managing a large city, Muehlenbeck is very excited about living and working in Virginia Beach. "This is a super opportunity for me," said Muehlenbeck, who will reside with his wife, Myrtle and two children in Great Neck. "My whole experience with the city, thus far, has been very, very positive. I am so impressed with the diversity of the city. You have the rural areas, the farms, the oceanfront area, the Navy, a fine municipal center, and super shopping facilities. I just could not be more happy."

Drug Experts See More Cooperation, Expect More Pot

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Victorian poet Ernest Christopher Dowson, 1867-1900, was a prodigat author who constantly championed the philosophy of "carpe diem," a Latin phrase meaning "to seize the day," or to live for the moment.

Dowson, actually only a minor poet who ultimately joined the ranks of other grander English Pre-Raphaelites such as Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Algernon Charles Swinburne, and William Morris, studied at Oxford, never finishing, but allegedly he read many Latin erotic poems and smoked hashish to heighten his artistic and creative abilities. It is also whispered that much of his money was spent on stimulants that gave him what is described as "transient poetic inspiration."

As with many Sybarites, Dowson lived a short life, marred with physical and mental problems. He continued to smoke hashish until his death in Paris, where on his deathbed, he read Charles Dickens and talked of the poems he planned to write.

Dowson was not the first person to die of decadent pursuits, nor will he be the last. It has never been suggested that hashish alone, or moral decay caused Dowson's or anybody's death. But it is asserted that the inhaling of any smoke, be it that of hashish, marijuana, or cigarettes, does cause eventual serious respiratory damage, heart complications, and brain cell burn-out.

For these reasons, several different organized factions have joined together to squeeze the flow of illicit drugs into the United States, particularly marijuana, which is smoked by people of all ages. Federal Drug enforcement agents, Coast Guard officers, Navy officials, Customs agents and local narcotics officers know that 95 percent of the marijuana entering this country comes from Columbia, South America.

It is also known that Florida, only hours away from Columbia's government supervised port loading docks, has been the drug smuggler's favorite dropoff point for years. That is until the Fed created a special vice presidential task force on drug abuse to exert heavy pressure in and around Florida, hoping to bar as much dope from coming into this country, at that location, as possible.

Also, the Posse Comitatus Act, which heretofore precluded the military from assisting local narcotics enforcement agents, has been amended to allow for such cooperation. Just recently a U.S. Navy Destroyer towed a shrimp boat laden with 20 tons of pot into a San Juan port, which constitutes the first law enforcement action ever engaged in by a Navy ship.

Well, as noted, extra pressure has been exerted around Florida, which has caused drug smugglers to steam farther up the east coast in search of safer dropoff points for their illegal cargo.

"With the pressures in Florida, caused by the vice-presidential task force, it means that more drug traffic is heading our way," said United States Coast Guard Commander Robert A. Basteck, Portsmouth.

The Coast Guard, recently handicapped by a cut in funds and fuel, will, however, "step-up efforts to get more intelligence on the ships moving up the coast, and do what patrolling we can for the rest of the summer," Basteck said.

But the Coast Guard alone can't stop the problem. Virginia Beach has approximately 38 miles of shoreline and a handful of narcotics officers to police it for incoming drug traffic. Beach drug enforcement officers rely on the cooperation between Federal drug enforcement officials, military officials and informants to combat the million dollar import-export drug industry.

Virginia Beach Police Sergeant J.G. Malesky, special investigative unit, currently has eight full-time detectives working on drug cases involving big time drug smugglers. About an equal number of men, under Sergeant Ernie Marrow, are responsible for patrolling the city's drug habits at the street level.

Last year, Virginia Beach nurses were calling out for more manpower to help stay the burgeoning illicit drug traffic in Virginia Beach. This year, in contrast, it appears that additional men are not the answer to winning the battle against the smugglers. Continued cooperation between drug enforcement officials is the key.

"We are planning on the continued cooperation among all federal agencies and local jurisdictions," Malesky said. "We will also continue to use the federal prosecutors in certain district cases, and continued use of Federal grand juries to gain more information where conspiracies are involved."

According to Malesky, the tonnage of marijuana entering Virginia Beach, compared to years past, is down.

"From what I hear, it's hard to find pot on the streets now in Virginia Beach," he said. "I mean, there are still amounts of it available, but the big tonnages of it just hasn't been here for the last three or four months. We're also seeing a decline in the amount of cocaine in Virginia Beach."

"The Navy is increasing its efforts in drug enforcement 200 percent," he added.

Malesky estimates that up to 200 sea vessels carrying marijuana roll into Virginia Beach waters yearly, and notes "we've only caught two so far this year." Drug financiers, it is said, only need to get 10 percent of their ships into port to turn a profit. And as security tightens in Florida ports, and airfields, Beach drug enforcement officials are anticipating more drug traffic.

"We will see an increase in the number of vessels looking to ports like ours to drop off the cargo," Malesky said. "I would think, because of the population density of Virginia Beach and the Tidewater area, that the smugglers would look to places on the Eastern Shore or the upper Chesapeake Bay."

Malesky said Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles R. Wall is 100 percent behind the city's efforts to curtail the drug traffic coming into Virginia Beach.

"The Chief is very interested in the situation," Malesky said. "He has given us his complete blessing as to how we're dealing with the drug problem in the city."

And, whereas last year the flow of drugs into Virginia Beach seemed by gushing, now it seems the tide is turning.

"I'm really encouraged with all the local agencies working together," Malesky said. "We've developed a philosophy that we don't care where the subject is located, air, land or sea, or in another city. We're going to arrest them!"

Under a new reorganizational plan, Virginia Beach's intelligence officers and drug enforcement agents report directly to Chief Wall.

"It makes it easier for me to stay informed as to what is actually taking place," Wall said. "Plus, it's the intelligence people and narcotics agents, in many instances, working on similar things. We've just cut down on the number of people the information gets filtered through before it reaches me."

Wall, in an almost Manichean tone, predicts that as the supply of marijuana dries up for consumers, the drug will still be obtainable, but for a higher price.

"It'll take much more than police action to stop the drug problem," Wall said. "It's going to take a change in people and their attitudes to eliminate the problem."

At the federal level, United States Drug Enforcement Resident in Charge George Nodel, Norfolk, said figures he has indicate that the seizures are up this year compared to last. He also expects to stay busier in the Tidewater area now that the screws have been tightened in Florida.

"I'm sure the crackdown in Florida will affect us," he said. "But most of the information we obtain is cleared through EPIC, our El Paso Information Center. If we get a tip that a drug smuggling ship is in route to Virginia Beach we contact EPIC, who in turn alerts customs, the military and the coast guard."

Notes report that last year in the local area, 45,000 pounds of marijuana was seized. Thus far, in the first six months of this year, he says, over 41,000 pounds have already been confiscated.

"We know the stuff it is coming up here, but it's just as hard as ever to find it," he said. "Even though they've cracked down in Florida, nobody north of Florida has been augmented with additional people to handle the smugglers as they head north."

Notel agrees with other drug enforcement officials that different drug enforcement agencies are working better together.

"The cooperation has improved considerably," he said. "As we see more smugglers, the cooperation will be greater and we'll add to our forces."

City Council's Structure

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

Virginia Beach's politicians, in general, are undecided about how best to structure the city's governing body. The make-up of City Council, presently comprised of 11 members, has come under fire from journalists and other observers off and on for years. Issues which consistently crop up involve the role of the mayor and the size of council. More recently, four outgoing Beach councilmen, in interviews published in last week's Virginia Beach Sun, have questioned the design of City Council.

The first topic, having to do with the mayor, was raised by Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., who feels the public has lost confidence in Virginia Beach's current mayor position because it is appointed by Council rather than elected by the people. He proposes the mayor be elected every four years and assume all the responsibilities handled by the city manager.

The question which must be raised, though, is over the necessity of a full-time mayor in Virginia Beach. The city, not yet 20 years old, may not now need a viable, publically elected, full-time chief executive.

Currently, those involved in Virginia Beach politics are, for the most part, in office because they are genuinely concerned with the welfare of their city. None are there because they need the job; all are professionals in their individual pursuits. By opening the mayoral position to the public at large, Council may find candidates seeking office with personal and financial reasons for running rather than for civic pride.

As for trimming the size of the city's legislative body, Council would do well to explore this avenue further. Most officials favoring a change in Council's make-up support a seven-member board. Such a number would, they say, allow for more responsive, responsible government, as it would do away with much of the factionalism and bickering over which many Council members complain. Rather than conflicting, Council could spend more time addressing issues of public concern such as water, land use planning, tourism, and city development.

Council has to figure out how to go about re-districting the city. Some members have called for keeping seven boroughs but allowing for an entirely at-large election. Others favor a merger of the

Good Job, School Board

By Mike Gooding,

Sun Staff Writer

The real world has come to Virginia Beach, finally. Oh, it took some time, and a lot of folks are having a hard time dealing with it now that it is here. But one element of the city that has looked the real world square in the eye without blinking is the Virginia Beach City Public Schools Administration.

The office of Superintendent E.E. Brickell has been comfortable for a long time. Time was when Brickell would recommend a budget for his schools, and City Council appropriated the money. Just like that.

But twice in the past two years, Council has awarded less money to the school system than what Brickell had requested. So, before the city's school board could approve a final budget, Brickell and his staff had to sharpen their pencils, make cuts where they thought they would be the least harmful, and draw up a new budget.

This year, Council allotted nearly $1 million less to schools than the amount Brickell and the board had hoped for. That made for a whole lot of cutting... and a whole lot of hard feelings.

Mothers do not want school nurses cut. Fathers do not want athletics cut. Teachers do not want their resources cut. Librarians do not want their resources cut. The list goes on.

Where does one begin? By being a realist. Brickell knows the economy is such that all factions of society must tighten their belts, including the school system. The next step is to insure that the basic goal of quality education remains intact. What occurs next, is a series of compromises. "Budget cuts can be as deep as the parameters within which one chooses to operate," Brickell says.

Obviously, Brickell and the school board wish to see Virginia Beach schools operate at their peak potential. They do not want to cut any important and vital programs. Yet cries of indifference and unfairness are routinely cast toward the administration and the school board because of the cuts the economy has forced they to make.

If nothing else, school officials should be commended for dealing with a major fiscal problem in an intelligent, responsible and realistic fashion.

Council Should Consider Paring

Blackwater and Pungo boroughs, while others still are satisfied with the current system. Perhaps the best of all worlds would be to divide the city into five equal-sized, equally-populated boroughs, conduct separate elections for each, and allow for two at-large seats. And while council is at it, it might take a long hard look at the mayor's position and determine exactly what responsibilities a Virginia Beach mayor should assume.

Given the national economic recession and the general gloom amongst builders and financial investors municipal leaders in this resort city need to realize that the decisions they make affect Virginia Beach for a long, long time. It is even more important, then, that Council become as efficient as it can be, which might mean paring itself down. As for the mayor's position, it ought to remain the same for now.

what it requested," said Lowenthal. "We never had any budget problems, but the city has its problems to deal with, so I can understand the cuts."

The board shaved $276,800 from the budget in approving the purchase of 27 diesel buses rather than 12 diesel and 20 gasoline vehicles.

The board approved $642,917 for repairs to buildings and grounds, a figure which represents a $25,000 reduction from the original budget. School administration officials say the negative impact of this cut could be increased costs such repairs will require in the future.

Likewise, repairs and replacement for certain equipment will eventually take place and a greater outlay of funds from future budgets will be required. Nonetheless, the board sliced $20,000 from this area of the budget, appropriating the school system with $306,241 for such improvements.

Allocation of funds to be used by the schools to support various student activities, organizations and assemblies were cut in half by the school board, which provided just $26,610 for this area. $51,610 had been allotted for student activities in the school system's first budget. "Decreased number of programs will be available to elementary students, and secondary student organizations will need to undertake fund-raising activities," was the official school system analysis of the impact of these cuts.

The board did not consider suggestions by the Virginia Beach Education Association to consider alternative financing for the school system. The association said it would not be employed next fall. Instead, the school board said it would not be used in support of nursing services. Six of the more experienced and higher salaried nurses were transferred to local operating budgets, while the eight least experienced nurses were notified that their contracts would not be renewed.

The nursing cuts recently sparked controversy when the VBSEA and some nurses charged the school system would be jeopardizing students' safety by reducing the number of full-time nurses. "We're going to continue fighting that one and try to get the nurses restored," vowed James B. Chapman, executive director of the VBSEA.

The school board reduced by $13,930 the money it provides for professional improvement of faculty. This area includes travel to workshops where staff members say they acquire "state of the art" information about new trends and ideas in education.

Some staff members will be unable to attend such functions, as a result of the cuts, unless they pay for them out of their own resources.

Six teaching positions were eliminated by the board, saving the school system an additional $79,200. Some fear overloading of students will occur in some classrooms, resulting in pupils receiving less individualized attention. The administration contends, however, that "accreditation will be met."

The school system will now pay only half the bill for teachers who take continuing education courses. Individuals will no longer receive reimbursement for courses which are self-selected, but only for those which are required by the school system. The net result may be that the school system will be unable to expect 25 percent of its teachers to hold master's degrees because it will be unable to offer financial assistance. This cut saved $36,850.

An additional $70,000 in savings was realized when the school board decreased amounts of materials and supplies it previously supplied for certain instructional activities. This item includes such supplies as paper, pencils and materials for art classes.

School personnel will no longer be able to choose from among hospitalization, disability and dental insurance. Previously, an employee could select between $700 in hospitalization, $250 in disability, or $250 in dental insurance. Following the board's cuts, only hospitalization will be available, a move administrators say will net $49,250 because an estimated 357 employees would choose not to partake in any form of insurance.

Teachers were granted a 10 percent salary increase, while classified employees received an 8.75 percent hike. Administrators were given a six percent raise.

Other areas of the school budget affected by the school board's actions last week include:

- Compensation for clerical services $7,500 was saved by reducing the extra secretarial assistance allocated to schools by 300 days.

- Instructional aide positions—$20,008 was saved in eliminating four instructional aide positions.

- Library books and supplies - The purchase of fewer current source and reading materials will net the school system another $55,000.

- Furniture and equipment - Some equipment desired for the instructional program will not be purchased, saving the school system $25,000.

- Assistant coordinator for adult education—No one will be hired to fill this position and the duties will be performed by other personnel. $24,829 will be saved by making this measure.

It Makes A Difference

Do's And Don'ts Of Fish Cleaning

Sun
FlowerBy Beach
Extension Agent
Doris Trent

"Now that you've caught that fish...What are you going to do with it?"

Warm weather brings saltwater fishing into full swing, as various species begin to arrive in Virginia Beach waters. Talk to most any fisherman and you'll find an enthusiastic sportsman who enjoys catching and eating his fresh tasty fish of the day.

Remember that the way a fish is handled from the time it is pulled from the water until it appears on the dinner table is important in preserving good taste and high quality. Ideally, a fish should be removed from the hook, or net and gilled, gutted and put on ice as soon as possible.

Here are some do's and don'ts of fish handling that affect its taste and storage life. By keeping these suggestions in mind, the fish-catcher quality that makes the eating as good as the fishing.

Do's

- Do gut, gill, and ice a fish as soon as possible.
- Do wash the gutted fish in lake water, creek water, saltwater, or tap water to remove as much slime, mud, and blood as possible before icing.

•Do wrap fish in damp paper or a damp cloth and store in a shady, well ventilated area if ice is not available. This will keep the flesh moist and cool.

•Do allow for proper bleeding by either removing the head or cutting the tail - and positioning the fish in the ice chest so the blood can drain out. Blood remaining in the tissue can speed up the rancidity that develops in fish in frozen storage.

•Do ice fish generously before transporting it home. Pack the belly cavity with ice and provide adequate ice between fish and the sides of the ice chest. Make a "false bottom" in the ice chest so your fish will not be floating in bloody, melted ice water when you get home.

Don'ts

•Don't let a fish flop around in the bottom of a boat or on a pier. This will bruise the flesh and speed up biochemical changes (rigor mortis) that may produce an undesirable taste.

•Don't keep fish on a crowded stringer and/or in shallow, muddy, warm water.

•Don't leave the gills and guts in a fish for very long after the fish has died.

Most marinas, fishing piers, state parks, etc. have facilities for cleaning fish, and unless you have adequate space at home, it is probably best to make use of these facilities.

If you would like to know more about handling, purchasing, or preparing seafood, call the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture. In the near future a new Seafood Tip Line will be available with interesting information on this subject. The Tip-line will cover market variety, safe handling techniques, and what to look for when purchasing fish or shellfish. There will be up to date cooking techniques. Sound interesting? Call 427-9533 for detailed information.

Calling Card Service Announced

Effective immediately Continental Telephone customers in the Princess Anne, Ships Corner and Pungo exchanges will be able to place telephone credit card calls without aid from an operator by using a new service called "Calling Card Service."

"Calling Card Service," a new time-saving customer convenience available through pushbutton phones, can be used by both business and residence customers in the 427, 468, 426 and 721 exchanges, according to Dennis O'Hearn, Continental's customer service manager.

The new Calling Card Service also will be available to users of public paystations in the Princess Anne, Ships Corner and Pungo exchanges.

"With Calling Card Service, customers still will dial zero-plus on long distance calls like they do today," O'Hearn said. "They will hear a tone and/or an announcement and the calling card number then can be dialed in. Billing will be handled quickly and automatically without any delay in reciting the number to an operator."

O'Hearn said Calling Card Service can be used with pushbutton phones only. Customers without pushbutton service can continue to place credit-card calls, but they still will require assistance from an operator.

The Continental System plans to introduce Calling Card Service in most operating areas nationwide during 1982. By mid 1983, Calling Card Service will be widely available nationwide.

The service was first tested in Milwaukee three years ago by the Bell System. Last year, limited introductions were held in Buffalo, N.Y., and Jacksonville, Florida, primarily for credit card calls from selected public paystations.

Harborfest Begins In Virginia Beach

Library SUNlines

By Assistant Library Director John Stewart

Harborfest begins in Virginia Beach. Even though Harborfest is a celebration of the maritime heritage of Hampton Roads and the Norfolk waterfront and even though the tall ships get no closer to Virginia Beach than Kingfisher Pier, there's a place in Virginia Beach that keeps the spirit of Harborfest alive throughout the year. That place is the Virginia Beach Public Library.

I am an unabashed Harborfest enthusiast, and I always make the public library a part of my Harborfest celebration. I recommend that you precede the annual event by checking out all the books you can find about sailing ships. When the tall ships sail into Norfolk, you can impress your friends by identifying the mizzens and jiggers and skysails and topgallants. Naming all the parts of a ship may not be as rich an experience as sailing that ship, but understanding the variety of sails and rigging will sharpen your awareness of these magnificent vessels. Two books which are particularly descriptive of sailing rigs are "Sailing Ships" by Bjorn Landstorm, and "The Tall Ships." The arrival of the barks "Eagle" and "Sagres," the clipper "Pride of Baltimore," the Grand Banks schooner "Bluenose II" and the Providence will make Harborfest '82 a particularly exciting experience for the sailing ship enthusiast.

Adults often assume that "youth books" will be of no value to them: Nothing is further from the truth. Sailing ship enthusiasts need only read Jan Adkin's "Wooden Ship" to realize that a book with a "Y" on the spine may be even more to the point than an "adult book." In describing wooden shipbuilding techniques and processes, "Y" books are for everyone, and many times their presentation is clearer than any other type of material in the library's collection.

For three days the Norfolk harbor will be full of masts, people and hubbub, but what about the remainder of the year? Once again, the public library offers the armchair sailor the opportunity to extend their Harborfest experience.

Herman Melville, Rudyard Kipling and Jack London have each written tales of the sea and the courageous men who wrested a living from it. While their books transcend their setting, each of these authors describes life at sea in a way that helps the reader acutely sense the experience.

Young readers are sure to enjoy the trilogy of novels set on the Hatteras Banks by Theodore Taylor. "Teetooncy and Ben O'Neal" and "The Odyssey of Ben O'Neal" describe the entwined lives of Ben O'Neal, an Outer Banks youth, and Teetooncy, the young girl who he rescues from the surf following a tragic shipwreck on the North Carolina shoals. Taylor's novels are full of adventure and suspense and are sensitive portraits of young people growing up in turn-of-the-century America.

Although Harborfest is primarily a celebration of the age of commercial sail, it inevitably turns my mind to the series of stories about Horatio Hornblower. The Hornblower series was written by C.S. Forester. Forester's tales of Hornblower's exploits are always exciting, often touching and consistently human stories that trace the career of Horatio Hornblower through the ranks of the British navy as he leads men and ships into combat against the Napoleonic French Navy. Hornblower is a man of courage, humor and compassion. His victories are marked by boldness, adept seamanship and an uncanny ability to predict the behavior of his enemies.

I recommend that you accompany the Hornblower novels with "Environments 8", a phonograph recording of the sounds of a 42' gaff rigged schooner under sail. If you prefer songs to the creak of a hull, try "Sea Chanties and Forecastle Songs at Mystic Seaport" or "Chesapeake Born" by Tom Wisner. These records and others are available at the Windsor Woods Branch Library. I think it is probably safe to say that no matter what interest Harborfest kindles in you, the public library is ready to help you grow with it. The public library is the perfect place to prepare for new experiences and to extend and expand what we do experience.

Have a great time at Harborfest, and see you afterwards in the library.

Rockin' The Beach

Sun Down

By LYNN SANDS

What has four legs, blonde hair, and stands six feet tall? That's right. It's the twin sisters lead vocalists for Trips. On Monday, the eve of June they had the crowd jumping at Peabody's on 21st street where it was New Wave Night. There was really nothing new wave about it, but the band was good and would have been better if the twins could sing a little louder. Formerly known as Affinity, Trips played some spirited rock and roll including recent hits by the Go-Go's and Pat Benatar. Tuesday night my date took me to the Roxx to start the June beach season. Some excellent songs were being performed by Changes such as Christopher Cross's "Sailing" and "Ride Like the Wind." The Roxx bacon cheeseburger was the size of a flattened softball. It was served with a slice of tomato that looked like a small frisbee. The meal was mouthwatering.

Worrell Brothers was the scene on Wednesday for the weekly SUNshine Girl-SUN Bum Contest. An enthusiastic, appreciative audience turned out to vote. Mike Arlo was emcee, and the manager of Snuff was one of the judges. This is quite an unusual event. It should be a source of controversy every Wednesday night this summer. We heard the all-you-can-eat bar-b-que ribs were incredible.

Thursday my date and I went to the Sberation Beach Inn for lunch. That shaves a few dollars off what would surely be an expensive dinner, and its adds a view of the boardwalk and ocean not normally served with an ordinary lunch. The broiled trout filet had a few bones, but it was pretty good for the price. The seafood salad could have been called tossed salad, and the turkey club sandwich was the best buy. The service was fine. Try the iced Sanka.

The Nerve was rocking Celebrations on Laskin Road Thursday night. We spotted a doctor and lawyer from Charlottesville dancing. The Nerve played their new, original hit, "Identity Crisis" along with "Get a Girl" and "That's Right." Somebody wearing an Arista records jacket was seen talking to the band's manager. This torrid trio could really make somebody a fortune.

We closed out the first week of June Sunday at Rogue's. It was beach music night, and the Catalinas were shaking some sandy tunes out of their shoes. They did Ray Parker's "The Other Wo-

Ali Here Saturday

Muhammad Ali will be appearing at the Hilltop North Shopping Center in Virginia Beach on Saturday, June 12 for autograph and picture taking sessions with the public. The occasion is the Grand Opening of Fotek Film Factory, a 30 minute, "mini-lab" processor of color film.

The former world's heavyweight champion is Fotek's largest individual stockholder and national spokesperson. According to Dan Hill, President of the Fotek Film Factory stores, the Hilltop opening will be followed by new mini-labs in Military Circle and Williamsburg in July, with national expansion to follow.

Ali is scheduled to appear at Hilltop shortly after lunch for the ceremonies. He will sign autographs and pose for pictures with the public. As part of the opening promotion, Fotek will process a color roll of film for a 50 percent discount if Ali's photo is on it. Parents will also be able to pose their children in boxing gloves with the champ. Helium balloons, prize drawings and refreshments will be on hand all day.

Richard Hirschfeld, who owns a home in Virginia Beach is Ali's attorney and is a partner in a law firm, with offices in Washington, D.C. and California.

Wesleyan Orchestra Workshop Headed By Lewsader

The guest conductor for the twelfth annual Virginia Wesleyan College Orchestra Workshop and the addition of a new program within the Workshop were announced this week by College President Lambuth M. Clarke.

Donald Lewsader, musical director and conductor of the Livonia Youth Symphony Society in the Detroit area, will serve as guest conductor for the Orchestra Workshop August 8 through 14.

The new feature of this summer's Workshop is the Young Pianists Program, which is designed for advanced high school piano students who will study under Stefan Bardas, assistant-in-residence at New Mexico State University. Mr. Bardas has performed all of the major keyboard literature, including the 32

Beethoven Sonatas, which he performed at Virginia Wesleyan in July 1981, during the week-long Beethoven Sonata Festival. He will be repeating this feat in Richmond in June.

State University. Mr. Bardas has performed all of the major keyboard literature, including the 32 Beethoven Sonatas, which he performed at Virginia Wesleyan in July 1981, during the week-long Beethoven Sonata Festival. He will be repeating this feat in Richmond in June.

In addition to private lessons with Bardas, piano students may perform in chamber ensembles with orchestral instrumentalists, and, if selected, perform a concerto movement with the Workshop Orchestra.

The Orchestra Workshop, which hosted more than 80 young musicians last summer, is open to students in grades seven through twelve (others by special permission). Participants have an opportunity for advanced, concentrated study with outstanding teachers in string, woodwind, brass, and perstruction instruments. Instruction is carried on at the personal, as well as orchestral and class levels.

There are still a few openings remaining for this summer's Workshop. For further information, call Dr. R. David Clayton, VWC associate professor, 461-3232.

Mask of the Soul

The face is the mask of the soul. It can convey a peace we do not feel, a strength we do not possess, a courage we hope for but haven't gained. With apparent concern for the dignity and privacy of the individual God permits us to shield our inner self from the probing eyes of others.

But a calm face doesn't still the soul's turmoil or satisfy its need. Spiritual peace, spiritual nourishment must come from God.

The millions who come to church each week to worship do not look any different from their neighbors. But they are seeking earnestly to fill an emptiness which we all feel, yet hide from one another.

Why not be one of them... one of us who worship regularly each week?

Guidelines Set For Summer School

Summer school will be operated this summer by Virginia Beach Public Schools much as it was last summer. No transportation will be provided; that was cut last year in the deep budget cuts, and it was not reinstated this year. No further cuts were made in the summer school program by the School Board this year.

Some fees will be slightly higher, but some fees have been cut somewhat.

On the secondary level, senior high school students will attend the senior high summer school center which serves the junior high attendance zone in which they live. The only exception is those seniors who need two credits to graduate in August; they will attend summer school at Kempsville High School, regardless of where they live in the city.

All junior high summer school classes will be held at Plaza Junior High School only.

First Colonial and Kempsville high schools will serve as the two senior high summer school centers. Attending First Colonial will be those living in the Lynnhaven Junior High attendance zone, the Virginia Beach Junior High attendance zone, the Plaza Junior High attendance zone (except Windsor Woods and Windsor Oaks areas), the Princess Anne Junior High attendance zone (those students living in the Princess Anne Plaza housing area and east of Holland Road only), the Independence Junior attendance zone (areas north of Virginia Beach Boulevard only), and the Bayside Junior High attendance zone (areas east of Northampton Boulevard only).

Attending summer school at Kempsville High will be those senior high students living in the entire Brandon Junior attendance zone, the entire Kempsville Junior attendance zone, the Bayside Junior attendance zone (except the area east of Northampton Boulevard), the Princess Anne Junior attendance zone (except those living in the Princess Anne Plaza housing area and east of Holland Road), Plaza Junior attendance zone (those living in Windsor Woods and Windsor Oaks areas only), and the Independence Junior attendance zone (areas south of Virginia Beach Boulevard only).

Registration Dates

Registration will be held at the summer school location on Wednesday, June 16, and Thursday, June 17, for the first repeat course session and for the new course session. Classes begin on Monday, June 21, at 7:30 a.m. Classes will end each school day at noon.

The first repeat course session ends on Thursday, July 15, and registration and the first day of classes for the second repeat course session will be held on Friday, July 16. That session, as well as the new course session, ends on Tuesday, August 10.

Tuition and fees must be paid at the time of registration. For Virginia Beach residents, new courses will cost $56; repeat courses, $32. For non-residents, new courses will be $100; for repeat courses, $50.

For the first time, high school students will be able to rent textbooks; last year, only junior high students were included in the rental plan. Text rental and/or instruction fees range from $1 to $5, depending on the course taken and whether the subject is taken as a new or repeat course. Most subjects taught during the regular school year will be taught in summer school, depending on the number of students enrolled.

Beginner and intermediate summer band classes will be offered for six weeks, beginning on June 22, between 8 a.m. and noon, depending on the class. Classes will be held at Green Run and Princess Anne high schools, and at Independence, Kempsville, Brandon, Lynnhaven, and Princess Anne junior highs. The fee has been reduced to $20. Rising 6th and 7th graders may also enroll in beginning band classes at the same fee at one of the summer band centers.

Classes in intensive English for non-native speakers will be offered at Pembroke Meadows Elementary School for senior high, junior high, and elementary students; the fee is $25. Secondary school special education courses will also be offered at a fee of $32. New this year are the grade 7 basic (math and reading) skills courses to be taught at Plaza Junior High School; the fee is $32 per class.

On the elementary school level, summer school classes will be held from Tuesday, June 29, through Tuesday, July 27. Registration will be held on Wednesday, June 16, and Thursday, June 17, at the individual summer school centers, from 9 a.m. to noon both days. Tuition must be paid at the time of registration. No transportation will be provided.

Basic reading, writing, grammar, and math classes will be taught at Fairfield, Green Run, Pembroke Meadows, and Lankhorn Park elementary schools. The fee for each class is $25. The basic classes are divided into three sections: primary reading is for grades 1 and 2; math and reading classes, for grades 3-6; and basic writing and grammar, for grades 5 and 6.

Courses in art, field biology, special education, and speech will be offered at Fairfield and Lankhorn Park elementary schools; the fee for art and field biology is $65. Special education courses in math, reading, and speech therapy are each $25. Art courses are offered in two sections: one for grades 1-3; the other, for grades 4-7. Field biology classes are for students in grades 4 and 5.

A summer academy for identified academically gifted secondary students will be offered at the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and talented during the summer. Courses will be taught in television production, professional apprenticeship, and computer programming. The fee for each of those classes is $45.

Green Run Students Take First

A team of five Green Run High School history students recently won a first-place award at the annual State History Day competition at Ferrum College. The event was sponsored by the Virginia Society of History Teachers.

The five—Chris Hall, Lori Jadinia, David Jahn, Dwayne Butler and Bernice Beesvieve—won first place with their media presentation on "The Growth of a Town." They have been invited to participate in the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland on June 10-12.

Also, Michael Cherblin, another Green Run High history student, won a second-place award at the meet with his speech on "Child Labor Laws."

All six are students of history teacher Helen Hill.

Fahey Wins Distinguished Award

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

Virginia Beach resident and school board member John A. Fahey was recently heralded as an outstanding educator by the Old Dominion University Alumni office. At recently held commencement exercises, Fahey won the Alan Rufus Tonelson Distinguished faculty Award, his third ODU award thus far, in recognition of outstanding contributions to the intellectual development of ODU in the field of teaching.

For Fahey, such testimonials are nothing new. In years past he has been recognized with such honors as the Delta Phi Omega Distinguished Faculty Award, the Outstanding Educator of America Award, and the Robert L. Stern Award for Outstanding Teaching. "Everytime I get an award I just turn it on and work harder," the associate professor of Russian said. "I don't rest on my laurels."

In order to win the coveted award, instructors must receive written testimonials from students, former students and colleagues. What is clear from reading through these letters is that John Fahey is an innovative and admired instructor.

"Mr. Fahey is by far the finest example of teaching excellence," wrote on current student. "His thorough knowledge of Russian and genuine interest in his students make him a sincere and unique person. Furthermore, he has helped me get my life in order and has put me on the road to success."

Another student expressed admiration for Fahey because of his fairness. "Students must earn their grades, and A's don't come easily," reads the letter. "There have been times when I disagreed with Mr. Fahey, thinking that perhaps he expected too much. I've come to realize, however, that I was wrong; he does not expect too much. Rather, his aim is to encourage his students to study, put forth some effort, and to think."

"I feel very fortunate to have been able to study under Mr. Fahey. He epitomizes fine teaching," the letter concluded.

An ODU alumni called Fahey "An educator in the purest sense of the term; this is an art long lost to most college professors. He continually displays a willingness to share his wealth of accumulated knowledge. But he will not give it to you, you must work for it. It is in this area, as a motivator, where Mr. Fahey transcends his colleagues."

His peers are inspired by Fahey as well. John F. Holley, chairman of the foreign language department at ODU, says that Fahey stands alone in teaching excellence. "The more I see and learn about John's teaching methods, the more convinced I become that he is very probably the best in his field and among the top teachers in higher education today."

Of faculty awards, is presented each year by an outstanding faculty member of the ODU Alumni Association. The award, which includes a plaque and a $1,500 prize, is named after Alan Rufus Tonelson, one of the first students to attend the institution when it was known as the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary.

There is no secret to Fahey's classroom success. It all stems from motivation, he says. "You make it fun," he said. "I show the students a lot of self-satisfaction and convince them the worth of what they are studying."

And in recessionary times such as these, one may question the value of a degree in Russian. Fahey has a quick response. "With the world situation being what it is, Russia being the number one threat to world peace, we really need to understand their language so we can talk and understand each other," he said. Fahey has championed the cause of making Russian into viable academic discipline. When he joined the faculty at ODU as a temporary replacement in 1962, there were just two courses in Russian taught there. Now, due in part to Fahey's efforts, ODU offers a fully-accredited baccalaureate program in the field.

Still, Fahey is disappointed that more students do not study Russian. "Sometimes, people think they are going to be indoctrinated into Communism if they study Russian," said the former U.S. Navy commander. Fahey says in the state of Virginia students of Russian are dwarfed in comparison to those of romantic languages. Fahey estimates there are more than 100,000 students in French and Spanish programs and another 20,000 studying German. Russian students, Fahey says, represent only a fraction of those figures, numbering in the hundreds.

In trying to attract more scholars to his field, Fahey organizes trips to the Soviet Union every year for his students. Fahey was, in fact, in Russia at the time of the announcement of his receipt of the Tonelson award.

In the ten years he has made the annual pilgrimages to the U.S.S.R. Fahey has made a number of observations about life there. "Russian people really want to be just like us," he said. "They study America 10 times more than we study Russia. English is the most popular language in schools there, and all the kids study Shakespeare and Mark Twain."

The pace of life is much slower in Russia, Fahey says because there is not an intense interest in governmental and world affairs amongst the citizens. "The average man doesn't get involved in politics at all," he said. "He's into playing sports, playing dominoes, going to work, and finding food every day because they have no refrigeration there. He is caught up in the routine of daily life."

Fahey says he and his students have encountered little or no interference from Russian officials, and, in fact, there is a lot of freedom in the Soviet Union "if you learn to play by their rules."

"There's not a guard on every street corner with a sub-machine gun, and we've never found any bugs in our hotel rooms."

Asked his most vivid memory of Russia, Fahey does not hesitate. "It was the time I saw 200 Russians lined up to buy Pepsi Cola. The soft drinks there are not too good," he said.

In addition to the school board, Fahey is active in other Tidewater civic projects as well. He is a member of the Hampton Roads Educational Telecommunications Association Board of Directors, and he has served as director and treasurer of the Virginia Beach Rotarist Club. He was named Beach Rotarist of the Year 1979-1980, and later this month he will become a "Paul Harris Fellow," the highest distinction bestowed by Rotary International. He and his wife Barbara live in the Brittany Estates section of Virginia Beach.

Carlson Wins Honors

This year's recipient of the Samuel Nelson Gray Distinguished Teaching Award at Virginia Wesleyan College is Dr. Edmund D. Carlson, associate professor of political science who came to the college in 1974.

Commenting on the award announced at Commencement Saturday (May 15), President Lambert M. Clarke says, "since joining Virginia Wesleyan's faculty Dr. Carlson has excelled as a classroom teacher and as a campus citizen. The endowment for this award was established to recognize scholars of Dr. Carlson's caliber."

A student panel of 12 members selected Dr. Carlson for this award from a list of nominees submitted by faculty, students, and staff.

Carlson, who received his B.A. from the University of Washington and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Claremont Graduate School, has frequently served as an instructor at the Armed Forces Staff College. Last summer he was a participant in the Kenyon College Summer Institute on Teaching at Gambier, Ohio, with support from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH).

In 1978-79 Carlson was named an NEH Fellow, one of 145 college and university teachers selected from 678 eligible applicants. He received a year's leave of absence from Wesleyan to study at Princeton University for the 1978-79 academic year. The residence fellowship program provided recipients with an award of up to $14,500 for the nine months.

Carlson, a native of Seattle, Washington, lives in Virginia Beach with his wife, Roseann, who teaches geology at the college. They have two children, Randy, seven years old, and Rachel, who is six.

In addition to teaching, Carlson enjoys photography and bicycling. In fact, for the past two years students have become accustomed to seeing Dr. Carlson bicycling to and from school each day—a round trip of 12 miles from his home in Thalia Manor.

Congratulating Dr. Edmund A. Carlson is Virginia Wesleyan President Lambert M. Clarke. Looking on is Dean William M. Wilson.

Munden Park Dedication Scheduled

Munden Point Park will be formally dedicated on Friday, June 11, at 1 p.m. The 100 acre park will be the most recent large city park addition in Virginia Beach. Located on Pefley Lane, off Princess Anne Road, one side of the park borders the Intercoastal Waterway.

Many recreational opportunities abound at Munden Point Park. Boat launchings are available for bass fishing. Canoe and paddle boats will also be available for rental on the inland lake. Large and small picnic shelters overlook the water. Ball fields, playground equipment, and open fields give the kids plenty of things to do. Munden Point Park will also have a day camp in operation this summer. A barn originally on the property has been restored and will be used as an activity center. To complete the atmosphere of the park, a special windmill and gardens have been created by the parks maintenance staff.

The public is invited to attend the opening of this fine new facility.

For further information, call 467-2027.

Virginia Beach City Council. Special mention was made of Dr. Holland's extraordinary efforts to build a consensus among members of Council to restore money to the 1982-83 School Board budget.

Mrs. Dolores Delaney, who is the 1981-82 President of the Council of Parent Teacher associations, was cited for her energetic support of the school system and outstanding work in drug abuse programs for parents in the community.

Beach Man Slashed

Police have arrested a Norfolk General Hospital nurse on charges that she broke into a Virginia Beach man's home, held him at gunpoint and then slashed him on the chest, neck and arms with a knife. The nurse, identified by police as Dianna Gilchrist, 31, has been charged with malicious assault, burglary, robbery, and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. Joseph B. McCarthy, Jr., a mechanic, was the victim in the incident, suffering lacerations which required 84 stitches to close.

Arson Suspected

An investigation has uncovered evidence of arson and burglary following a house fire in which a man died last month. Robert Wayne Leggett, 23, was found dead in a bedroom of the house in the 4800 block of Potomac Avenue, police said. His address was listed as the 400 block of Patton Lane. Police were uncertain why he was in the Potomac Avenue house at the time of the fire, which was confined to a closet in the bedroom.

Woman Is Raped

A 21 year-old woman was abducted at knifepoint when she stopped at a 24-hour bank machine late one night recently. She was forced to drive to Norfolk, where she was raped, police said.

The woman was assaulted at the Bank of Virginia in Malibu about 1 a.m. Following the incident, the woman was told to return to Malibu where the assailant fled.

Authorities are looking for a suspect described as a stocky black man in his mid-20's with close-cropped hair.

Cop in a Crash

Virginia Beach patrolman Frank Lutich of the second precinct recently suffered a broken cheek and nose and facial cuts when his patrol car apparently ran a red light and collided with another vehicle at the intersection of 22nd and Cypress Avenue. The officer was traveling west shortly after 8 a.m. when he collided with a car driven by Thomas Crabbs. Witnesses said that neither the emergency lights nor the siren of the patrol car were on.

Ali and Arabs

Sheikh Tarek al-Fassi, a wealthy teenage member of the Saudi Arabian royal family, has joined forces with retired heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali in partnership of the Pavilion Towers Hotel. It is uncertain how much money has been invested by either party, but the two are said to be the majority stock-holders in the project.

Canada's Beach Party

State Senator A. Joe Canada has asked his 39 fellow lawmakers in Richmond to the beach for a weekend of fun June 11 and 12.

"Hopefully, we will continue a nice relationship between the city and the senate," Canada said. "We might even help the city a bit." Canada said he was uncertain which state senators would attend and what, if any, business matters will be undertaken. "If we get any work done, so much the better," he said. Canada said the primary purpose for the weekend was merely for relaxation and socializing.

Lee Cahill City Council Report

Federal Programs To Be Studied

Virginia Beach City Council is considering a regional panel to study the impact of state and federal mandated programs on city governments.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley Monday afternoon asked that the item be placed on the agenda in answer to a request by the City of Portsmouth that Virginia Beach along with Chesapeake, Hampton, Norfolk, Newport News, Suffolk, and Portsmouth create a committee similar to one formed in Portsmouth to study the problems. One member of each committee would serve on the regional panel and become an advocacy group representing Southeastern Virginia.

Portsmouth approved a resolution forming the citizens committee on May 25. The committee would document the effect that State and Federal mandates have upon both the municipal budget and upon the tax burden of the taxpayer, advise Council on legislation which the city may desire to request to the General Assembly to adopt to broaden the city's ability to develop alternate sources of revenues, and to promote awareness among the members of the general public of the problems identified.

Council has often discussed problems of financing programs mandated by the State and Federal governments without providing funds.

Transit Changes Net City $180,000

Two changes in the Tidewater Regional Transit system in Virginia Beach will save the city $178,000 without a reduction in service.

The savings will be realized by substituting smaller vehicles on the line.

One change will be on Route 20 on Virginia

Beach Boulevard from the Ocean Front to Norfolk. The regular bus will stop at 19th street where service will be picked up by a leased van. This will save $78,000, and will go into effect on July 1.

The second will be Route 26, on Independence Boulevard. A 20-passenger Mercedes van will be leased. The service will start in October and will save $100,000.

City Planner Jack Whitney, reporting on the changes in the informal session of Council, said that there will be no loss in service, and the buses will be marked the same.

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that the city thought it was going to lose service and that the changes are a good compromise.

A new Virginia Beach ordinance makes it unlawful to obstruct or interfere with the operation of a school bus.

City Council Monday afternoon approved the ordinance to address a problem created recently when the mother of a student forced herself and her son onto a bus the child was not assigned to and refused to leave or let the bus proceed until her child was permitted to ride on that bus.

Since no section of the code specifically dealt with that problem, the ordinance was prepared. Any violation will be a Class I misdemeanor.

Manager Still Smiles

Virginia Beach's new city manager, Thomas H. Muehlenbeck, got through his first regular Council session Monday afternoon still smiling.

Only a few references were made to his newness. Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. formally welcomed him to the Council's formal session.

At the informal session McCoy complained that City Council was getting a "black eye" over the auto taxes. He said that the personnel at the Commissioner of the Revenue office "shouldn't be telling the citizens it's all our fault."

"I thought that's what City Council was for," said Councilman John A. Baum, adding, "Now they have Tom to blame for it."

Toward the end of the formal session, Baum said that "After hearing all this, he'll call his wife and say, 'Take the house off the market.'"

Muehlenbeck To Speak

Thomas Muehlenbeck, the newly-arrived Virginia Beach City Manager, will be the special guest speaker at the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce's "Beach Briefs" program on Tuesday, June 15.

Muehlenbeck comes to Virginia Beach from the post of deputy city manager in Austin, Texas. He has served in a number of city managerial posts in the Southeast, including Valdosta and College Park, Georgia, and Galveston, Texas.

The Chamber meeting will be his first address to the business community since he assumed his new post on June 1.

The meeting will be held at Valle's Restaurant, Independence and Virginia Beach Boulevards, beginning at 7:45 a.m. Advance tickets are required, and may be purchased at the Chamber office, 4512 Virginia Beach Boulevard. For additional information, 490-1221.

Precinct Lines Changes Okayed

Changes in election district precinct lines were approved Monday afternoon by Virginia Beach City Council. The changes:

Remove Lake Shores Subdivision from the Chesapeake Beach Voting Precinct to the Lake Smith Voting precinct. The residents will vote at Shelton Park School to make their polling place closer to their area.

Move the polling place of the Ocean Park Voting Precinct from Ocean Park Fire Station to the Bayside Christian Church on Greenwell Road because of the hazards of driving and parking on Shore Drive while voting.

Move the Oceana subdivision from Seatack Voting Precinct to form a new precinct with the Oceana Naval Air Station. The people in Oceana felt their identity had been taken away by asking them to vote at Seatack Elementary School. They will vote at the Knights of Columbus Hall on First Colonial Road.

Four areas were changed to conform to the House of Delegates lines.

Low Bid Is Rejected

Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon rejected all bids for the Trolley Terminal Project ordering the city staff to readvertise for bids.

Action followed a recommendation by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck to award the contract to the second low bidder, Lockwood Buildings, Inc. for $186,647 as the "most responsible low bidder."

The low bidder, of 15, was Flann Construction Corporation Inc. for $173,056. At least half the bids were below the engineers' estimate of $208,000.

The project included the construction of a 40 by 151-foot metal building to provide storage for four trolley buses, office space for the supervisor, an assembly area for drivers and a storage area for supplies.

In other actions, Council:

Awarded the contract for the Lakeville Estates Sewage Pump Station renovations projects to Luke Construction Company, Inc., for $66,700, the low bid of four. The engineers' estimate was $61,900.

Awarded the contract for the Aragona-Witchwood Pumping Station Replacement Project to Crowder Contracting Company, Inc. for $153,300, the low bid of six. The engineers' estimate was $170,000.

Solution Sought

With the opening of the office park at Pembroke, Virginia Beach City Council is looking for some solution to the traffic problem at the Virginia Beach Boulevard-Independence Boulevard intersection.

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said he and James Echols, executive director of Tidewater Regional Transit, met last week to discuss the problem. McCoy said he did not see how the city could afford to put "flyovers" over the Toll Road. He told Council at an informal session Monday afternoon that between 4 and 6 p.m. it's impossible to get across Virginia Beach Boulevard. He said trans from outlying parking lots were discussed.

McCoy said he wanted the Planning Department and the Department of Economic Development to pursue the matter.

Beach Borough Seeks Lifeguards

The City of Virginia Beach will request bids to provide a lifeguard and beach equipment rental services for the Virginia Beach Borough.

City Council Monday afternoon approved the resolution ordering bids to be prepared by a vote of 10-0. Councilman W. H.

Kitchin III was absent.

Two companies, North Beach Service Inc. headed by W. H. Kitchin Jr., the councilman's father, and Ocean Rescue Inc., headed by Graham (Dusty) Hinnant, have had exclusive control of the concessions for 35 years.

Correction

Virginia Beach Pungo Borough Councilwoman Barbara Henley is indeed, in favor of a central public library in Virginia Beach.

In the May 26 issue of The Virginia Beach Sun, it was erroneously reported that she was against the project.

Children Get Involved

The Adopt-A-Grandparent Plan

For eight months some patients of Lynn Shores Manor and people from the Virginia Beach community have been participating in an Adopt-A-Grandparent Program coordinated by Tidewater Community College student, Phyl Gordon.

Where the concept of Adopt-A-Grandparent is not new, the structure is new. In the past interested persons contacted the home while under the present system, prospective adoptors are activity recruited through news articles and personal contact. Private families and groups such as Girl Scouts, garden clubs, church, teenage clubs, school classes and organizations have responded to this community service project.

The first group of patients indicated an interest in the program after an article appeared in the facility newsletter. Since then families have requested a patients participation and also recommendations have come from the health care team. However, the final decision to become an "adoptee" is made by the patient. Adoptors and adoptees are matched after each is interviewed to determine areas of common interest.

The program is meeting many needs of patients by providing an opportunity for friendships to grow, narrowing the generation gap. One grandparent knitted stocking caps for each girl in her adopted Brownie troop. Another adoptee's daughter baked brownies for a party when the adoptors visited. Adoptees have been made honorary members of troops and clubs. Adopt-ors have planned outings for their adoptees, special birthday parties, taken adoptees to Parent-Daughter Banquet and made special gifts such as creative quilts.

Along with the individual interaction of adoptors and adoptees, Phyl has incorporated the Adopt-A-Grandparent program into some activities at the home.

Recently an indoor picnic was planned for everyone in the program. The adoptors brought picnic dinners and the grandparents presented a play for entertainment. During this activity certificates were distributed to all adoptors in honor of National Volunteer Week.

Since the formal program began in September 1981, approximately 950 volunteer hours have been lovingly given.

Grandmother Beanie Price delights her adopted Granddaughters Becky Schroder, Latrena Owens and Melhies Ethridge from Brownie Troop 884 with a story.

Grandmother Alice Tynes seems to be having a grinning contest with adopted Granddaughters Reina Shood, Chasmon Holly, Kaitlyn Dryton and Nickie Gally from Junior Troop 882.

Ruth Cook, adopted Grandmother of Brownie Troop 383, responds to the warmth of smiles from Granddaughters Altona Boer and Katie Chavani.

Legal Aides Are Essential

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Reporter

"Just a secretary."
When Michele Pore hears those words ascribed to herself, she says she "could just scream."

This is because in her job as a legal secretary at the offices of Greg D. McCormick and Joan W. Gibson in Virginia Beach, Pore performs many more duties than typing letters and making coffee. She is a professional legal secretary and a founding member of the 10 year-old Virginia Beach Legal Secretaries Association. "We are absolutely essential to the legal profession," Pore said. "We fill a very distinct need."

It all began in 1972, when Pore and two co-workers in an oceanfront law office decided it was time to meet the secretaries in the other beach law offices with whom they had spoken on the telephone many times.

"There were about 50 girls working at various oceanfront law firms, and we dealt with each other on a daily basis, but we had never seen each other," said Pore. "We realized that we needed to consolidate, get together and share ideas."

In September of that year, the first meeting took place at Rogers and was attended by 10 secretaries. One of the original members had received a degree in Legal Secretarial Science from Northern Virginia Community College, and she was able to impart much knowledge to the others about how to form a local chapter of the Virginia Association of Legal Secretaries.

Sun Marketing Director Named

Hanes Byerly, president of Byerly Publications and publisher of the Virginia Beach Sun, has announced plans for a marketing campaign designed to significantly increase the paper's circulation "by stimulating reader and advertiser interest through the implementation of new and innovative marketing concepts.

"By implementing new concepts that will extend our service to the community we will provide our advertisers and general readership with a value-packed, highly informative and contemporary community newspaper," Byerly says.

Byerly has selected Mr. Richard W. Coard Sr. to spearhead the project, which will be called "Sunshine Campaign". Coard has a staff of six account executives, who he says have been "specially trained for this project.

Byerly added that "because we are already a viable voice in this community, we are always looking for ways to better serve. To this end, I have approved Mr. Coard's initial marketing campaign, appropriately named "Sunshine Campaign," which will be implemented gradually over the next three months to our readership and the proud business community to

A spokesman for the Sun advised that several of the projects will be seen in coming editions starting later this month.

Legal Secretaries

Pore and the other two founders attended a meeting of the Norfolk-Portsmouth chapter and found that membership there would be unsuitable. "There were great differences other than geographical between the two localities and there was a definite need to form a Virginia Beach chapter," said Pore. "They practice a completely different brand of law in Norfolk."

National association bi-laws stipulate that no two chapters can exist within a 35-mile radius, so special permission was needed to form a chapter at the beach. When exception was made to the rule and the beach was awarded a chapter, Pore was elected president, a post she relinquished after the first year but reassumed in 1980. She stepped down as president last week and became governor of the chapter.

"It was real tough going in the early days," Pore recalled, "because a lot of the bosses were afraid that we were union. I got a lot of doors slammed in my face."

Pore emphasizes that her organization is "non-union, non-partisan, non-secretarial, and non-profit."

Today, there are 21 members in the Virginia Beach chapter. Membership in a local chapter automatically makes one a member in state and national associations of legal secretaries. There are 730 active local chapters with 24,000 members nationwide. The national association was formed in Long Beach, California in 1929 when Eula Mae Smith, an inexperienced legal secretary, was informed by a deputy clerk of the court that she didn't appear to have the necessary knowledge to file legal documents. She followed through on the suggestion of the clerk and contacted five other legal secretaries to discuss forming an association. With the encouragement and support of their employers, the first legal secretaries group was born.

In Virginia, an association was chartered in 1961 with four local chapters in Richmond, Fredericksburg, Arlington, and Newport News-Hampton. There are now 19 chapters in the state.

Pore began her career twenty years ago as secretary to a prosecuting attorney in Colorado, having no idea that her job description would entail anything more than traditional secretarial duties. She soon learned differently.

"The first week on the job we had an indecent exposure case and we really wanted this man bad," Pore said. "We missed the conviction on the man, which instilled in me a real sense of purpose. From that day on, I was extremely prosecution-minded."

Pore explained that her role as a legal secretary calls for her to do lengthy research and to do all the leg-work in preparing cases for her boss the lawyer. "Basically, the attorney gives me a file and tells me to run with it," Pore said. "I enjoy giving my finished product to a lawyer, sending him off to court and having him come back and say, 'Boy, did I look good in court today.'"

Between Colorado and Virginia Beach, however, Pore paid her dues as a legal secretary in a public defender's office in Ocean View. "That's the gut work in law," Pore said. "I had a hard time working with those kinds of cases," because often, she says, her attorney was defending seemingly guilty clients. "But that is our situation. We have to provide equal representation for everyone under the law because, after all, you are supposed to remain innocent until you're proven guilty."

Such phrases are not clichés to Pore. She really means that she says. For instance, Pore harbors no illusions that she could get away with breaking the law merely because she works within its parameters. "If you're going to work in the law, you can't be above it," Pore said. Further, Pore is a strong believer in the group's motto, "Professionalism plus education equals excellence," and she repeats it often to all within carshot.

As with any profession, though, Pore says being a legal secretary has its drawbacks. "There's an awful lot of pressure here, especially when you play God with someone's life," Pore said. "You rarely see a happy person in a lawyer's office. They all come there because they have a problem. And it is the secretary who always catches the brunt of it."

The hours are sometimes rather long for a legal secretary according to Pore. "If you're going to work in law, you've got to accept the fact that there's a lot of overtime work involved," she said. "People call up, they want a divorce right away. We get people who want a will on the spot. I get called in at all hours by the court, by the client and by my boss."

"If you're going to be in law, you can't be above it. Our motto is 'Professionalism plus education equals excellence.'" - Michele Pore

Finally, Pore says, some clients are unreasonable in their expectations. "People want to be told what they want to hear," she said. "They want solid guarantees that they will win the case. It's just like if they went to a doctor, had their tonsils taken out and then demand from the doctor that they will be able to sing. Sometimes, they are a little unrealistic."

Despite this, however, Pore perseveres because she has "a very understanding family and boss. Without their support, I'd be in a whole lot of trouble," she said.

The local association involves itself in a number of activities throughout the year. "We're not just a social organization," Pore said. "Most of our members feel that they can do their partying elsewhere. When we get together, it is to conduct business." The VBALS works closely with the state bar association and the Virginia Women's Attorneys Association. The organization is involved with the legal assistance curriculum at Tidewater Community College. The group sponsors "Ask A Lawyer" programs at local malls, where free legal counsel is provided to Virginia Beach residents. The association sponsors local scholars ships to deserving high school seniors, as do the state and national affiliates.

The beach chapter recently won state-wide honors for a number of achievements, including first-place for publication of a newsletter, judged for content, format and general presentation. Additionally, the beach chapter is the first in the state to become an honorary member of the state bar association.

At the annual "Boss of the Year" dinner, held last week at Steinhilber's Thalia Inn at the beach, the Virginia Beach Association of Legal Secretaries announced its new officers and awards. Four local citizens were named honorary members of the organization: Phillip R. Russo, Carter R. Anderson, J. Curtis Fruit, and Henry C. Morgan. Linda C. Johnson, who works for Jeremiah A. Denton III, was named president, replacing Pore. J. Peter Holland III was named boss of the year, and Betty Bralhtwaite, who works for Robert Steinhilber, was named legal secretary of the year.

"I love my job," Pore said. "If you tell the people anything about legal secretaries, make sure you say that we're really here to serve people. That is our primary purpose."

Innkeeper Charges Beach Police Side With Towers

All the world doesn't love towers, according to Virginia Beach innkeeper Wilson Chaplain. And the police side with the trespasser against the tow companies, he told City Council Monday afternoon.

Chaplain aired his grievances under an ordinance mandating the city towing ordinance although he admitted he had not read the ordinance. The ordinance itself, which was later approved by City Council, merely clarified the ordinance on the books.

Chaplain charged that the city was hurting motel keepers instead of helping them and asked that the city take restrictions off towing.

"Our whole police force hates the motel owners because we won't let their friends park," he said.

After listening to Chaplain and his grandson Ricky Pallett, who owns East Coast Towing and Beach Towing for ten minutes or so, Councilman Clarence A. Holland said, "We've got one of the best police departments."

"That's because you don't have a motel," Chaplain retorted.

"We have heard enough about the police as far as I'm concerned," Holland replied. "I said one thing about the Police Department. That's all I'm going to say," Holland said, "and I think you've said enough."

Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy then remarked that the discussion had nothing to do with the ordinance under consideration.

Chaplain had said that everybody

"comes and parks all over." He said the police come in and say the signs are not put up correctly. The ordinance calls for signs notifying the public that the parking areas are private, that cars improperly parked there will be towed away and stated to which location they will be towed. The lettering has to be in reflectorized materials and the signs must be displayed at every entrance.

Chaplain said that the city drove one of the best tow companies out of the

Saudi Investments Welcomed

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

"Saudi Arabia has initiated a plan for development that envisages a high rate of investment and rapid economic growth. The response of the Saudis to the opportunities that are afforded by the kingdom's new level of wealth has thus far been an attempt to provide new bases for employment and more diversified sources of income, particularly in industry. A few years ago no one could have anticipated the scale and pace at which modernization would be attempted...Saudi Arabia's efforts at development are consistent with the interests of the United States...there is a similar growth in international financial investment between the two countries...a development strategy of Saudi Arabia that emphasizes large and immediate expenditures lessens the chances of recurrence of the sort economic problems that arose as a consequence of the fourfold increase in the price of oil in 1974-75. For the most part United States policies seem to recognize these mutual interests, and future policies of the United States should do nothing to discourage the current attitudes of Saudi Arabia toward the disposition of its new wealth." - Saudi Arabian Development Strategy, by Donald A. Wells, printed in 1976 by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, Washington, D.C.

Following the theme of the above passage, Sheikh Tarek Al-Fassi's interest in Virginia Beach is quid pro quo. By investing in Virginia Beach, Sheikh Al-Fassi helps to strengthen his native country's diplomatic and economic ties with the United States. In return, Virginia Beach experiences a new wave of investments which may marginally adumbrate this affluent resort city's developmental future.

Last weekend, local investor and businessman Richard Hirschfeld formally welcomed the sheikh, his wife, Virginia Beach investor Muhammad Ali and his wife at a gala reception at the Cavalier-on-the-hill.

Over 700 guests attended the outing, and by all accounts the sheikh's interest in Virginia Beach is welcomed.

Music for the black tie affair was provided by Virginia Beach's Dave Greenberg and the Continentals. The menu for the night included, according to Cavalier banquet chef Daniel Robertson, 340 pounds of steamboat round; 200 pounds of shrimp; 800 oysters; 800 clams; 800 mushroom/crabmeat tops; 800 swedish meatballs; 800 quiche lorraine; 13,020 pieces of hot hors d'oeuvre; 1,000 assorted canopies and countless other cold items. The food was all prepared in one day, beginning at 7 a.m. The total cost of the food was $18,000. The cost of the entire night was estimated at $50,000.

The evening was attended by many successful local residents, and many from out of town. The following is a sampling of the comments some of them had relative to the special night, investments, and Virginia Beach:

Veronica Ali: It's beautiful here. It's my first time there and it's like another resort. Everything here looks so new and clean. I'm sure we'll return here, especially since we have an interest in the hotel. We are possibly considering a house here. In fact, we talked about it today.

Angelo Dundee: "This is my first visit to Virginia Beach, and I sure do like it. My brother Chris used to live in Norfolk and managed Navy boxes years ago. I might consider a house here, you never know. We like the ocean."

Muhammad Ali: "Yes, we like

Virginia Beach. We may consider taking an apartment in the condos."

James DeBella, Virginia Beach's Director of Economic Development: "It's a fine occasion. These investments mean additional capital for Virginia Beach which has been out there all along, but we just hadn't tapped it. The investment Ali and others have made in Fotek and the Pavilion shows their commitment to the area. This is good for the city in terms of spinoffs, plus the investments should cause a rippling effect."

Edie Garcia, Virginia Beach contractor and investor: "This is good for the city. Virginia Beach is growing and we hope to see it continue to do so. I believe this adds a lot of class to Virginia Beach and to the local community. This type of development is beneficial to all Virginia Beach citizens. Ali is well known, respected and loved. His being here will give the city increased recognition. It's really a great plus for us and Tidewater."

Nabil Kasal, Virginia Beach nightclub owner and investor: "I think this is great for Virginia Beach. We need this kind of investments; to put in nice projects like this. It will bring in people from many other cities."

Mike Gelardi, Virginia Beach investor and contractor: "Actually the sheikh is looking for additional investments in Virginia Beach. He likes it from what he's seen."

Bob Magnusson, Los Angeles Times economics writer: "This is my first trip to Virginia Beach. It's really nice here. Especially the weather. I'd come back here for vacation if I got the chance."

Ray White, Commonwealth Commercial Group: "I doubt you can measure the effect this type of investment will have on Virginia Beach. I think Virginia Beach is beautiful, and that people will continue to want to invest here."

Joel Cooper, Norfolk attorney and investor: "This is a very elegant party. Richard Hirschfeld has done it again. This is real good for Virginia Beach. In fact, I hear there is even a La Costa type of enterprise planned for later. Virginia Beach is becoming a very glamorous place; kind of like the Beverly Hills of the east coast."

Saudis Come To Study Virginia Beach Traffic

By Greg Goldfarb,
Sun Editor

Criminal law and procedure in Saudi Arabia are derived almost entirely from sharia law, that is, the Islamic law based on the Koran, and the practices and sayings of the Prophet Mohammed.

Under these terms, fornication and adultery, for example, are considered by sharia to be crimes against the family and public morality. An adultery conviction stipulates that both parties be stoned to death. In fornication cases, the punishment is 100 lashes administered in public. Islamic law, however, safeguards the innocent by demanding rigorous requirements for proof of the offenses. Four reliable witnesses to the act must swear to the crime. If the witnesses' accusations do not hold up, they are liable for 80 lashes themselves. Those convicted of theft may lose their right hand, or in more severe cases, alternate hands and feet may be lopped. Homicide is punishable by execution by crucifixion.

As one might suspect, major crime rates in Saudi Arabia are low. And the governmental body responsible for keeping the peace in Saudi Arabia, a kingdom encompassing about 870,000 square miles and about one-third the size of the United States, with a population between five and 20 million, is the Saudi Arabian National Police Force.

According to the Directorate General of Public Security in the Ministry of Interior, the Saudi police force has between 15,000 and 20,000 officers. They receive three years of police training, and are later evaluated as to their specific fields of expertise.

Because of the Saudi's strict adherence to the sharia, criminal acts are few and assaults on police officers seldom occur. The biggest problem the Saudis have, in terms of law enforcement, is with traffic. Saudi Arabia is a fast growing country, business and industry is flourishing, and gasoline only costs 40 cents a gallon.

Recently, a delegation of 16 Saudi law enforcement officers visited Virginia Beach, hosted by the Virginia Beach Police Department, for five days. The delegation, supervised by Dr. Bern Kuhn, director of technical programs, International Center for Law Enforcement and Training, Rockville, MD., visited Virginia Beach specifically to study its congested traffic situation. Virginia Beach was chosen over Los Angeles for two reasons our city is closer to Maryland than California, and Virginia Beach and Los Angeles are among the very few in the United States that feature high technology in-patrol car computers to assist officers in their daily work. The Virginia Beach Police Department also boasts a highly sophisticated system-wide communications systems.

"Virginia Beach has an extremely progressive police department," said Dr. Kuhn. "It's chief (Chief Charles R. Wall) is excellent, and its computer operations is first class. In fact, Virginia Beach is one of the few cities in the country that has in-car computers. We had to choose between coming here or going to L.A."

"We know that Virginia Beach, like L.A., has tremendous traffic problems," Dr. Kuhn continued. "And to help alleviate the situation, your city utilizes an excellent traffic communications system. Your officers, just by merely pressing computer buttons, have instant access to data, and the analysis of that data. Plus, the in-car computerization saves the officers time and adds to their security and safety."

The Saudis attending the law enforcement center study there anywhere between two months and two years, after which time they will receive a certificate.

"The officers will also critique the Virginia Beach Police Department."

"Basically, the officers are overwhelmed at your city's in-car computer technology," Dr. Kuhn said.

Saudi Arabia is a rich nation, but its dollars have not yet been spent to any great extent on modern technology. But the country is expanding rapidly, as is its number of automobiles. Consequently, curtailment of traffic problems is the Saudi's number one priority.

"Traffic is their major problem," said Chief Wall. "The country is growing at a fantastic rate, and gasoline is only 40 cents a gallon. There are also more cars per capita there than in most other regions of the world." Chief Wall also notes the increasing number of cities, factories and airports popping up in the country.

Wall and Kuhn also mark the Saudi's keen adherence to religious principals, saying, "They don't want to lose their culture nor do they want to forget it, and they're taking steps to maintain it. They are very sincere about the teachings of the Koran, and it carries over into most of the Saudis' personal life."

Wall is envious of the Saudis, in that Saudi police officers are much better respected by the populace than in America.

"There work carries a lot of weight. Seldom are Saudi officers assaulted," Wall said. "The Saudis are surprised at the violence we have over here."

Per capita, there are not as many jails and prisons in Saudi Arabia as in America. Also, the pay scale of the Saudi officers is higher than in the

U.S. Some Saudi police majors make $60,000 a year.

"No police officials here make that much," Wall said.

Dr. Kuhn said that the delegation discerned cultural differences between the two countries, but they also recognized that even cops from different countries have a common bond.

"Culturally, they may have different ways," he said. "But when they all get together, they're still just a bunch of policemen."

Chief Wall and Dr. Kuhn agree that our police officers and theirs learned much from each other during their brief five-day stay in Virginia Beach; a stay in which family members were brought along and given the opportunity to sightsee and shop.

"They like this type of thing," Dr. Kuhn said. "They like the shopping and the cultural exchanges. And, they were well received by your officers. They like it here."

The delegation stayed at the Ramada Inn on 57th Street.

Suspect Wanted

By Beach Detective Mike Derwatt

For this week's "Crime of the Week," Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is offering $1,000 in cash for information that leads to the arrest of the person responsible for the burglary and sexual assault of a 22 year old white female that occurred in the Woodland Meadows section of Green Run.

On Saturday, April 3, 1982 at approximately 9:30 in the morning, the victim of the assault heard her dog barking and a loud noise from the rear of her home. As she entered the kitchen area, she observed that the French doors had been forced open and found a black male standing in the living room. The suspect chased the victim through the house and caught her in the den. The victim was forced onto the couch and was sexually assaulted at knife point. After the assault, the victim was bound and gagged and the suspect left through the same French doors he had entered.

The victim described the suspect as a black male, 20 years of age, with a baby face, dark eyes, no facial hair, close-cut afro, 6'-6 1/2", tall, thin build, has a gap between his upper front teeth and a very noticeable overbite. He was wearing older blue jeans with a hole in the left knee, a white and blue long-sleeved flannel shirt, no belt, black deck shoes which appeared to be new.

Crime solvers is asking that anyone with information about this crime call 427-0000. Crime solvers also pays up to $1,000 for information about any serious crime, apprehension of wanted persons, or the recovery of drugs or stolen property. Your name will not be required either to give information or to collect cash rewards.

area. He said that he did not think the general public had any more business parking in the motel parking lots than using a hotel room without paying for it.

"We ask them to leave and they want to fight," Chaplain said. He said that the motel owners do not need to have so much information on the signs or to place them at every entrance. The proliferation of signs and information has led legitimate hotel guests to ask whether they could park to register, he said.

"I own it and you want us to pay taxes on it, you're learning too far to a point there you've got the Police Department in line with the trespassers." Why is the city so interested in trespassers and telling them where their cars are towed to? he asked. "I'm tired of you all pecking in on us," he said. "My family as nine motels."

He said people are beating the wrecker personnel but "we can't get them arrested." Instead, he said, the trespassers will say, "Show me your deed," or "Do you want a mouth full of knuckles?"

"We don't want you to drive any more of our wrecker men out of town." He charged that police are stopping wreckers and releasing the towed cars.

Chaplain said he is being sued for $400,000 by a trespasser who slipped on his property. "I'd like you to see the words our desk clerks are called."

Pallett said there are beatings all the time and fights and the police take the other people's side. He said that police officers stop wreckers at intersections to check for driver's licenses and generally harass the wreckers.

When asked by Councilman Dr. E. T. Buchanan what changes he would like to see in the ordinance, Pallett, just asked that the police be made to be cooperative. He said that police took a wrecker from his compound, drove it to the street, released two cars and left the wrecker on the highway. He was not only trespassing, but he was driving my wrecker, he said, and then "arrested me for obstructing justice and I was just trying to find out where my keys were."

"Tell the police," Chaplain added. "Do something with the chief of police (Charles Wall). If he can't handle it, even though he's nice, get someone else."

Chaplain suggested that the city have a towing department because the people respect policeman. "They're not poor tourists who don't know any better. They're not. They're real devils."

Councilman Reid Ervin said that many of the city's ordinances are based on court cases.

Chaplain asked to "make it simple. If they're trespassing, they're trespassing. If they're not, they're not. If you need our parking lot, take it and pay me." He said there were only one or two tow companies left and "they're only this high, only teeny people."

Holland then took exception to Chaplain's remarks about the police.

After the ordinance was approved, Chaplain shouted, "Don't criticize me if any police are hurt, Clancy Holland. I'll remember you next election!"

Ervin suggested checking with Chief Wall. He said his experience with the police has been nothing but good.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that he had spoke with the chief, Chaplain also had taken his complaint to the chief and that the chief is taking proper action.

Councilman John A. Baum then remarked, "even in rural areas I haven't understood why you have to have signs in rural areas to keep people out of areas where they know they don't belong."

The ordinance approved defined a tow truck service storage yard—property including the premises of any service station, upon which vehicles are stored that have been towed from privately-owned lots or property at the request of the owner of such lot or property and without the consent of the owner of the vehicle towed and added "if an attendant or security guard is not on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week" to the section saying that each tow truck service storage yard shall provide reasonable security and protection for all vehicles towed.

Graduation Wet And Happy

By JACKIE MATTHEWS
Sun Correspondent

Are graduations all the same? There are polite speeches with wise philosophical phrases about the past and the future, with songs and then the great moment as the long awaited diplomas are passed out.

The graduating class of Princess Anne High School was definitely an exception this year.

Graduation was scheduled to take place at 6 p.m. outside P.A. High School in Cox's Stadium. At 5:30 the sky threatened rain. The decision was made to go ahead as planned and have the graduation outside. Each of the 500 graduating students were allowed six guests.

Changing graduation into the gym would have meant only two guests per student would have been allowed to attend. The time also would have been set back to 7 p.m. Many friends and relatives, some from great distances, would have been very disappointed.

As 6 p.m. approached the stadium filled. The processional began. Very orderly and elegantly the class of '82 came in. Boys were in blue and girls in white cap and gowns. The National Anthem was beautifully sung by Elizabeth A. Wilkinson. The Invocation was given by Bishop Vivian P. Hylton, Jr. David A. Byman began the Valedictory Address. Things seemed to be progressing nicely. Then a few rain drops began. Everyone still ignored the possibility it still could rain.

With the uncertain time schedule most students coming in late still had time to line up and be included in the processional by 6 p.m. However one young man did not make it. David Byman was giving his speech when this young man strolled down the side of the stadium all alone in his blue cap and gown. By this time the gate had been locked going onto the field where the rest of the graduating class sat. This did not stop this young senior, he simply lifted his robe, held on to his cap and sailed swiftly over the fence. This got an immediate applause from the on looking audience. He bowed and took his rightful seat.

Jerald A. Dunn gave the Salutatory Address and as he spoke the rains began. Laura E. Pendergrass sang "You'll Never Walk Alone," a very appropriate song considering the weather. The pianist was then being shielded from the rain with an umbrella. Susan Liebert introduced the speaker Skip Wilkins. By this time the skies seemed to just open and the rain poured. Approximately 2,800 friends and relatives were being soaked. The P.A. Band had to leave to protect their instruments from the rain. The graduating class never once seemed to be bothered by the ordeal. They sat for 40 minutes in pouring rain waiting for their name to be called to receive their soaked diploma. The diplomas were presented by Mr. Joseph J. Owens, Jr. The names were called in rapid order, the seniors quickly paraded by smiling as the rain water ran down their faces. It was happiest, wettest class ever to graduate. The benediction was given by Mr. Byron R. Wilkinson. Regardless of the weather the 1982 Class of Princess Anne High School stood steadfast and they will never forget June 13, a most exciting graduating day.

Library SUNlines

Summer Reading Provides Practice

Summer reading programs provide Virginia Beach children with an opportunity to practice reading skills while they discover the pleasure books can give. Last year more than 2,000 children participated. The almost 9,000 books they read were a great start on a lifelong good habit. This year, plan to make the reading program part of your child's summer.

Any child who can read independently can join. He or she can pick up a rally map—reading folder at any one of the five libraries or the bookmobile. The folder has a place to record the titles of books as they are read. On the other side the rally map shows a race track winding through Virginia Beach past famous landmarks. For each three books they read, children will get a hot rod or antique car sticker to add to the map. With the first sticker comes a large cardboard car to decorate with the reader's name. The libraries will display these cars throughout the program so the children can point out their names to friends and relatives. Each child who finishes six books will be awarded a reading certificate. But children can go right on reading and collecting stickers until the program ends on August 14. This allows each child to succeed at his or her own pace without pressure or competition.

Praise Your Child

There are many ways you can help the library encourage children to be good readers.

•Show interest in what your child reads and listen if he or she wants to talk about the story.

•Praise and reward children when they spend time reading, but don't compare their reading skills with another child's.

•Come to the library with your child. You can help guide him or her to books at the right level.

•Pick out some books for yourself while you're there. Children are impressed when they see that adults value reading too.

•Remember that summer reading should be relaxed and fun, not homework. For instance, if a child doesn't want to finish a book, just trade it in on one more suited to his or her abilities and interests.

This year's summer theme was inspired by Americans' love of cars from the "Model T" to the "General Lee." In a city the size of Virginia Beach, transportation becomes a vital question and that led to incorporating a map of the city into the reading road game. Programs this summer will also be influenced by this preoccupation with wheels. Look for some surprising vehicles to be parked outside the libraries. And watch for news of that unusual vehicle the bookmobile. There will also be many other programs, concerts from Young Audiences, visits from the Wappadoodle Puppets, movies and games.

Summer readers can pursue any subject or story that catches their interest. But for those who want to read more about cars, and other things on wheels, here are some fun books.

Adkins, Jan, Heavy Equipment; Baker, Betty, The Great Desert Race; Butterworth, W., Susan and her Classic Convertible; Cleary, Beverly, The Mouse on the Motorcycle; Gault, William, The Checkered Flag; Jackson, Jacqueline, The Endless Pavement; Leonard, Jerry, Kart Racing; Merrill, Jean, The Pushcart War; and Ross, Frank, The Tin Lizzie.

Miller To Address Lawyers

VBA Holds Annual Meeting At Beach

James C. Miller, III, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, will climax proceedings at the 44th Annual Meeting of the Virginia State Bar with an address at the Annual Luncheon on Saturday, June 19 in Virginia Beach. Miller's appearance will be especially timely in light of the FTC's recent efforts to study the competitive effects of lawyer advertising.

The FTC issued a survey in 1980 which would have required bar associations to answer questions involving antitrust considerations in such areas as advertising, prepaid legal services and the regulatory practices of the organized bar. The FTC later withdrew this mandatory survey, saying it had received sufficient voluntary responses. A majority of state bars, including the Virginia State Bar, declined to respond.

Late last year, the FTC issued a voluntary survey, involving 2,500 randomly selected lawyers, which attempted to study the impact of lawyer advertising on the cost and accessibility of legal services. Pollster Lou Harris conducted the survey for the FTC. Miller's speech will be at 1 p.m. on June 19 at the Cavalier Oceanfront Hotel's Beach Club. Most of the State Bar's Annual Meeting events will take place at either the Cavalier Oceanfront or the Holiday Inn at 39th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

More than 1,200 persons over 600 lawyers and judges plus their spouses and guests will be attending the Annual Meeting of the Virginia State Bar, the administrative arm of the Supreme Court of Virginia responsible for regulating the practice of law in the state. Its 16,300 members include all lawyers and judges in Virginia.

Other attractions at the June 17-20 Annual Meeting include Professional Development Workshops on various fields of law on Friday, June 18, and a panel program, headed by U.S. Representative M. Caldwell Butler of Virginia's Sixth Congressional District, on "Pro Bono Services: Should We-Must We-or Will Legal Aid Do It All?" on Saturday, June 19, at 10:25 a.m. (Coral Reef Room, Cavalier Oceanfront).

This latter program will focus on the effects of President Reagan's budget cuts on the Legal Services Corporation and ways in which private lawyers can assist poor persons in civil legal cases. The Legal Services Corporation is a federally funded national organization which coordinates the delivery of legal services to poor persons in civil cases.

Miller is no stranger to Virginia, having received a Ph. D. in Economics from the University of Virginia in 1969, after receiving a B.B.A. in Economics from the University of Georgia in 1964. He was born in Atlanta and raised in Conyers, Georgia.

President Reagan appointed Miller to a seven-year term as a member of the FTC on July 16, 1981, and designated him as chairman. The U.S. Senate confirmed the nomination on Sept. 21, and he assumed his current office on Oct. 5. Miller also serves as a member of the Council of the Administrative Conference of the United States.

In the mid-70s, Miller served as a senior staff economist with the U.S. Council of Economic Advisors, where he specialized in matters relating to transportation, regulation and antitrust policy. In October 1975, he was appointed assistant director for government operations and research of the U.S. Council on Wage and Price Stability, with responsibility for the Council's public-sector monitoring functions. He also served during this time as a member of President Ford's Domestic Council Regulatory Review Group, which oversaw that administration's program of regulatory reform.

From January 1977 until January 1981, Miller was a co-director of the American Enterprise Institute's Center for the Study of Government Regulation.

The four-day Annual Meeting gets underway on Thursday, June 17, with an all-day Continuing Legal Education program on "Recent Developments in the Law" 9:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. Beach Club, Cavalier Oceanfront. The governing Council of the Virginia State Bar will meet at 9 a.m. on June 17 (Ballroom, Restored Cavalier) to consider, among other items, various proposed changes to the Virginia Code of Professional Responsibility, the set of rules governing lawyer conduct by which all Virginia lawyers must abide.

The special order program on Saturday, June 19, on "Pro Bono Services" will examine, from several different perspectives, the need for, and delivery of, low- or no-cost legal services to the poor in civil cases. Republican Congressman Butler, 57, will discuss the effects of President Reagan's budget cuts on the Legal Services Corporation, the prospects for the LSC's short- and long-term existence and the general feeling of Congressmen about the worthiness of the LSC.

Butler has served in the House of Representatives since 1973 and is presently a member of the House Judiciary Committee. On this committee, he has been active in drafting bankruptcy reform legislation. He is also a member of the House Committee on Government Operations. Sam Ann-Deerman of the Washington, DC firm of Hogan and Hartson will discuss what private law firms are doing and can do in handling legal aid cases.

William K. Slate, II, of Richmond, Clerk of the Fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and a member of the State Bar's Legal Aid Committee, will be discussing the effects of legal aid cutbacks in Virginia and alternative methods of serving the state's poor in civil legal cases. Slate will also describe the functions, goals and funding sources of the Legal Services Corporation of Virginia, which administers legal aid programs in the state.

This program is being sponsored by the State Bar's Young Lawyers Conference.

Also that same morning, the nonprofit Virginia Law Foundation (VLF) will offer a panel program on "Interest in Trust Accounts," (9:45 a.m. - Coral Reef Room, Cavalier Oceanfront), covering the IRS's recent ruling permitting lawyers to donate the interest earned on nominal or short-term trust account funds to legal aid programs. The interest funds from such accounts must be given to a nonprofit entity, such as the VLF, for disbursement to public service activities, including legal aid programs, and neither the lawyer nor the client whose funds are involved would have to claim the interest amount as taxable income.

A program using such trust account interest funds for legal aid was implemented in Florida late last year.

The annual election of officers of the Virginia State Bar will be conducted at 11:45 Saturday morning (Coral Reef Room, Cavalier Oceanfront).

Senior Lawyers Honor

Eleven judges, four former Virginia State Bar presidents, a former chief justice of the Virginia Supreme Court and a current justice on the U.S. Supreme Court are among 85 lawyers who mark in 1982 half a century as members of the Virginia bar. These individuals will be honored at the Virginia State Bar's 44th Annual Meeting, June 17-20 at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn Hotels in Virginia Beach, with a 50-year Certificate of Appreciation at 11:45 a.m. on June 19 in the Cavalier's Coral Reef Room.

To be eligible for the 50-year honor, a lawyer must have been a member in good standing of the State Bar for 50 consecutive years.

Among the dignitaries scheduled to receive a Certificate are U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr. of Richmond; former Virginia Supreme Court Chief Justice Lawrence W. L'Anson of Portsmouth; and former VSB Presidents W. Hutchings Overby of Rustburg, William Rosenberger, Jr. of Lynchburg, Robert Edward Taylor of Charlottesville and William H. Woodward of Bristol.

Bar Discusses Property Changes

An examination of the changes made by the 1982 General Assembly in the laws relating to distribution of property in divorce suits, plus a discussion of whether Virginia needs to change its laws of contributory negligence in personal injury cases, will be two of the 11 programs offered by Virginia State Bar sections on Friday, June 18, during the VSB's 44th Annual Meeting in Virginia Beach.

The Virginia State Bar currently has 13 sections, each of which consists of Virginia attorneys interested in a specific field of law. The VSB's 44th Annual Meeting, June 17 through 20, will be conducted at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn Hotels.

Among the most timely of the section programs will be the Family Law

Section's session on "Dividing the Pie—Virginia's New Marital Property Law." This program (10:30 a.m., Cape Henry Room, Holiday Inn) will examine the 1982 General Assembly's changes in the Code of Virginia involving a court's authority when entering a final decree of divorce. These changes, effective July 1, include provisions for the equitable distribution of marital property, meaning all property titled in the names of both parties and all other property acquired by each party during the marriage which is not separate property.

J. Samuel Glasscock, a member of the House of Delegates from Suffolk and Chairman of the Virginia Joint Legislative Study Committee on the subject, will discuss the provisions of the new law as well as the intent of the legislature in enacting it. Beverly Anne Groner, a Bethesda, MD lawyer and Chairman of the Maryland Governor's Commission on Domestic Relations Law, will discuss the practical aspects of the law, the expected problems in interpretation of it and how a case might be presented. Groner was invited to speak because Maryland's marital property law is similar to that which will take effect in Virginia on July 1.

The Litigation Section program (10 a.m., Coral E Room, Cavalier Oceanfront) will examine Virginia's current law of contributory negligence in personal injury cases and, based on the program title, ask "Is It Time for Comparative Negligence?" Comparative negligence is the legal concept whereby damages recovered by a plaintiff for injuries negligently caused by a defendant should be reduced by the amount the plaintiff's own negligence contributed to the loss. Contributory negligence is the concept whereby a plaintiff whose own negligence contributes to his injuries is barred from recovering any portion of the loss from the negligent defendant. This doctrine has been rejected by most states as unduly harsh when applied to slightly negligent plaintiffs, and has been replaced by the concept of comparative negligence.

Examining this topic will be Professor John Wade of Vanderbilt University, who is currently a visiting professor at the College of William and Mary's Marshall-Wythe School of Law and Richard lawyer James C. Roberts, who served as President of the Virginia State Bar during 1980-81. U.S. District Court Judge Jackson L. Kiser will serve as moderator for the program.

Other State Bar section programs on June 18 are: Antitrust Law Practice—"How to Create and Implement an Antitrust Compliance Program for Your Clients or Corporations" (9 a.m., Coral D, Cavalier Oceanfront); Criminal Law Practice—"The Progeny of Miranda v. Arizona" (9 a.m., Coral C, Cavalier Oceanfront); Administrative Law Practice—"Workmen's Compensation—Emerging Issues for the 1980s" (9:30 a.m., Coral A, Cavalier A, Cavalier Oceanfront); Real Property Practice—"New Developments in Real Estate Law and Practice: Legislation and Decisions, Legal Ethics Opinions, UPL Opinions and Bar-Related Title Insurance" (9:30 a.m., Skytop, Holiday Inn); Patent, Trademark and Copyright Law Practice—"The Public's Obligation to the Patent System" (10:30 a.m., Amphitheater B, Holiday Inn); Business Law Practice—"Minority Shareholders' Rights" (10:30 a.m., Croatan, Holiday Inn); Construction Law Practice—"Proof of Damages in Construction Cases" (2 p.m., Cape Henry, Holiday Inn); and International Law Practice—"Exchange Lawyers Between the United States and Foreign Nations" (2:30 p.m., Croatan, Holiday Inn).

Also, the State Bar's Military Law Committee will sponsor a program on "Representing the Family of the Military Member" on June 18 (9:30 a.m., Coral B, Cavalier Oceanfront).

The Virginia State Bar is the administrative arm of the Supreme Court of Virginia responsible for overseeing the practice of law in the state. Its 16,500 members include all lawyers and judges in Virginia.

Cooney's Fight A Bloody Shame

By B. J. Sessions

Gerry Cooney was not the big loser Friday night. He walked away with in excess of ten million dollars for 38 minutes and 52 seconds of work. The boxing fan (although some don't know it) was the big loser. It was obvious to many prior to the fight that the 6-5, 225½ lb. Cooney had about as much chance of success as a flea crawling up an elephant's leg with rape on his mind.

Cooney had never established himself as a top contender. The only class boxer he ever fought and beat was Ken Norton, who had paractically quit boxing for a movie career. Cooney did defeat Leroy Boone, a local boxer, who recently fought a clown named "Oak Tree Edwards" to a draw at the Norfolk Arena.

The only effective punches Cooney threw during the entire farce were three shots to Holmes' groin causing him to retort, "I was going to have sex tonight, but I think I'll hold off."

Cooney reminds one of another freak from another time. His name was Primo Carnera, a sideshow strong man with no brains. The shyster promoters hyped him into the Heavyweight Championship of the World. He looked like a giraffe in the ring and had a jaw made of glass. He was finally beaten half to death by Max Baer and sent back to Italy broke both financially and spiritually.

Unlike Carnera, Cooney will not be broke and, God forbid, he may be hyped into the championship, but if that ever happens it will be a disgrace almost as bad as the fight Friday night.

Let's face it; the show had nothing whatsoever to do with the sport of boxing. It was a pure and simple racial issue, capitalized on by slick promoters. Both races flocked to the box office and purchased the little black boxes to see it on television. That's what the promoters wanted and that's what they got. How sad it is.

Richard Coard Sr.

Coard was born in Atlantic City, N.J. at the end of the Depression. He grew up in N.J., Pennsylvania, Maryland, Florida and Michigan, attended the Universities of Miami and Georgia and completed numerous specialized courses through the University of Wisconsin and Tidewater Community College.

He has worked as a salesman, sales manager, and printer and served as a Naval Officer. Twenty years of naval service sent him on a dozen trips to Europe and Asia and overseas tours in North Africa, Spain, Cuba, Italy, Puerto Rico, Japan and Korea and two tours (in-country) Vietnam.

He has been a Navy columnist, public-affairs officer, reporter and editor for several publications both in and out of the service over the years, including acting as assistant editor for the Athens Banner Herald in Athens, Georgia.

Having owned his own print shop, ad agency and publishing firm as well as having served as sales manager and Southeastern U.S. District Field Supervisor for another publisher before coming to Byerly, Coard brings many years of expertise to the Chesapeake Post and Byerly Publishing where he has been selected to serve as the Executive Marketing Director.

His marriage to Georgia-born Sonya Faye Draughton in 1955 produced four sons (also living in the area)--Rick Jr., 26, Brad, 23, Mike, 21, and Eric, 18.

Coard has authored two books published in recent years. They Came...An Anthology of Tidewater Poets, and Though I Speak With The Tongues of Angels, which sold well in local bookstores after having had a "rather slow sell" from California to points East, Mr. Coard readily admits. A third book, My Silver Chalice, is waiting for a publisher.

Ken Heitkemper

A resident of Hampton for about a year, Heitkemper hails from California. His father was career military, which afforded him the opportunity for a great deal of travel over the years, including a tour in Holland.

He graduated from Jacksonville Senior High School, Jacksonville, N.C. in 1974. He attended college at The College of San Mateo, San Mateo, California where he majored in Business and Business Management.

Heitkemper comes to our organization from another publishing firm where he had developed considerable expertise as an account executive.

His brother, "John St. John," a local (WGHI) radio personality, resides with him in Hampton.

Heitkemper comes to Byerly as an experienced account executive. He will serve as Mr. Coard's assistant for Research and Development and handle special projects in the communications media.

Joe Michonski

Joe has been a resident of Deep Creek for about twelve years. He and his wife, Carol Ruth have raised five boys, Joe Jr., 22, James, 21, Jeffrey, 20, Jerry, 19, and Jack, 17.

Michonski retired from the Navy as a Chief Petty Officer in 1976 after having served 20 years.

He graduated from South River High School in New Jersey, and from Tidewater Community College recently, after obtaining many extra semester hours at Old Dominion and Norfolk State. His major was recreation.

He has been a salesman, sales manager and account executive in the area for several years. His interests in sports caused him to form the Chesapeake Boxing Club, become a promoter for Physique Shows and serve as past vice President of the Deep Creek Baseball Team.

Mr. Michonski comes to Byerly as an account executive and his special project is development of Light Industry and Real Estate Development.

Sue Saunders

A resident of Virginia Beach for about four years, Sue hails originally from Toronto, Canada.

The mother of three children, Brian, 17, Jay, 16, and Shelby, 12, Sue comes to us from Willow Tree Enterprises, Inc., publishers of Tidewater Calling magazine.

Sue was editor, marketing representative and part owner for the military-oriented publication which has realized great success in developing much needed inroads to the military community for over five years. Concurrently with this major thrust in her career, she served as an associate editor for the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce newspaper.

Having considerable editorial and reporting skills, Sue brings to the staff expertise as an experienced liaison between the military and civilian community.

She will serve as an account executive and function as project manager for development of a very special military-community outreach.

Walter M. Laughon

Laughon has resided in Portsmouth for 33 years. He has two children, Kimberly, 8, and Jennifer, 4.

His father is the former director of the Beasley Center, married to Mary H. and soon to retire from the NASA Research Center.

Walter Jr. attended Woodrow Wilson High School, many service schools while serving in the armed forces and several sales and marketing seminars in recent years.

He has been a sales representative and account executive in this area for over a year. He is a prior member of ILA local 1840 and was a PRO-tour Bowler for several years. His other interests are softball, basketball and golf, which he actively pursues in his leisure.

Mr. Laughon comes to Byerly as an experienced account executive. His special project is Resort and Tourist, Restaurant and Lounge Development.

Maurice A. Moore

Moore resides in Norfolk with his wife, Willie Mae and three children, Andre, aged 6, Quita, aged 2 and Maurice A. Junior (eleven days old).

A resident of Norfolk for thirteen years, he graduated from Maury High School in 1978. He attended Norfolk State University for two years where he majored in Business and Mass Communications.

He has been a professional sales representative and account executive for a number of years in Tidewater.

Maurice's interests include music, (he is a very good drummer), and track and field, (which were his team and single events at Maury High School).

Moore comes to Byerly as an account executive. His special project for development is the ethnic outreach and the small business community.

Richard W. Coard Jr.

Coard is single, 26, and a resident of Virginia Beach. He has lived in the Tidewater area for about thirteen years. He graduated from Deep Creek High School in 1974 with an "excellent" grade level and a scholarship opportunity to attend Johns Hopkins University.

He has attended sales and management seminars in Houston and Tidewater. His business experience began at a local print shop where he rose to the position of administrative assistant after having learned the camera, finishing, graphics and distribution aspects of printing and publishing. He became the firm's sale representative, and remained with them 6½ years.

He joined the Gordon Jewelry chain as a salesman for the Tower Mall D. P. Paul Store and rose to assistant manager in about a year. After two years he was offered a large new store in a new mall in Memphis, Tennessee, but rather than leave the community, left the firm to join the R.L. Polk Company. As Polk, he was quickly promoted to sales manager, but the "travel" once again prompted Rick to terminate another successful position to come to Byerly.

Rick's other interests are "comedy", music, and (collecting) old comic books.

Coard comes to Byerly as an experienced account executive whose special project is civic, community, church and institutional development.

Seatack Gets New Firehouse

Sun Staff Report

Ground was broken last week for a new fire station in Virginia Beach. Located in the Seatack community off South Birdneck Road, the half-million dollar facility is slated for completion within one year.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck, on hand for the ceremony, called the new station "an important addition" to the community. Benjamin C. Moore, assistant to the City manager for housing and community development, served as master of ceremonies for the event, introducing a host of dignitaries including Fire Department Chief Harry E. Diezel, Vice Mayor Harold Heischober, Aaron A. Parsons, an original Seatack volunteer fireman, and Dr. B. T. Thoroughgood, chairman of the local civic group which spearheaded the drive for the new fire house.

Seatack is a predominately black community, dating back to the war of 1812. The city has been planning to construct a new fire station there since 1975, replacing the decades-old station currently in use. The neighborhood is made up of 314 residential housing units that will be protected by the new facility, along with neighborhoods in a 9.5 square-mile radius.

Original fireman Aaron Parsons leads Vice Mayor Harold Heischober, City Manager Thomas Muehlenbeck and civic group chairman Dr. B. T. Thoroughgood in ground breaking for the new fire house.

Seatack firemen watch the proceedings with keen interest.

CBN Breaks Ground For Library

CBN University recently broke ground for an $8.9 million library building, paving the way for the addition of four new graduate schools to the existing schools of communication and education.

The groundbreaking also launched Phase Two of The Christian Broadcasting Network's long-range development program.

Dr. M.G. (Pat) Robertson, CBNU chancellor, and Dr. Richard F. Gottier, president, dug into the sandy Virginia Beach soil before a crowd of area dignitaries and friends to signal the start of construction on the four-year-old university's second major building, a massive, four-story structure to eventually house one million volumes in one of the most sophisticated library and research facilities in the nation.

Meanwhile, the new building also will house new graduate schools of business administration, Biblical studies, fine arts, and public policy.

"This new facility will provide us with a springboard that ultimately will allow us to launch a total of about a dozen new schools so that CBN can truly be a great university," Dr. Gottier said.

The entire university—its 150 students, library and all—now is housed in a three-story Georgian building adjacent to headquarters of The Christian Broadcasting Network, sponsoring organization for the university.

Completion of the library in January 1984 will give the university urgently needed growing room, officials said. The building will permit CBN to expand to 1,000 students before additional structures are needed, said Robertson.

The schools of business administration and Biblical studies will open in the 82-83 academic year, with fine arts and public policy to follow.

"The library is the heartbeat of any great university," said Dr. Gottier. "The long-range capacity of this new building should make it one of the finest graduate libraries in the country."

The fully computerized facility will be on-line when the library opens and will have immediate access to the resources of about 2,300 other libraries throughout the United States.

Library Director Lois Lehman, who came to CBNU from Indiana University where she was assistant director overseeing Indiana University where she was assistant director overseeing Indiana's eight campus branches, said few libraries in the nation will be on a par with the new CBNU facility.

"It seems appropriate for a university to build a library first," Miss Lehman said, "particularly for a graduate-level institution to do so. Research is key to excellence in graduate studies."

The new facility will offer vastly expanded resources, she said, but even now, the CBNU library is lending to other institutions about three times as much material as it is borrowing. The library is a member of Tidewater and national library consortiums.

The 155,000-square foot library is the second major university building of 10 or 12 anticipated during the next decade. The W.M. Jordan Co., Inc., of Newport News, Va. is the prime contractor. Wiley and Wilson, Engineers, Architects and Planners of Richmond designed the building.

The building's Georgian architecture is in keeping with the prevailing style at CBN University and the neighboring TV network headquarters. The exterior will be brick, with dormer windows looking out from a mansard roof. The main floor entry portico will be formed by seven brick arches, with seven ornate multi-story windows at the second- and third-floor balconies.

Inside, there will be a large lobby, offices, several specialty rooms and book stack areas on the first floor. The second story will contain a chapel, an auditorium, large book stack areas, and a huge, two-story atrium covered by five barrel skylights. The third floor is devoted mainly to stack areas for books.

The fourth-floor attic area will be for the mechanical, electrical, and elevator equipment, and will be constructed sufficiently strong so that it also can be used to hold books.

The second-floor auditorium, in addition to its primary use for university students, will be utilized for orientation of visitors to CBN Center. About 77,000 visitors come to the center annually.

Eventually, the entire building will be used for the library. It will have a capacity of one million volumes and up to one million microforms for storing other reading materials, plus reading space for 645 people.

Civic, religious, and government leaders from seven Hampton Roads-area cities attended the June 7 groundbreaking.

Robertson used the occasion to launch Phase Two of CBN Center development, as well as to break ground for the building. CBN Center, a 380-acre tract at the intersection of Interstate 64 and Indian River Road in Virginia Beach, is headquarters for both the university and CBN, an international television network and parent company of the nation's second largest cable television program service, CBN Satellite Network, with 15.2-million homes wired to receive its 24-hour programming.

Long-range plans for the center include apartments for students and other university buildings, a conference center and motel complex, and other office and production facilities for the television network.

The present $34-million CBN Center opened in the fall of 1979.

Cooke Students Work In Sand

Cooke Elementary School art teacher Caroline Jo Johnson believes the best way to instill artistic creativity and expression amongst her students is to get them out in the outdoors and let their young imaginations run wild. So, last week, Johnson took her fifth grade class to the nearby 16th Street beach location to indulge in a bit of sand sculpture. Students made all types of creations, including animals, monsters, forts, castles, and even a pair of scissors. Sculptures were later judged by school officials and the youngsters were awarded various prizes, including free treats at McDonald's.

First-place winners for their alligator sculpture are Sean McLure, Bart Berner, Wells Rawls and Mike Sidwell. Teacher Caroline Jo Johnson looks on.

Duwa Sony, Karl Ross and Rachel Moser are proud of their rendition of a suntan lotion bottle.

Norwegian Lady

Ship Transfer

Sun Staff Report

The former Virginia Beach city manager spoke with the same impassioned emotion as a proud parent.

"She is a lovely lady for whom I travelled more than 10,000 miles," said Russell Hatchett. "My association with her has been the most delightful experience of my life."

Moss' words were expressed for a sterling silver Viking ship replica he was given in 1962 by the city of Moss, Norway for attending the unveiling of their Norwegian Lady statue.

The event last week was the transfer of that ship replica from the office of the city manager to the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum. "Ever since I first laid eyes on that ship I've wanted it for the museum," said Bruce Martin, the museum's president. The model ship, which has been with the city manager's office for 20 years, will now be on permanent loan to the museum. On the ship's sail are the words "Virginia Beach Fra Byen Moss, which mea

"Virginia Beach from the city of Moss." The replica has an appraised value of $2,400.

The ceremony, which was held at the museum's 24th Street and oceanfront location, was attended by a large contingent of dignitaries and guests. Johan Dahl, counselor of the Royal Norwegian Embassy, delivered a presentation about the history of Vikings in northern Europe. Listening attentively at the front podium were Mayor J. Henry McCoy and City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck. Also present were Del. Owen Pickett and Virginia Beach Public Schools Superintendent E. E. Brickell, as was a crowd of 100 observers.

Sun Staff Report

Dedication. That's the one intangible quality which seems to embody everyone involved in the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation "Shakespeare-by-the-Sea" series. It couldn't be the money. There is little around. It couldn't be the recognition. One time last summer, only 18 people showed up for a performance. What is it, then, that attracts the 15 actors and half-dozen producers, directors and administrators to stick with the six year-old program?

"You do it because you love the stage," says Pamela Riley, a veteran "Shakespeare-by-the-Sea" performer and a theater arts graduate of Virginia Wesleyan College. "And, Shakespeare is the greatest."

Riley and the other members of the company will soon have the opportunity to display the fruits of the past four months' labors, which included studying acting techniques, fencing, Tai Chi, and Elizabethan voice and diction. Starting August 27 and running through September 5, the Pavilion will be the site of two classic Shakespeare love stories, "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Taming of the Shrew," which will be performed on alternate nights.

Advance discount coupons, available at the Pavilion box office, entitle one to see both plays for just five dollars. Performances are set for 8 p.m. each night except Sundays, when curtain call will be at 6 p.m.

The "Shakespeare-by-the-Sea" Company was founded in 1977 as part of the Performing Arts Unit of the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

Under Artistic Director, Henry DeShields, the first production, "Taming Of The Shrew," was performed in the Autumn of 1977. William Ruehlman, critic for the Ledger Star, wrote, "a lush production to gladden the heart and eye is The Taming Of The Shrew at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center Theatre".... "a crisp cast gives a stylized Elizabethan send off to a cracklejack comedy...."the cast carries itself well, full of business and movement, each individual, even the walk-ons, thoughtfully delineated in personality."

In 1978, "Twelfth Night" was produced. Ed Bacon, critic for the Ledger Star, wrote, "the comedy is more successful here than in many Shakespeare productions. The audience got most of the tricky dialogue and understood the mixed up plot situations." Cindy Amorese (VA. Pilot) wrote, "the production is marked by enthusiasm, thoughtful direction, impressive acting, and classy costuming".... "it's good, delightfully good".

Since 1979, the Shakespeare-by-the-Sea Festival has been a participating member of the National Conference of Shakespeare Festivals in America, an affiliation that has proven to be both valuable and supportive.

"The Merchant of Venice" was performed in the Autumn of 1979. William Ruehlman wrote, "a creditable, interesting mounting of this difficult play".... "ambitious, worthwhile effort".... "adroit". In addition to the production at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center Theatre, "The Merchant of Venice" was performed at the Chrysler Museum Theatre and the city schools.

In 1981, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was performed at both the Virginia Beach Recreation Center Theatre and Pavilion. Mal Vincent wrote, "deShields endowed his players with a winning comic confidence".... "never forced or artificial. It has solid ground in farcical complexity and the vanity of actor."

The most recent production, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," was produced in October of 1981. Gayle Pipkin (Ledger-Star) wrote, "fast-moving, well acted, and upbeat performance".... "colorful, entertaining and fun for all".... "played with gusto".

All of the productions, with the exception of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," have been toured through the Virginia Beach Public Schools and parks throughout the Tidewater area. Mary Barnes, Supervisor of Secondary English for the Virginia Beach Public School System, wrote, "you have changed attitudes and awakened interests, and that's a major feat with students today. We thank you for your good theatre."

Further information can be obtained from the city's Performing Arts Unit at 495-1892.

THE VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

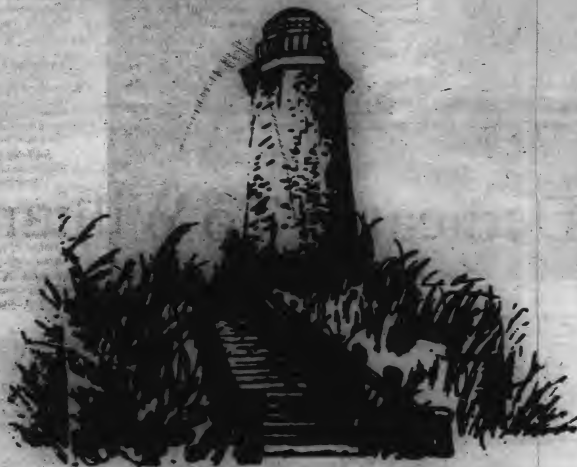

ANNOUNCES A SPECIAL EDITION

"The Virginia Beach Story" To Be Published This Summer

Dedicated to the progress and growth of the City of Virginia Beach its people, its business concerns—where it is and where it is headed in all aspects: commerce, industry, agriculture and tourism.

Blessed by a rich history, Virginia Beach looks confidently to the future. Today it is recognized as one of the fastest growing cities in the United States.

Many new firms have been established in the past decade, joining other progressive businesses dedicated to building a strong economic foundation for Virginia Beach's future growth.

This special edition of The Virginia Beach Sun will have dual purpose. Considerable space will be devoted to valuable data and statistics and the "human side" of the past, present and future of Virginia Beach. Copies will go to libraries, schools, legislators, Congressmen, business and civic leaders, and to firms that may move to the Tidewater area. The Virginia Beach Sun also believes this souvenir edition will serve as a platform for individual businesses to tell their own exciting story through public relations copy and institutional advertising. Your support and interest in this project is earnestly solicited and welcomed.

SHARED LIGHT

In what poets have called the "dark forests" there live millions of small trees, saplings, ferns and shrubs. Foresters call them the "understory."

The understory survives and ultimately flourishes on shared light. It seems to be a principle of Nature that big trees have an obligation to let through light for the little ones.

A similar principle applies to spiritual survival and moral development. Grown-ups are expected to make thoughtful provision for the religious training of youth. Parents have a responsibility to God in guiding the spiritual education of their children. The Church through its ministries of worship and teaching supports our resolve to let through light for the little ones.

Statistics Show

Teenagers Die On Weekends

The most common way for a teenager to die is when his or her car leaves the roadway and strikes a tree or utility pole on a weekend night, statistics show.

No one knows how many future Einsteins or Picassos have been lost because someone drank too much at a Saturday night party, but it is known that friends and relatives are devastated when a young person dies in a traffic accident.

Car crashes are by far the leading cause of death for persons 15 to 24 years of age. Of the 48,500 15-to-24-year-olds who died in the United States in 1978, 19,164 died in motor-vehicle accidents, according to the National Safety Council.

Al Lauerdsdorf of the Council's Traffic Safety Department says "drinking, speeding, and inexperience combine to make many young drivers unsafe drivers."

Alcohol and drugs are a factor in half of all fatal motor-vehicle accidents, but the percentage is even higher for young drivers, he says. Involvement in alcohol-related accidents for 18 and 19-year-olds stands at 42 per 100,000 population as opposed to 28 for the driving population as a whole.

"For over 70 years our nation has dealt with drunken drivers primarily on a theory of 'don't drink and drive,'" Lauerdsdorf says. "We have learned that is not enough."

The National Safety Council believes that legislation is needed to improve enforcement and adjudication of drunk driving cases.

In addition, a subcommittee of the Council's Committee on Alcohol and Drugs urges the adoption of a legal minimum drinking age of 21. Lauerdsdorf says the varying minimum legal drinking ages across the country encourage young drivers to cross state lines to drink.

Youngsters in lower grades should be taught about the problems caused by improper use of alcohol, he says. "Hopefully education will help decrease the need for more punitive measures in the future."

Fast speed is another major reason for fatal car crashes by young drivers. More teenagers are arrested for speeding than for any other moving violation. "Speeding on curves," he says, "is a common cause of single vehicle accidents and of fatal accidents. Young males take greater risks than other drivers do."

The National Safety Council says that enforcement of the 55 mph speed limit is one of the most effective ways to curb traffic accidents. The national speed limit, which was enacted in early 1974, is the nation's single best device for saving lives and preventing injuries from motor-vehicle mishaps, according to the Council.

Lauerdsdorf says one of the strongest arguments for maintaining the 55 mph speed limit is that many young persons aren't experienced in driving at faster speeds. Since 1973, more than 25 million new drivers, many of them in younger age groups, have been licensed.

In addition to alcohol and speed, inexperience is a cause of car accidents for young drivers.

Following too closely, improper passing, failure to yield right of way, and driver inattention are common teenage frequently make. Lauerdsdorf says one of the best ways to overcome these mistakes is by taking a comprehensive driver training course.

"We believe," he says, "that all things being equal, the trained driver will perform safer than one not so trained." The National Safety Council's goal is that every beginning driver will take a state-approved driver education course.

A simple but highly effective way for teenagers to protect themselves when riding in an automobile is to wear safety belts, Lauerdsdorf says.

The National Safety Council estimates that one quarter of the adults who died last year in motor-vehicle crashes might be alive today if they had taken the time to strap on their lap and shoulder safety belts.

"Unfortunately," he says, "only one out of 10 persons use safety belts, and I'm afraid that percentage may be even smaller for young drivers."

Certainly, Lauerdsdorf says, not all young people are poor drivers. In fact, he says, some have excellent records because of driver education and because they have quicker reflexes and better eyesight than older persons. "We hope that through education and experience all teenagers can learn to drive safely and accident free."

chemistry at VMI where he is a rising junior. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Noell, Jr., of 685 Orangewood Dr. Presentation of the awards was made during commencement weekend ceremonies at VMI.

Bayside Editor Wins

The co-editor of Bayside High School's student newspaper, "Shore Lines," has won second place in the editorial category of the University of Richmond's 1982 Journalism Institute.

Vickie Hupman received the award for her editorial in the newspaper's February 1982 issue. Her editorial commented on student coupes showing an undue amount of public affection while in school, which tended to disrupt the school routine of other students.

In addition to a certificate for Hupman, the award also includes $50 worth of journalism books to be donated to the Bayside High library by the University of Richmond.

Hupman is a Journalism II student of Linda Cobb, sponsor of the student newspaper.

Recycling Symbol

The recycling symbol is the focus of a national recycled packaging awareness program being launched in select Virginia Beach Food Town supermarkets, beginning Monday June 28.

The program, called

"Shopping for the Symbol of the 80's" is designed to alert shoppers to the benefits of recycled paperboard and calls attention to manufacturers who identify their use of the material by placing the symbol on appropriate product packaging.

Sanitation Rates Increase

The governing commission for Hampton Roads Sanitation District gave final approval recently for a 28 percent rate increase. After July 1, a typical Virginia Beach customer's bill will increase from $4.70 to $6 a month according to HRSD. The unit rate, based on a customer's water use, will rise from 64 cents to 82 cents per 100 feet.

Rates were raised 23 percent last year. This year's hike, then, marks the second increase in consecutive years.

Copes Named Father Of Year

William Copes of Virginia Beach has been named MS Father of the Year announced John Burling, Tidewater Chapter Chairman.

"The announcement, coming as it does this year, in the midst of the Society's Hope Chest Campaign (Mother's Day - Father's Day) serves to highlight the outstanding courage of MSers in the face of this often debilitating disease and call attention to the annual House-to-House Hope Chest Campaign," he said.

Bill Copes, 50, was recently awarded a Bachelor of Arts Degree by St. Leo's College. He served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the local Chapter until he was hit with some of the most disabling MS conditions. There was a time when he was completely confined to bed, but now manages to transfer himself from bed to wheelchair for a daily tour of the yard around his Virginia Beach home. More than two years ago this decorated Marine retiree was given less than a year to live. Prior to his MS diagnosis he was Assistant to the Director of the Virginia Beach Data Processing Office. Copes was especially honored by the presentation of his diploma from St. Leo's at his Virginia Beach home by the surprise graduation party with friends and well-wishers and by the presentation made by 2nd District Congressman G. William Whitehurst.

In making the awards Burling said, "These achievements of themselves would deserve recognition. There appear to be few obstacles too great for either of these individuals to overcome."

Godfrey Attends Conference

Rebecca J. Godfrey, daughter of Virginia Beach residents Burt and Jane Godfrey, 505 Buffer Court, Lakeside, who is residing in Baltimore and working at Johns Hopkins Hospital, was one of 2,500 physician assistants, educators, pharmaceutical company representatives and other supporters of the profession in attendance at the recently held Tenth Annual Physician Assistant Conference held in Washington, D.C., at the Hilton Hotel.

Learn To Paint In 20 Minutes

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Reporter

"I can teach you to paint in twenty minutes" the lady on the phone said one day not too long ago. Right. This woman may be bonkers, I thought.

Yet the more we talked about Carmel Havemann and the Robert H. Garden "dirty brush" painting method, the more intrigued I became about the prospect of doing a story on it. Next thing I knew, the artist and her agent were in the Sun office teaching me how to paint.

"What do you want to paint?" Carmel asked. "Something beachy," I responded. "No problem," she said, and moments later we were busily slapping burnt sienna and other hues of oil paint upon our canvases, creating miniature Virginia Beaches.

Havemann will conduct paint-along workshops of the Garden method of painting next week at the Virginia Beach pavilion Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 10 a.m. Additionally, Havemann will conduct public demonstrations of the revolutionary rapid technique and complete an oil painting in 30 minutes at Walden Bookstore in Lynnhaven Mall this Friday from 7:30 a.m. Further information can be obtained by calling 460-4166.

Havemann calls her method of instruction nothing more than "basic fundamentals." Believe me, it certainly was easy.

The strategy is to employ the painting technique devised by Garden nearly 20 years ago. "This technique teaches even the novice who has never held a paint-brush how to paint and complete an oil painting in just one three-hour paint-along session," Havemann said. And she wouldn't lie. My beach painting took slightly more than 25 minutes from start to finish.

The instant oil paintings are achievable, Havemann says, because the Garden technique "is simply a matter of following instructions mixed with a goodly portion of desire. 90 percent of art talent is having the desire," she said.

Havemann, a Texas native, utilizes a retouch varnish that is a fast-drying art medium which makes it possible to start and finish a painting in one setting. "This allows students to gain confidence because they see the finished product so quickly," she said.

Confidence I'm not so sure of. Talent, there's no question about. After seeing what I produced the other day, you can be sure you'll be paying a lot more than 25 cents some day for anything with a Gooding signature on it.

Virginia Beach Commonwealth Attorney Paul A. Sciortino

Prosecutor Proud of Record

Sun Staff Writer

J. Edgar Hoover, the late director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is immortalized behind a glass frame which hangs unobtrusively in the office of Virginia Beach's commonwealth's attorney.

To Paul A. Sciortino, best wishes, J. Edgar," it reads. Surrounding that, dozens of diplomas, citations and plaques from such institutes of higher learning as St. John's, Hofstra, and Old Dominion, Nova and Golden Gate Universities adorn the prosecutor's walls, emphasizing to all who enter the room that Sciortino, a former F.B.I. agent, stands for law and order. For those who doubt this, the 53-year old Brooklyn native has a stern warning:

"I don't lose."
He says he is eight-for-eight in jury trials since sweeping his Democratic opponent and former boss, Andre Evans in an election last fall for the job. It was a campaign marked by emotion-packed attacks, insults and name-calling. In the end, however, Sciortino lived up to his claim.

He did not lose.
A final tally of votes showed Sciortino capturing 29,275, while Evans

Senator Wants City To Pay For Party

BY LEE CAHILL
Sun Reporter

Senator Joseph Canada's houseparty for State legislators may turn out to have been City Council's party — in part, at least.

The City "has been asked" to pay for the cost of food for 50 people on Friday night and 120 people on Saturday of the June 11-13 week-end.

Who did the asking still isn't clear. However, City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck included a letter dated June 3 in the Council members' agenda packages stating that the city had been asked to pay the $2500. Muehlenbeck, who took over as city manager on June 1, said that if any agreement to pay on the city's part had been made, it was made before he took over.

Vice Mayor Harold Heinsober who presided at Monday afternoon's Council meeting in the absence of Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Jr., said that the matter was not discussed at any Council meeting or executive session. He said he received the letter as he presumed did other Council members but when no one said anything, he assumed that consent was implied.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said she never read the letter. It was distributed during a period when she had illness in the family and regular agenda items took all her time, she said. She received an invitation to Evans had served as commonwealth's attorney since 1970; Sciortino was with him the entire time, heading the Major Offender's Bureau. Sciortino was transferred from that post early last spring for supposed "poor performance" according to Evans. Sciortino charged the move was politically-motivated, particularly because the switch was made after Republican party backers had approached him about running for the office.

Evans repeatedly questioned Sciortino's credentials throughout the race, saying Sciortino "has tendencies to insult judges, both in circuit and lower courts." Evans added that Sciortino's legal "ability is limited." Evans said Sciortino had misrepresented the number of cases he actually tried in order to lend credence to his self-labeled nickname, "the street-sweeper," a title at which Evans laughed.

The race was one of the more expensive in beach history, with Sciortino having spent more than $30,000 on the effort and Evans shelling out more than $24,000. During the campaign's final week, Evans launched an investigation into Sciortino's personal finances "to make sure there were no misappropriations." Sciortino said that act demonstrated to the voters Evans "wasn't playing by the rules," and he suggested it may have cost Evans the election.

Tough But Fair

"Tough but fair" — that is how Sciortino describes himself in his role in the '49,176 per year job. He believes in imposing stiff penalties for crimes, even when they are committed by first-time offenders. He has a reputation among rival attorneys as unyielding in plea bargaining negotiations. "When one person jeopardizes the life of another, in those type of cases that person ought to go to the penitentiary whether it is the first offense or not," Sciortino says.

The tough guy image did not always precede Sciortino. Once upon a time, he was in private practice on Long Island where he "became a target for sob stories." Subsequently, Sciortino performed many free legal services and made little money. He gave up law practice to join the FBI as a special agent from 1961 through 1967. He again went into private practice, this time in Virginia Beach, but again, became disenchanted with the administrative headaches. Wanting to be a trial lawyer, Sciortino went to work for Evans and the commonwealth's attorney's office in 1970 on a part-time basis. In 1973, Sciortino persuaded Evans that the city's prosecutors needed to work full-time, and soon thereafter, the Virginia General Assembly passed a statute which required full-time employment for prosecutors.

Another Sciortino innovation is the rotation of the city's 12 prosecutors, himself included, throughout the circuit, general district and juvenile and domestic courts, a change he implemented after the election. "It all has to do with leadership," Sciortino explains. "And the best form of leadership is through example. For years, they used juvenile court as a training ground for inexperienced lawyers. If I took all the glamorous murder trials myself, that wouldn't leave anything to give to my other prosecutors. It's also kind of an ego thing. If the younger (See SCIORTINO, Page 3)

Sciortino Has Respect of Colleagues

No one would know Commonwealth's Attorney Paul A. Sciortino and his abilities better than those who work with and oppose him in the courtroom. Last week, the Virginia Beach Sun conducted a random sampling of some of the area's leading legal experts and asked them to assess the Virginia Beach prosecutor. Here is what they had to say:

Robert E. Kowalsky, Jr., Chesapeake's commonwealth's Attorney: "Paul does enjoy an excellent reputation among lawyers as a trial attorney. He's a very likeable person. I'm sure his background in the F.B.I. has been very helpful and enabled him to gain the respect and confidence of police officers at the beach. Virginia Beach is fortunate to have Paul as commonwealth's attorney. He's done a good job."

Chris Christie, partner, Decker and Christie, attorneys at law, of Norfolk: "He's very fiery, he never plays dead, and he's sometimes very difficult to deal with as far as the defense is concerned. In my estimation, the vast majority of our citizen's want a commonwealth's attorney to be tough with criminals, particularly those who commit violent crimes, so Paul is really serving his constituency well."

"I've had to do plea bargains with Paul and he has been tough. I don't think a prosecutor's success rate indicates any great ability because 97 percent of the people he's prosecuting are probably guilty. He has a good staff, and I like that Paul is out there trying cases. Compared to other commonwealth's attorneys, Paul rates well, but the proof is in the pudding. He hasn't been there very long. Let's assess him after a few more years."

Gregory M. Pomije, Por-

smouth's commonwealth's attorney: "I remember when Paul and I attended a conference at Hilton Head, S. C. and we were in a small group together. We were discussing prosecutorial burnout. Paul said he counteracted the daily pressures of the office by becoming active in other aspects of the community such as becoming active in local youth groups. He said it helped him to get out and work with teenagers who could become tomorrow's leaders. That impressed me, that he would take time to work with the youths. He's a very busy man and I think that's a healthy way of balancing out the daily routine."

"Paul does have a good reputation as a trial lawyer. I know that some Norfolk assistant commonwealth's attorneys left to go to Virginia Beach to work when Sciortino was elected. The fact that they would leave their posts to go work with Paul speaks well of him."

Peter Legler, Virginia Beach public defender: "Nobody is going to be willing to say what he really believes because we have to work with him for the next four years. People with negative things to say are not going to say anything because Sciortino holds a lot of power."

"Generally, Paul's plea bargaining is more rigid than it need be. I don't see the need to drive the defendant's back into the wall, just as long as we have a reasonable expectation that he will pay back the injured party without having to steal to do so."

"I will say that there have been many good things instituted by Paul, but most people have not seen that much of a difference between the commonwealth's attorney's office under Paul or under Andre Evans."

City Manager Says

Virginia Beach Like Many Young Cities Seeking Direction

Sun Staff Report

Virginia Beach City Manager Thomas Muchlenbeck recently made his first public speaking appearance before 215 people at a Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce breakfast program entitled "Beach Briefs."

Among the topics he discussed was community cohesiveness, or sometimes because the city is only 20 years young, the lack there of.

"Virginia Beach is like many communities that are growing rapidly and seeking direction," Muchlenbeck said. "There is much discussion and negotiation which reflects that various groups in the city are also looking for direction. That is not uncommon for a community of this type. There are a lot of groups providing input through informal and formal processes and that is healthy."

What is the key to making the best use of this input?

"Keeping channels of communication open," Muchlenbeck answers, "and making sure the community concerns are listened to and provided for. I will assist City Council in interpreting these concerns. Council will take the leading, or cutting edge in getting the things done. I will provide professional guidance."

Chamber officials who attended the breakfast indicate that Muchlenbeck has a very good feel for the Virginia Beach community.

"He has a definite feel about Virginia Beach's need for community unity," one official said, "and the need for the different factions in the community to work together, emphasizing recreation, a high quality of life, climate and a good school system. He knows Virginia Beach has much to offer."

The next "Beach Briefs" will be held on July 16, location undetermined.

Speakers will include Virginia Beach attorney Dick Brydges, a member of the state highway commission and Jack Hodge, a district traffic engineer. They will discuss roads.

Sciortino Strives For Justice And First Time Convictions

guys are given murder cases, it boosts their egos. Besides, by rotating to each of the courts, it gives me an opportunity to see what's going on there. If I don't ever do any work in juvenile court, it would be much more difficult to appreciate the problems there.

"For the commonwealth's attorney to be effective," Sciortino says, "he must be able to relate to the courts, the officers and the public. He has to be visible and he has to be accessible."

Part of being effective, Sciortino says, is enjoying your work. Sciortino says he thrives on it. "There is nothing like a murder trial. The satisfaction comes when you see the results of all the hard work."

Murder cases and other crimes of violence routinely take a year or more, yet Sciortino says the wait is worthwhile. "When it is finally over and you've convicted that criminal, and you see the look in the victim's eyes, a look of relief, of thanks, that is when it all pays off."

Occasionally, Sciortino does not win. How does that feel? "Miserable," he concedes. "I've had a few cases where I was convinced I had proven the guilt. There was no question in my mind. I don't prosecute anyone unless I'm sure I've got a case. But there's been a few times when for some reason the courts dismissed the case. In those instances, I figured I'd done the best I could and the defendant just had the grace of God."

Sciortino strives for first-time convictions and harsh sentences because he believes they are the best methods for maintaining order and justice. "I'm a firm believer that there is a child inside of all of us," he says, "and you can't discipline children without punishment. If you commit a grievous crime, the punishment which is exacted must equal the severity of the crime."

Sciortino lists a number of offenses he considers so serious in nature that prison sentences ought to be mandatory, including murder, arson, rape, malicious assault and drunk driving.

"I don't have any sympathy for a guy who gets caught driving while intoxicated," Sciortino says. "On a humanitarian level, I do sympathize for him if he killed somebody because he has to live with that knowledge the rest of his life. He still ought to be convicted, do some jail time and maybe get his license suspended." Sciortino added the ASAP program is not an effective deterrent to drunk driving.

Overloaded Dockets

Another aspect of Virginia Beach's criminal justice system with which Sciortino is dissatisfied is the overloaded docket of pending cases. Currently, there are 1,456 cases awaiting trial, 720 in circuit court, 500 in general district court and 236 in juvenile and domestic court. While 215 cases were closed in May, another 313 were opening, placing additional strain on the city's six judges. Moreover, Sciortino says delays in expediting criminal procedure defeats the purpose of the system because those convicted may not be able to relate the sentence with the crime. "It is very difficult for someone to commit a crime and 14 months later go to jail," he says.

Sciortino added that Virginia Beach has a "very good court system," but many of the problems result from actions of defense attorneys. "They are always calling for continuances which I feel are unnecessary," he says. "I don't know too many guys in defense work who represent innocent clients anyhow, so I do not understand the need for the continuances. All they do is create a backlog in the courts."

Peter Legler, the city's public defender, squarely places the blame for slow-ups in the legal system with Sciortino. "Paul needs to be more flexible when bargaining with crimes of property," Legler said. "By refusing to drop some charges, he is slowing everything up. What is the point of insisting upon eight convictions when four would do the job? In either case, the defendant winds up in jail, a convicted felon with no civil rights. Negotiations are important in law procedures, and the way he is operating now, it does not seem to be efficient."

To Sciortino, however, the final measuring stick of efficiency is his conviction rate, a figure he says hovers around the 97 percent mark. High success in this area is fundamental, Sciortino says, because crime is only going to get worse. "We are faced with a situation of a continual rise in crime annually; it is going up 10 percent every year," he said. "The people are constantly complaining about it, so it is up to somebody to do something."

Paul Sciortino obviously thinks he is that somebody.

Manufacturer Held Accountable

Fedders Of N.J. Takes The Blame

Sun Staff Writer

Under terms of an agreement reached last month with the state attorney general's office, a New Jersey-based air conditioner and heat pump manufacturer has agreed to make repairs to or financially reimburse home owners for faulty units sold in Virginia Beach between January 1, 1976 and December 31, 1980. All claims must be made by July 15.

"After that," says Virginia Beach Consumer Affairs officer John Jupin, "owners are going to be out of luck."

Fedders Corporation, maker of Fedders, Airtemp and Climatrol air conditioners and heat pumps, has assented to an "Assurance of Voluntary Compliance" with Attorney General Gerald R. Baliles. The settlement was reached following more than 40 complaints to the city's consumer affairs division from dissatisfied beach owners of Fedders units. Further investigation by Jupin's office unearthed an additional 200 disgruntled local owners, and led to the out-of-court settlement. The company agreed to repair, replace or provide reimbursement for 40,000 units in the state.

"I'm not satisfied with the Fedders product," says Marion Bashford, owner of five of the company's models. Bashford, who, along with her husband, owns and operates Hope Haven, a Virginia Beach refuge for orphans, adds that she "would never recommend a Fedders air conditioner to anyone. Not only does it break down too often, even when it is working it does not cool a room sufficiently. When I've got six people in a room, and the Fedders is going full blast, it is still sweltering in the room."

According to Jupin, Bashford and other owners of the units have a number of options open to them, depending upon individual circumstances. Generally, if one owns a Fedders model, files a written claim by July 15, and his unit has experienced at least one failure of a component of the hermetic system during the original five-year limited warranty period, he is eligible for restitution.

First, the unit in question must be hermetic in nature. Official provisions from the attorney general's office define such a system as consisting of "the compressor, evaporator coil, condenser coil, accumulator, reversing valve, inter-connecting tubing, loss-of-pressure control, high-pressure control, and service valves. "No other type of unit is subject to the agreement.

Second, there are four situations under which one can gain relief: non-functioning units, functioning units, replaced units, and reimbursement for repair expenses.

Fedders will repair non-functioning units at no cost to the owner and do "whatever is necessary to prevent further failure" according to the attorney general's office. Repair is dependent upon owners assuming responsibilities to correct installation deficiencies or equipment mis-matches, however. Should either of these circumstances occur, the manufacturer must give written notice why such corrections must be made. After all work to non-functioning units is completed, Fedders will issue a one-year limited warranty beginning on the date the unit is repaired.

For functioning units, Fedders will issue a one-year limited warranty beginning May 7, 1982, the day when the agreement with the state was reached.

If an owner replaced his unit before May 7, Fedders will pay him a pro rata refund, based upon the original purchase price of the unit including installation. For instance, if a unit was replaced in 1976, Fedders will reimburse the owner 50 percent of the original purchase price. For each subsequent year, Fedders will pay an additional 10 percent of the purchase cost. If replacement occurred in 1980, for example, Fedders is obligated to refund 90 percent of the owner's cost.

Owners may be reimbursed for repair expenses they absorbed as well. If an owner's unit had two or more failures during the original five-year warranty period, Fedders will reimburse him for costs of repairs made prior to May 7, provided payment for such repairs was made on or before that day. An owner can, however, receive reimbursement if he had originally agreed to pay, but the bill came after May 7, provided repairs were performed within 30 days of the receipt of the bill.

Jupin strongly suggests customers maintain all records of transactions, and provide photo-copies when filing claims. Service receipts and cancelled checks are considered adequate documentation of expenses, he said.

Further information and proper claims forms can be obtained from the city's consumer affairs division at the Municipal Center. Jupin can be reached by calling 427-4421.

To contact Fedders directly, write or call William Carter or Shelly Deblin, coordinators, Consumer Affairs, Fedders Corporation, Edison, New Jersey, 08810, (202) 549-7200.

To contact the attorney general, write or call the office's division of Consumer Affairs, 101 North Eighth Street, Richmond, 23219, (804) 786-3564.

Jupin emphasized the importance of meeting the July 15 deadline. "If the people do not file by then," he said, "there is absolutely nothing this office can do to help them out. With all the development going on in Virginia Beach, I wouldn't even venture to guess how many thousands of people may be affected by this. We really want to make sure they call us."

All Types of Businesses

Chamber Boasts The Beach's Best

Sun Staff Writer

The farmer in Blackwater, it seems, would have little, if anything, in common with the hotel owner on Atlantic Avenue or the restaurateur in Green Run. Yet, through efforts of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, representatives from these three factions in addition to people from many other beach business establishments are now working hand-in-hand to better the community.

It was not always thus. Until five years ago, the chamber only catered to the oceanfront hospitality businessmen and virtually ignored the other segments of the city's business community. What the chamber found in doing so, however, was that it was failing to keep pace with the ever-growing metropolis this 19 year-old city was becoming.

So, an effort was made by the organization's leadership to re-define the chamber's objectives. The primary goal is, and always has been, to serve the Virginia Beach community. Dating back to the chamber's founding in 1936, this objective has always been strived for, but the group found it was not achieving its goal because it was ignoring the vast majority of businesses it was designed to serve.

Today, the chamber incorporates business leaders from virtually every imaginable facet of the business world, and boasts a membership which exceeds 1,000 card-carriers. Besides those professionals usually thought of as businesses in the traditional sense—retail stores, hotels and restaurants, many other establishments now encompass the chamber's membership: house painters, insurance salesmen, lawyers, pier owners, auto repair shops. The list goes on. It is important to note here that the chamber does not accept every businessman that attempts to join its ranks. A thorough investigation into a business's past is conducted, and those who are discovered to have unsavory reputations are refused admittance. The best of Virginia Beach's businesses, then, make up the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

This is important because the chamber is involved in a great many endeavors of significance to the city. Commissions study various topics of municipal concern and make suggestions to City Council regarding possible solutions. Areas of utmost concern to the chamber include the city's dwindling water supply, mass transportation, road improvements, and water pollution in the region. Further, the chamber devotes much energy into community events such as the Neptune Festival, the Atlantic Fleet Sailor of the Year competition, and the annual senior citizen's ball.

Members join the chamber of commerce primarily because they are civic-minded, and because they wish to improve their hometown. However, membership in the chamber provides lucrative opportunities to those involved. Professional contacts are made there as businessmen mingle with one another. Also, businessmen are afforded the opportunity to influence the states' law-makers, as the beach's chamber is known to carry much weight in Richmond.

All in all, the chamber's move to broaden its confines, and allow all types of businesses to join has proven to be smart. As the city continues to grow, its institutions such as the chamber must reflect that change. If the chamber can stimulate the community, and the community responds in a positive fashion, both parties will thrive together. Recognizing that, the commerce has shown that it has a great deal of business savvy.

Sciortino has Unenviable Job

BY MIKE GOODING
Sun Staff Writer

Commonwealth's Attorney Paul Sciortino is in a rather unenviable position. No matter how good a job he does, there will always be those who harshly criticize him. Such is the nature of being a public servant.

He makes nearly $50,000 per year, yet one has to wonder if the financial compensation is reward enough for enduring such second-guessing. Law enforcement officials, on one hand, claim too many criminals are getting off the hook, and Sciortino is often the brunt of such complaints. Defense attorneys, who represent those Sciortino prosecutes, say the 53 year-old New Yorker is too tough, is uncompromising, and is a major obstacle in the way of a more smoothly operating criminal justice system in Virginia Beach.

These accusations are very debatable. Sciortino's office has a remarkable record of efficiency when it comes to convictions, getting nine guilty verdicts every ten times it prosecutes.

Leadership has been a focus of Sciortino's ever since he assumed office after beating his former boss, Andre Evans in an election for the position last year. He has taken it upon himself to participate in all three of the city's courts; circuit, general district and juvenile. Commonwealth's attorneys, as a rule, only involve themselves in the flashiest trials, in that the position is an elected one and headlines are very important to some. Sciortino feels he must visit all the courts to gain a better understanding of them. Also, he proceeds with this practice because it allows the younger attorneys on his staff to take part in the glamour trials which they normally would not prosecute if Sciortino were to hog the limelight.

He does not, and that is to his credit and to the city's benefit. As a peer of Sciortino's told the Sun, "Virginia Beach is fortunate to have Paul Sciortino as commonwealth's attorney."

No Story Too Large or Small for Weekly

Sun Editor

Let's talk a minute about community newspapers. It's sad, very sad that some Virginia Beach residents, business people, and even community leaders don't fully understand and appreciate the importance of community newspapers.

If not for community newspapers, such as The Virginia Beach Sun, The Chesapeake Post or Portsmouth's Times Advocate, for example, the unselfish, civic-minded efforts of thousands of local people anxious would go unheralded. That would be an outright shame.

Community newspapers do not seek negativity. Neither do most of them rely in luring local leaders. Instead, community newspapers provide a platform for the diversified elements of a community large or small, to proudly publicize their particular activities which times would receive no ink in daily newspapers.

There is no story too insignificant or too important for a community newspaper to address. Community newspapers pride themselves on publishing announcements, and news stories which other newspapers, such as the Virginian-Pilot or Ledger-Star, or their most successful supplement, The Beacon, would not print.

Many, many times The Sun newsroom receives phone calls from anyone from P.T.A. presidents or Chamber of Commerce officials to garden club secretaries, to oceanfront innkeepers inquiring if we will look into a concert, or run a follow-up story on an event that had been flatly refused by the fusion dailies, or The Beacon. Now, don't get us wrong. The Beacon, The Ledger and The Pilot do a good job. But just as the hebdomadal newspaper is not designed to compete with a daily's format, a daily or thrice weekly cannot compete with a weekly. Daily and weekly publications have distinctively different responsibilities to their readers.

Anyone who dismisses community newspapers as nugatory need to re-evaluate their intellectual capacity. Anyone who charges that "there's nothing good to read in a community newspaper" is admitting that they have no concern for community awareness, activities, or community perpetuation.

The Virginia Beach Sun is well aware of its community service role in the city of Virginia Beach. In addition, The Sun also prides itself on its investigative feature articles it pursues.

The Sun is proud to serve the Virginia Beach community in a way unequalled in this affluent, littoral resort city, a city which has been judged as one of the 10 best cities in America in which to live. And what makes a city an attractive, appealing place in which to live and work? It's the community, its image, its schools, and its public leaders, and its pride.

Six-Part

Beach Community Chapel Showing Biblical Films

God's Pattern For Living," a six-part 16mm film seminar with John MacArthur, Jr., is being shown at Virginia Beach Community Chapel 1261 Laskin Rd. Produced by the Moody Institute of Science, a ministry of Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, these films present the Biblical mandate for the Christian family. Dr. John MacArthur, Jr., well-known pastor, author, radio and conference speaker, offers Biblical solutions to the issues that are breaking today's homes apart.

Each 50-minute film is introduced by Assistant Chief of Police of Los Angeles, Robert L. Vernon, who prepares the audience for Dr. MacArthur's message.

Each film addresses a different topic. "God's Pattern For Relationships" presents an overview of the specific roles of individual family members, and the necessity for submission to God's authority. "God's Pattern For Wives," and "God's Pattern For Husbands," focus on the Biblical roles of the man and woman in the marriage relationship. "God's Pattern For Children," and "God's Pattern For Parents," examines the interrelationships between children and parents in the Christian home. The final title, "God's Pattern Broken—Divorce and Remarriage," faces a difficult subject with sensitivity and Biblical perspective.

It's A Birthday Party

Since this is the year neighboring Norfolk is observing its 300th birthday, newer Virginia Beach residents may be surprised to learn that they too have an anniversary to celebrate.

It was 375 years ago this week that the Jamestown expedition landed at Cape Henry before journeying up the James to found the first permanent English settlement in America.

On April 26, 1607, shortly before dawn, observers aboard the Sarah Constant, Godspeed and Discovery, spotted the entrance to the Chesapeake Bay and made a landing somewhere in the neighborhood of what is now either Fort Story or Seashore State Park.

Norfolkians Don't Know They Exist

Savvy Beachers, Tourists Flip Over Hot Cakes

Sun Down

by
SANDS

The house is Pascal's. The band is Hot Cakes. Every Tuesday through Saturday on the southwest corner of Laskin and Pacific, Hot Cakes is the best house band in the world.

This talented quintet has been playing steadily at Pascal's since Thanksgiving of 1980. Over the past twenty months savvy locals and lucky tourists have learned this secret. With no publicity this band draws an unbelievable number of loyal fans night after night. These rabid admirers rush to see Hot Cakes just because they are so darned good and are such incredible fun. In a room that is the perfect size for intimacy the band often jokes and communicates personally with the people. The great time that the band is having rubs off on the audience, and everybody has a great time together. It's the people and the people's band at a Boy Scouts jamboree every night.

The members of the band are Dave Britt, Eddie Castillo, Rick Craft, Randy Pope, and Bobby Smith. Dave Britt plays trumpet, sings lead vocals, and does some major clowning around. Eddie Castillo, drummer and vocalist, became a Hot Caker two and a half years ago after being discovered in Key West while the band was on tour. Rick Craft, the music theorist in the group, plays piano and synthesized keyboards. Randy Pope plays lead guitar and sings. Richmond's Bobby Smith breathes his bass guitar.

Hot Cakes sticks pretty strictly to top forty tunes because that's what they and their fans both love. Top forty today can mean a wide variety of music. Some songs performed by Hot Cakes are "What's He Got" by the Producers, "Ghetto Life" by Rick James, the Whispers' "Emergency," the Go-Go's "We Got the Beat," Stevie Wonder's people pleasing, "Do I Do," and a potpourri of Rick Springfield hits. The band learns eight to ten new songs each month. Two of their new songs include the recent number one soul song, "Let It Whip," by the Dazz band and the new number one hit by the Human League, "Don't You Want Me, Baby." Many people go to hear Hot Cakes to find out what music is being played nowadays. Being a house band has the advantage of allowing the band to have a smashing sound system. The music is clear and clean.

Thursday night is typically locals night at Pascal's. Last Thursday night my date wanted dessert and that means a megacraving for Hot Cakes. As we entered Pascal's we spotted the famous flapjacks flipping about the stage. A local lawyer who had been debating his client's case in court that morning was now booging full force before the court of Hot Cakes where one is found guilty if one is not worked into a rock and roll frenzy. When the dance ended the attorney came over and confessed, "There are more lawyers in this place on a Thursday night than make it to most meetings of the bar. Maybe we should hold our bar meetings here."

We looked up a Steve Arcese, formerly of that great local band, Mason, and now proprietor of Pascal's, took the stage to sing Peabo Bryson's "Falling in Love" and "Just Once" by Quincy Jones. It was jawdropping fantastic. The fans went wild. As Steve stepped off the stage to much applause the band literally leapt into a fiery Loverboy song. Hot Caker Bobby plunged out of the pan into the crowd and cavorted with the contorting link sausages sizzling and frying on the dance floor. The afore-mentioned attorney fell on the stage at Dave Britt's feet and stretched his pleading arm to the microphone. Four strips of bacon jumped up next to Randy Pope and started chanting, "Everybody's working for the weekend." The quiet artist, Rick Craft, simply continued the best keyboarding ever heard. They played "Superfreak." They played "Physical." Then, just when everyone was temporarily rocked out, Eddie Castillo steps from behind his blazing drums and croons Al Jarreau's "Teach Me Tonight" like a young Nat King Cole. It's the best dessert in the resort city.

The oldest and wisest member, Randy Pope, said the band decided to stop playing the club circuit and settle down at Pascal's. According to Pope the band gets along better than anyone would believe. Everybody "fits together like a glove and keeps each other in line. If someone is off beat, everyone follows the drummer. If the drummer is off beat, we're in trouble. We stop and just say we were kidding. We love our fans, and we love Virginia Beach. Norfolkians don't know we exist."

Well, Hot Cakes won't be mentioned on an airplane banner, but they do exist at Pascal's, and they are cooking away. See you after the Sun goes down.

HOW THE BBB BEGAN

Approximately one hundred years ago, the seeds of industrial growth in the United States began to flourish. Homesteaders poured west to take up land claims; the great railroads spanned the continent; open-hearth fires glowed in the steel mills that pounded out the sinews of a burgeoning nation. It was the age of the industrial titan. And the chief concern of many Americans was to apply their energies to exploiting the continent, and each other.

These were days of unrestrained commerce, with a philosophy of caveat emptor (let the buyer beware) prevailing. It was up to the buyer to keep from being swindled.

Goods were advertised in a free-wheeling, P.T. Barnum style, without code or standards. The con men of the day advertised "Complete Sewing Machines for 25 Cents," and mailed out twelve needles in cambric packages to the

Britain's Best Coming To Beach

"Squeeze is only the number one group in England," said Virginia Beach concert promoter Billy Douthal, president, Whisper Concerts, Inc. "We're very fortunate to be able to bring them to Virginia Beach. Squeeze is not real well known here, but I'm sure after they play here no one will soon forget them."

Squeeze will appear in the Virginia Beach Dome on Thursday, June 24 at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at all Select-A-seat locations and at the door. More information can be obtained by calling 428-4556.

Squeeze

Few new groups in recent memory have enjoyed the kind of reception Squeeze drew with their acclaimed fourth LP, "East Side Story", produced by Elvis Costello. "East Side" was the occasion for celebration last summer, as the young British band won critical comparisons to Lennon & McCartney, Gilbert & Sullivan and all manner of classic pop creators.

Not surprisingly, it was the comparisons—especially the well-played hit single "Tempted"—that took center stage, and composers Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook who took the honors. The welcome surprise of "Sweets From A Stranger" is that Difford and Tilbrook's songs build upon the accomplishments of "East Side Story" and that Squeeze the band—Chris, Glenn, drummer Gilson Lavis, bassist John Bentley and keyboarder Don Snow—truly comes into its own. The beauty of "Sweets" is that it's a perfectly realized works-and-music marriage, arranged and performed by musicians at the peak of their powers.

Aside from their performances, Squeeze co-produced "Sweets" with Phil McDonald. Phil's previous credits include engineering "Wings Over America", "Abbey Road", "Imagine", and many of Harry Nilsson's early LP's. His production and engineering skills have added a further dimension to the overall Squeeze sound.

Squeeze formed in 1973, through the Difford-Tilbrook songwriting team-up. By 1976, they'd signed on drummer Gilson and cut their "Packet Of Three" with John Cale producing. Their first A & M LP (Squeeze) (1978) followed, then came "Cool For Cats" (1979) which spawned English hits in "Up The Junction" and the title track.

Thoroughgood DAR Chapter Pays Homage To Washington

The Adam Thoroughgood Chapter of the DAR recently gathered at the Thoroughgood House to assist in the planting of a living memorial to the "Father of Our Country" George Washington.

This was in honor of Washington's 250th anniversary. He was born in 1732 on a farm in Westmoreland County. He planted many trees during his lifetime; in fact, he planted 13 horse chestnut trees in the yard of his mother's house in Fredericksburg, naming them for the 13 colonies. Later, at Mount Vernon, he established a "Friendship Grove" started from seedlings given by friends and neighbors.

"The dogwood tree was chosen because it was felt that it would enhance the beauty of the site and because the dogwood is the official state tree of Virginia, the home of George Washington," a chapter spokesman said.

Community, Military Communication

Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet, Norfolk.

Fetterman, Commander, Tactical Wings Atlantic, has imparted a special and exclusive message to the citizenry of Virginia Beach concerning the communication link between the local military and civilian community:

"This communication link is necessary for the morale of our military personnel and a positive and healthy atmosphere of the surrounding civilian community," Fetterman told The Sun.

"From my standpoint," the Pennsylvania native said, "it is an important ingredient in achieving our command goal of maximum operational readiness. And from a community standpoint, it fosters positive military involvement in civic affairs and reduces real and potential problem areas within the local community."

Councilwoman McClanan Pleads For Separation Of Powers

As any fourth-grade schoolboy knows, all governments are divided into three parts — the executive, the legislative and the judicial. But do the judges know that?

If they don't, Virginia Beach Councilwoman Reba McClanan thinks that it's time that they did.

At Monday afternoon's Council meeting she said that a subject "near and dear to my heart" is the "separation of powers of government. I don't particularly care for the judges who are part of the judicial, telling us what we (the legislative branch) should or should not be doing."

The judges of the General District Court had requested that police officers obtain the assistance of the city attorney's office in the prosecution of drinking under the influence (DUI), hit and run and other offenses which in the past have been presented in the courts by police officers. A new directive allows police officers to give direct testimony and eliminates the practice of having police officers question witnesses or defendants. The City Attorney's Office is needed to make sure these types of cases are properly presented.

At the request of the City Attorney, City Manager Thomas H. Muchlenbeck asked for additional staff to handle the new responsibility. Based on the workload two additional attorneys have requested for Fiscal Year 1983.

There's the rub. The city would have to foot the bill.

If judges all over the state are making similar requests, McClanan said, they should go to the State for the money. She also wanted to know whether the request stems from a "bureaucratic hustle," and said, "I can't vote for it. Since I've been on Council," she said, the judges seem to want a lot and seem to feel we'll grant it."

Councilman W. H. Kitchen III said he was "curious about when the directive came about and what background we've done."

Muchlenbeck said that he tried to address the request and City Attorney Dale Binson came up with the cost. The workload includes six to eight DUI and hit and run cases per day as well as arrests for reckless driving, license revocation, commercial vice, and drunk and disorderly offenses which may require the assistance of attorneys in prosecution. The cost is for two attorneys, one secretary and related costs. The Police Department estimates these cases will exceed 1200 in a calendar year.

Binson said that the City Attorney's Office has been on call but that what the courts want is full-time legal assistance.

Councilman E. T. Buchanan said that if the city can offer police assistance which will help to prosecute the cases successfully revenues from fines will help offset the costs.

Councilman John A. Baum, ever the quipster, remarked, "Instead of dealing with hoist policeman, hire a lawyer!"

Buchanan moved to continue the item for one week to give the city manager time to get some more answers. Council agreed.

Council Considers Navy Break

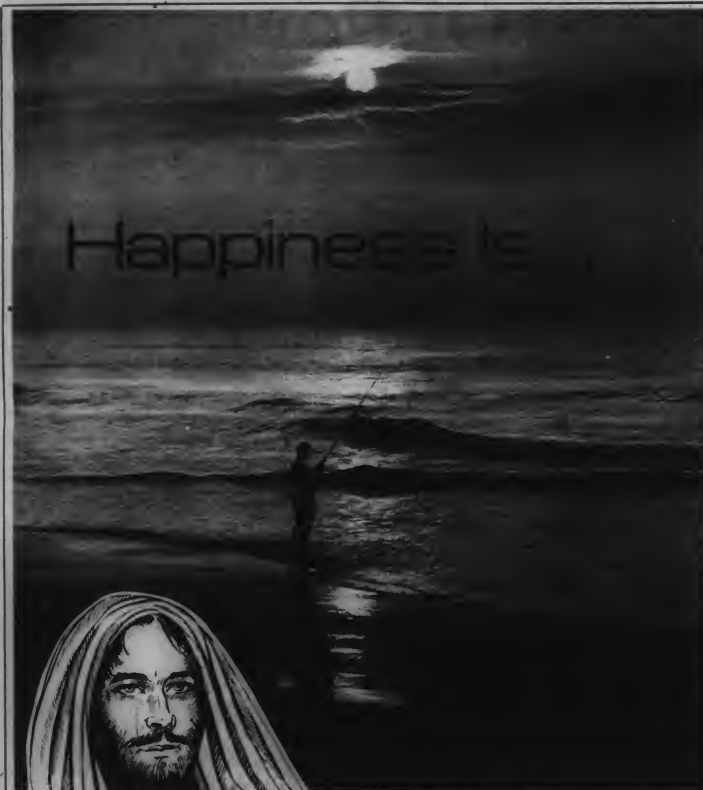

If the Navy leases private housing for use by Navy personnel instead of building its own housing, the property could remain on the tax rolls to produce revenue for the city.

As an added advantage, military personnel would not be segregated from the rest of the city in a housing project such as Carper in Kempesville.

At the suggestion of Councilwoman Mayera Oberndorf, Virginia Beach City Council next Monday will consider a resolution supporting changes in the Federal leased housing program which would encourage more leasing.

There's a great satisfaction in surf-fishing at sunset. Why? Is it because happiness is the serenity of the evening hours or is it because happiness is serenity?

Our moods as well as our interests determine what happiness is for each of us. And our emotions, our longings, our appreciation of nature—all play a part.

What we believe makes a difference, too. There are countless individuals for whom happiness is faith. And there are others who lack this spiritual ingredient and they wonder why they aren't happy.

A scene like this gains new dimensions when you think of the sea as God's creation . . . and of man as God's child.

Navy Neighbors Called 'World's finest'

At an informal session of Council Monday afternoon, Oberndorf said that a Southeastern Virginia Planning District Committee study in June 1981 shows that with the Navy buildup in the area, 48,000 new people are expected here within the next ten years, including, not only ship personnel, but support personnel and families. She said that the Federal government should be encouraged to distribute the personnel throughout the community.

Another study, the Analysis and Forecast of Southeastern Virginia Housing of January 1982 shows that rental vacancies are below two percent. She said that at the same time builders indicate that credit rates are so high they cannot afford to build.

Former City Manager George L. Hanbury wrote a letter to U.S. Rep. William Whitehurst last fall about the problem and an ad hoc committee was formed to make proposals to the Federal Government.

Oberndorf said the committee has proposed that the Navy, instead of purchasing land and building its own homes, thereby taking property off the market, lease private homes from developers on 25-year leases rather than a one-year lease and include multi-family as well as singly-family dwellings. The property would remain on the tax rolls or help pay for city services such as fire, police and schools, she said.

The average per unit cost of Navy housing is now $515 including utilities, maintenance and operation. The committee suggested an average monthly rate of $500 not including utilities, maintenance and operation with a ceiling of $800 a month.

She said that the housing in this way would come under state and local building codes which is not the case for federal housing and the property would remain on the tax rolls.

The law, of course, would be nation-wide. Some units in Virginia Beach are now leased by the military, Oberndorf said.

Oberndorf said that the minute "we ghetto-ize" any group it becomes "they and we."

"Our Navy neighbors are the finest in the whole world," she said, and without them the city's volunteer corps would suffer. But with the Federal government withdrawing impact funds for schools and other support, the city has to look for ways to make up the revenue she said.

Assistant to the City Manager David Grochmal who has been working on the leased housing program with Oberndorf, was directed to prepare a resolution for consideration by Council next week.

Oberndorf also reported on a meeting she attended in Wintergreen of the Virginia Endowment for Humanities. She said that people in other parts of the state are apprehensive about Virginia Beach permitting development without consideration of where water for the development will come from.

Canada Seeks Reimbursement

the Saturday night party and attended briefly before going to another engagement.

Other Council members present were McCoy, Reba McClannan and her husband, State Delegate Glenn McClannan; Dr. Clarence A. Holland and Mrs. Holland and Heischober and his wife. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Muehlenbeck; Dr. E.E. Brickell, superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Brickell, and Mac Rawls, executive director of the Virginia Beach Museum of Marine Sciences, and Mrs. Rawls.

Muehlenbeck, at an informal session Monday afternoon, said a citizen had called about the $2500 bill. He said that the city had not yet received the bill.

Oberndorf said that at the party in the Canada home she had remarked to her husband Roger on the generosity of the Canadas. During a discussion later with Heischober, she said she had asked who paid for the party. Heischober then said that Council had paid for the party and asked her if she had received the letter.

Oberndorf said she then got a copy of the letter from the city manager and found that the first page contained a schedule of activities. It was not until the second sentence of the first paragraph on the next page that any mention was made about the $2500.

She called Councilwoman Barbara Henley, who said that she had received the letter but hadn't read past the first page.

The citizen who had called Muehlenbeck was veteran Council-watcher Vivian Hitchcock.

The bill presumably could be paid by the city manager without any action by Council because it is under $10,000.

The week-end was planned, according to Muehlenbeck's letter, to provide a pleasant weekend which will allow the senators to see and enjoy Virginia Beach through means other than an organized tour and to allow members of Council and others to establish contact with the senators which may prove helpful when some of Virginia Beach's needs are before the upcoming General Assembly session. Foremost among those needs is the funding of the Virginia Beach Museum of Marine Sciences. A presentation on the museum was on the Saturday night program. The General Assembly failed to come through with funding during the last session.

All interested parties are urged to attend and give the Department the benefit of their comments and suggestions relative to the proposed highway improvement.

Maps, drawings, an environmental assessment, and other information are available for public review and copying in the Department of Highways and Transportation District Office located at 1700 North Main Street in Suffolk, in its Resident Office located at the intersection of Business Route 13 (Military Highway) and Route 168 in Chesapeake, and in the offices of the Directors of Public Works for the Cities of Norfolk and Virginia Beach.

Representatives of the Department will be present at the Newtown Elementary School Cafeteria from 4:30 to 6:30 P.M. on the afternoon of the Public Hearing, for an informal review of available information by interested citizens. Formerly 'Branch Libraries'

'Area Libraries' To Serve Community

Library SUNlines

Development Plan 1982."

This plan, which was approved in April by the Library Board, outlines the philosophy behind future library construction in the city. The core concept of the plan in the development of a new 90,000 square foot central library supporting and anchoring a system of smaller libraries serving specific geographic areas within Virginia Beach. The first step has already been taken by city council's recent approval to purchase the central library site. The next step will be to redesignate "branch libraries" as "area libraries."

As described in the "Capital Development Plan," the central library will be the principal public library facility in the city. While it will respond to the unique needs of its immediate geographic area, it will also provide access to a collection of materials designed to meet the needs of the specialized researcher. In addition, it will serve as a resource for the area libraries. Being, in effect, a backup for their smaller collections. As such, the central library will be the anchor of an extensive city-wide library service delivery system.

This does not mean that library officials plan to weaken the capabilities and resources of the area libraries. These facilities will continue to function as the first line of library service delivery throughout the city. They will continue to circulate a relatively large adult and children's materials collection, provide general reference services, make available current periodicals and newspapers and sponsor an ongoing program series. All of which is designed to meet the unique needs of the residents of each library's service area.

Hopefully, it is now apparent why the name change from "branch library" to "area library" is not just an exercise in word playing. Even though the Virginia Beach Public Library strongly advocates the construction of a central library, it does not plan to weaken the high quality of service presently provided at its current branches. By using the term "area library" in place of "branch library" the library system hopes to demonstrate its dedication to quality service at the regional or area level. It does not intend that its area libraries become mere branches of a megalthic main library, providing only minimum service. Instead, Virginia Beach citizens will have the best of all possible worlds with a large, comprehensive central library supporting strong, dynamic area libraries closely identified with and responding to the unique needs of Virginia Beach.

Business Bureau Now 100 Years Old

innocents who rose to the bait. A "bona fide" offer of a genuine, steel-engraved portrait of General Grant for 25 cents turned out, on receipt, to be a one-cent stamp. But these frauds were minor compared to the concoctions of alcohol compounds or opium derivatives sold to a trusting public as cure-alls "for man or beast." And then there were the guileless investors in land or stock promotions who seldom received even so much as a needle or a one-penny stamp for their money.

Honest businessmen therefore advertised cautiously, if at all - fearful lest the public lump them with promoters of patent medicines, oil stocks, gold mines and land speculation.

In 1872 Congress voted "Fraud Order" powers to the U.S. Postmaster General, enabling postal inspectors to go after the mail swindlers. This move, however, had little impact on advertising. Mail-order commerce was in danger of foundering on the shoals of dishonesty and mistrust.

Then, in 1909, one Samuel C. Dobbs, sales manager of a nationally known corporation and later president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, launched a crusade for honesty in advertising. By 1911 the crusade was making strides. John Irving Rorer, publisher of Printers Ink, persuaded a lawyer friend of his to draw up a model statute to deal with sharp practices, fraud and deception in advertising. Known as the "Printers Ink Statute," the law in one form or another has since been adopted by most states. It makes dishonest advertising illegal.

In that same year the Advertising Men's League of New York formed a "vigilance committee" to fight dishonesty in advertising. In 1912 the organization branched out into a National Vigilance Committee. Within a year most big cities had established such committees.

Many people wonder how the Better Business Bureau got its name. As vigilance committees formed and reformed, local groups tested various names. The name "Better Business Bureau" was among them, and it caught on rapidly. Within a decade it came into universal use and some tentative moves were made toward a federation of the vigilance committees and the Better Business Bureaus. That federation is known today as the Council of Better Business Bureaus.

The BBB movement became international in 1928 with the founding of the first Canadian Bureau; they number fourteen today. Later, Israel and Venezuela established Better Business Bureaus.

Over the years the Better Business Bureaus have forged for themselves a well-earned reputation, not only throughout the United States but around the world, for the protection of the consumer in initiating and maintaining ethical standards in advertising and selling practices and for the encouragement of self-regulation in the business community.

Rev. Mrs. Cheryl Harrison Davidson and President Lambuth M. Clarke.

Woman Is Named Wesleyan Chaplain

The first woman to serve as chaplain at Virginia Wesleyan College has been appointed by Bishop Robert M. Blackburn at the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church recently held in Virginia Beach.

The Rev. Mrs. Cheryl Harrison Davidson, a 33-year old clergywoman who has been serving as associate pastor of the Thalia United Methodist Church in Virginia Beach since last June, will assume her duties at the college this month. The Rev. Mr. Kenneth Wallace, who has served as VWC chaplain since June 1979, will become the coordinator for Methodist student ministry at Old Dominion University and Norfolk State University in June.

"We are delighted to welcome Cheryl Davidson" as chaplain at Virginia Wesleyan," says President Lambuth M. Clarke. "She comes as a well-trained and experienced minister who favorably impressed all the members of the college's interview committee. Each of us feels fortunate to have this creative minister as our first woman chaplain."

A native of Atlanta, Georgia, and a Virginia Resident since 1965, the Rev. Mrs. Davidson received a Bachelor of Science degree from Virginia Commonwealth University in 1972 and a Master of Divinity degree from Duke Divinity School in 1976. She also did further graduate study in clinical pastoral education at Duke University Medical Center in 1977.

Mrs. Davidson has been a member of the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church since 1977. She served as pastor of the two churches of the Sussex Charge in the Petersburg District from January 1978 to June 1981 before she became associate minister at the Thalia church.

In addition to serving churches, the Rev. Mrs. Davidson has been an active member at both the District and Conference levels. These activities have included serving as the Coordinator for Youth Ministries for the Petersburg District, and as a member of the Conference Council of Youth Ministries. Presently she is on the Conference Commission of Religion and Race and is a member of the Conference Task Force on Open Ministry. The latter committee, which involves interpreting the role of ordained women in the Conference, is sponsored by the Commission on the Status and Role of Women.

The new chaplain is married to the Rev. Mr. William George Davidson, a member of the Virginia Conference since 1974. Mr. Davidson is the minister at Good Hope United Methodist Church in Chesapeake.

Thomas B. Matthews, vice president and general manager of The Martin Agency, an advertising agency with offices in Richmond and Virginia Beach, has announced the promotion of two staff members: Deborah Bennett Isbrandtsen to production manager, and Bonnie Kay Shipp to assistant media buyer.

Isbrandtsen has been with the agency for four years, most recently as traffic manager.

Mayo To Head Va. Bar

Virginia Beach lawyers have learned that Alex T. Mayo, Jr., 39, of Portsmouth, has been recently chosen as president-elect of the 16,500-member Virginia State Bar, the administrative arm of the Supreme Court of Virginia responsible for regulating the practice of law in the state and to which all practicing lawyers in Virginia must belong.

The annual election, for a one-year term, took place during the 11:45 a.m. general membership Business Session of the State Bar's 44th Annual Meeting, June 17-20, at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn Hotels in Virginia Beach. More than 1,200 persons—over 600 Virginia lawyers and judges plus their spouses, families guests—are attending the four-day event.

Under Virginia State Bar bylaws, the president-elect automatically ascends to the office of president at the close of the Annual Meeting following the one at which he or she is chosen president-elect. Both offices carry a one-year term.

A native of Portsmouth, Mayo received his bachelor of arts degree in English from Princeton University in 1966 and his J.D. degree from the University of Richmond's T. C. Williams School of Law in 1970.

Mayo is a member of the Norfolk firm of Kaufman & Canoles.

Dog Laws Change

The City of Virginia Beach has recently revised its dog ordinances.

The new ordinances set the license fee for a spayed or neutered dog at $2 and for an unspayed or unneutered dog at $7. Before purchasing a license for a neutered or spayed dog, the citizen must present certification from a licensed veterinarian attesting to the neutering or spaying of the dog. If this verification is not presented the dog will be taxed the fee for unneutered and unspayed dogs.

These ordinances are in effect beginning July 1, 1982. For further information or for information regarding other fees which were increased, contact the Virginia Beach Police Department, Animal Control Bureau, at 427-4158.

Why People Buy Used Furniture

By CAROLE BRINKLEY

Inflation. Housing costs are up. Food prices are soaring. Educational costs are on the rise. Is there no such thing as a bargain anymore?...of course there is.

During this period of skyrocketing prices Virginia Beach residents can still find savings and quality when shopping for furniture - used or pre-owned furniture. Many people are finding fantastic buys when shopping for used furniture. Young couples just starting their homes and families, college kids setting up temporary housekeeping, and people of the lower income brackets are investing in furniture that has been previously owned. These people either don't want to, or simply can't pour a lot of money into home furnishings. They see used furniture as a way to cut costs, yet get quality in what they buy. But, these are not the only folks who shop for used furniture.

There are the people of higher incomes shopping for used furnishings today, too. They want the savings, but are interested mainly in quality. These people know that furniture made only 10 or 15 years ago is of much better craftsmanship.

Today, many pieces of furniture are put together with glue and staples instead of the sturdy dovetail joints that last longer and look nicer. Cardboard is replacing wooden bottoms and dust covers; masonite is replacing wooden backs. Today, veneering is used instead of good, solid wood, and more and more, we are seeing plywoods and pines being used. Years ago, furniture builders were using the harder, sturdier woods such as oak and walnut.

The styles that can be found in used furniture stores vary from the 18th century types to the merchandise of the present day. Styles ranging from Victorian to Oak to the Art-Deco of the '30's and '40's up through today's styles are available in the used shops.

Secondly, if you knew the difficulties people face with dentures, I'm sure you'd rather keep your own. Did you know that if your dentist made a set of dentures for you, and if they were the best dentures it was possible for anyone to make for you at that time, that you would only be able to function (eat with them) at less than 25% the efficiency you had with your own natural teeth? Well it's true. With dentures you can't begin to eat as well as with natural teeth.

Also, dentures are bulky and tend to alter the way you speak, at least until you get used to them. They also tend to make you salivate more. Please understand that dentures are a marvelous aid for those who need them, but if your dentist says your teeth can be saved, when you thought they had to come out, be very, very thankful.

Remember, dentures are not a replacement for teeth; they're a replacement for no teeth.

Canine Heatstroke Dogs' Can Be A Problem Killer

By PRINCESS ANNE VETERINARY HOSPITAL
JAMES G. KOLLAR V.M.D.

Canine heatstroke is a problem too often seen in veterinary hospitals during the hot summer months. Affected animals usually have been confined to a car or other enclosure without proper shade and ventilation or have undergone excessive exercise. There are several signs one must look for if he or she suspects heatstroke.

The first of these is a rise in body temperature preceded by excessive panting. A dog's major means of perspiring is through panting. It is wise for the pet owner to keep in the house a thermometer. If one suspects heatstroke, rectally take the temperature by leaving it in the rectum for 2 minutes. The normal temperature for a dog and cat is 101° or 102°. With heatstroke one normally sees a temperature of 106° or higher. Cats, originally from desert climates can tolerate higher temperatures, never the less they help cool themselves by spreading saliva over their hair to improve heat loss. However if stressed by the heat a cat will begin to pant also. Other signs include increased pulse, warm dry skin, vomiting, anxious expression, stupor, and lack of response to commands.

With heatstroke one must reduce the body temperature rapidly by immersing the animal in cool water, applying ice packs to the head and neck or running water over the dog with a garden hose. It is important to monitor the temperature closely and not reduce it below 103° or it will continue to fall below normal. A dog can tolerate temperature of 106° for only a few minutes before permanent brain damage occurs. Once you have reduced the temperature, call your veterinarian immediately.

Canine heatstroke is a very serious problem in a hot humid climate such as Tidewater. There are several precautions one can take to prevent this from occurring. Never leave a dog in an unventilated enclosure. When outdoors, some type of shade and fresh water should be available at all times and avoid excessive exercise in the heat of the day.

Spring Planting Means 'Chores'

By ROBERT CECCHINO, M.D.

With Spring planting and more outdoor chores coming fast upon many Virginia Beach residents I would like to pass on a few words of wisdom (despite my young age) about cuts and scratches.

I know very few people in this area who don't earn their livelihood through the use of their hands. Despite the importance of these instruments of work, I am surprised at the lack of respect given to them when fingers or other parts are cut and scratched with dirty tools or building supplies. I have lost count as far as numbers of hardworking outdoorsmen laid up in the hospital because their wounds "festered up" or "got red streaks going up the arm." Being in the hospital means no work and no income.

Such problems as this can be avoided to a great degree by attending to the injury shortly after it occurs. When it appears deep enough to have stitches have the medical people look at it.

If it doesn't need any stitches a good cleansing and a tetanus shot in the arm means your staying ahead of the game. If the cut or scratch is superficial clean it with hydrogen peroxide and keep it covered with dry dressing until it heals. When you see swelling, redness or have pains and warmth at the wound (OPPS!) it's too late and is probably infected. Have it taken care of as soon as possible before you wind up in that hospital bed!

This may all sound like simple stuff but judging by the number who are here to treat in the hospital for this problem it's good advice. Take Care!

By Dr. O.H. Bricker, III

Canine Parvovirus is a highly contagious intestinal disease characterized by vomiting and diarrhea (both sometimes severe and bloody), a high temperature and rapid dehydration. Onset of symptoms is sudden but usually preceded by the dog acting sluggish and indifferent and having a loss of appetite for a day or two.

The disease is not considered a threat to other species of animals or people.

At the first sign of symptoms it is imperative to the dog's recovery that immediate veterinary treatment be carried out.

The virus is spread primarily through contact with the feces and vomitus of an infected dog. It also can be carried on the skin, clothing and shoes of people. Antibiotics have no effect on viruses. Parvovirus is resistant to most detergents and alcohol and can withstand freezing and high temperatures. The virus is rapidly destroyed, however, by a chlorine solution, such as Clorox, diluted with water to a 1:30 solution or 1 oz. of Clorox to 30 oz. of water. This cleaning solution is not for internal consumption and is not recommended for contact with the skin.

Steps to protect your dog:

A vaccine for parvovirus is available to your veterinarian which will protect your dog after an initial series of vaccinations and subsequent vaccinations thereafter should start at 8 weeks.

Minimize contact with other dogs, especially their feces. This is particularly important where groups of dogs are assembled. If you have been exposed to dogs (especially in a "risk" situation) change clothes and clean your shoes with a chlorine solution before contact with your own pet.

The incubation period for parvovirus is three to twelve days. Seek immediate veterinary attention at the first indication that your dog is ill.

This relatively new disease doesn't warrant our fear but it does deserve our respect.

The Ins And Outs Of Arthroscopy

By THOMAS A. MEADE, JR., M.D.

Arthroscopy is the visualization inside a joint using an arthroscope. An arthroscope is a surgical instrument which acts as a telescope. It has a lens at one end and a fiberoptic light cable going through the scope which is used to illuminate the inside of the joint.

The arthroscope has a sheath surrounding it which allows either the flow of fluid into or out of the joint, which helps in the visualization of the interior of the joint. An arthroscope is used by a trained physician for diagnostic and for surgical procedures.

Originally, the arthroscope was just used for diagnostic evaluation of the inside of the joint; but more commonly used for the knee joint, but more recently being used for other joints, including the shoulder, elbow and ankle. With the revolutionary advance of specialized surgical equipment, surgery utilizing very small instruments is now possible using the arthroscope to visualize what is wrong inside the joint. Small instruments are used to try to remove abnormal tissue such as: a torn portion of meniscus, which is the cartilage within the joint, bony or cartilaginous loose bodies within the joint, or actual foreign bodies, such as a broken off needle or a bullet.

Diagnostic or surgical Arthroscopy is a surgical procedure that may be offered to you by your orthopedic surgeon once he has evaluated the problem that you are having with your joint. The procedure is usually done in the operating room under some form of anesthesia, most often general anesthesia. Diagnostic Arthroscopy can often be done as an out-patient, with the patient being able to go home the same day that he has the procedure done. Surgical Arthroscopy can sometimes be done as an out-patient, depending on what type of surgery is needed. The following technique is used for Arthroscopy in the operating room.

A tourniquet is used to stop the flow of blood to the operative site during the surgical procedure. Often a thigh immobilizer is used which helps the surgeon to manipulate the knee or joint involved so that good visualization of the inside of the joint can be obtained. This is accomplished under anesthesia so it is not painful to the patient.

The joint is infused with sterile saline, thereby expanding the joint capsule and allowing more space for the arthroscope in order to visualize the interior of the joint.

The Arthroscope is an instrument about the size of a ballpoint pen, that is 5mm or less. It is inserted into the joint involved through a small skin incision approximately 1/3" or less in length. With the light running through the arthroscope, the inside of the joint can be well visualized. Often several puncture incisions will be used in order to allow use of a probe or surgical instrument for further diagnosing and surgically treating problems within the joint.

Saline is inserted into the joint involved with a special needle that is placed inside the joint. Also saline can be removed from the joint by vacuum through the arthroscope or other surgical instrument. Oftentimes, for surgical procedures, an electronic shaver is used to remove abnormal tissue found within the joint. Other surgical instruments include special scissors and biting instruments for removal of abnormal tissue.

At the end of the procedure, all of the fluid within the joint is removed. Oftentimes, a local anesthetic can be used at the end of the procedure to help decrease the immediate post-surgical pain.

The advantages of these techniques are:

More accurate diagnoses of the problem and less painful surgical means of taking care of the problem.

Not all problems within the knee can be solved by Arthroscopy or arthroscopic surgery. Your Orthopedic Surgeon should be able to evaluate this and advise you whether this type of surgery would be useful for you. The biggest advantage of this type of surgery for the patient is that it is less painful, the rehabilitation following surgery is often faster than previous types of surgery for similar problems of the joint, the hospital stay is usually much less and thereby, hospital bills are often less than they would be for other types of knee surgery.

The disadvantages of this type of surgery are:

The equipment is expensive, the surgery is technically very demanding, and not all surgery is possible by these techniques. However, it is good to have these advanced techniques available to aid the surgeon in choosing proper treatment for his patients.

Ask Your Home Economist

Following are frequently-asked questions of beach extension agents.

Q. I'm determined to do some canning this year, but I've never done it, and I just know I'm going to get into all kinds of messes. Who is the expert on canning?

A. All this summer Virginia Cooperative Extension Service is manning a Food Preservation Hotline for Tidewater residents. Anyone with a question about food preserving either canning or freezing, can get an answer by calling 427-4511 Monday through Friday 8 a.m.- 6 p.m.

Q. I processed green beans in a boiling water bath about a week ago. My neighbor told me that I should have used a pressure canner. Would it be all right to reprocess the beans today using a pressure canner?

A. No! More than 24 hours have gone by since the beans were processed in a boiling water bath, there's a good chance that they have already started to spoil. Throw them out. They could be dangerous!

Q. Can my microwave oven be used for canning?

A. Home canning of foods in the microwave oven is not recommended. For canning to be safe, the water bath method for acid foods like tomatoes and the pressure canner method for low-acid foods like beans are the only ways recommended.

Q. Why is liquid sometimes lost from jars during processing?

A. Loss of liquid may be due to:

- Packing jars too full. If liquid boils out of the jars during processing, a siphoning action is started.
- Lowering pressure too suddenly. When processing is up, remove canner from heat and let stand until pressure is zero. Do not try to rush the cooling by running cold water over the canner or by repeatedly nudging the pressure regulator or weight gauge.

Public Hearing On Newtown Scheduled

Plans for a proposed improvement project on Newtown Road in Norfolk and Virginia Beach will be discussed at a public hearing at 7 p.m. on Tuesday June 29 in the Newtown Road Elementary School Cafetorium at 900 Newtown Road in Virginia Beach.

In announcing the hearing, the Department of Highways and Transportation also said that representatives of the department will be at the school from 4:30 p.m. until 6:30 p.m. on the day of the public hearing for informal discussions. They will have maps, drawings, and environmental study report, and other information available for review by interested persons.

Involved in the proposed project is the 0.4-of-a-mile section of Newtown Road beginning with its intersection with Virginia Beach Boulevard (US Route 58) and proceeding northeasterly to a point about 0.1-of-a-mile north of Baker Road. This section of Newtown Road carries the highest traffic volumes on the facility and often is heavily congested.

Plans call for widening the road along its existing location within the limits of the proposed project.

It would be widened to include five 11-foot-wide traffic lanes. There would be two lanes for through traffic lanes. There would be two lanes for through traffic in each direction, with the center lane being used for left turns.

would be separated from the main facility by a 350-foot-raised median, four feet wide. Left turns by northbound vehicles would not be allowed here.

Curb and gutter would be constructed on each side of the road. On the west side, which lies within Norfolk, a five-foot-wide sidewalk would be constructed adjacent to the curb. On the east, or Virginia Beach side, a four-foot-wide sidewalk would be built, reserving space for utilities.

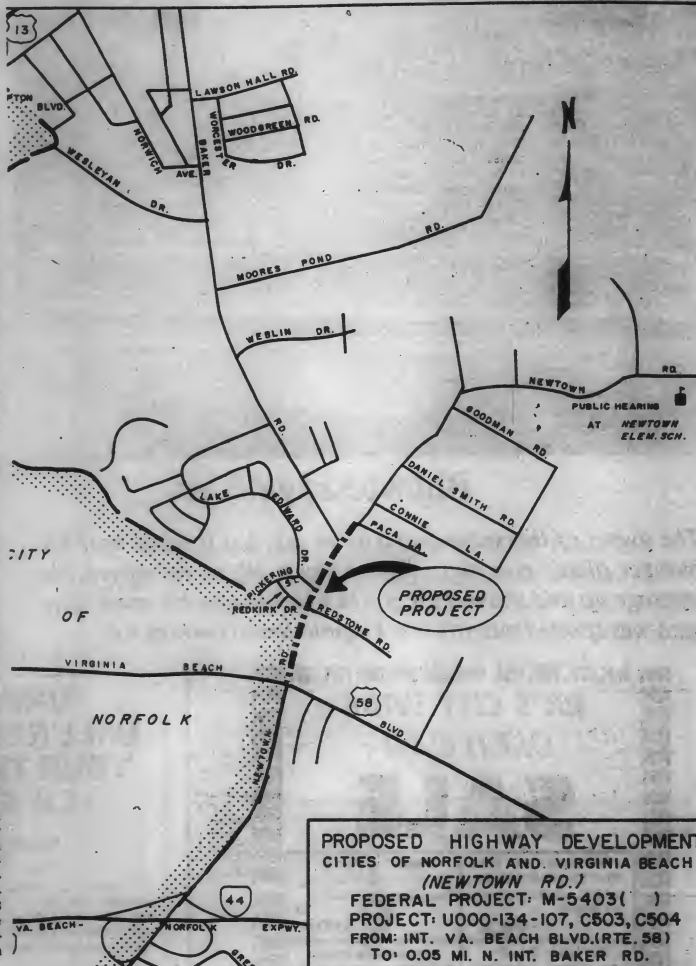

Also, on the east side, all of which is in Virginia Beach, a combination sidewalk-bikeway would be provided.

City councils of both Virginia Beach and Norfolk have requested the proposed improvements.

The nearly one-half-mile long project is expected to cost $1.3 million. It would be financed by 75 per cent federal and 20 per cent state funds, with the balance being paid by the two cities.

For those who desire more information, drawings, an environmental study, maps and other information are available for review in the offices of the directors of public utilities of Norfolk and Virginia Beach, in the residency office of the Department of Highways and Transportation at the intersection of US Route 13 (Military Highway) and VA 168 in Chesapeake, and at the department's district office at 1700 Main Street in Norfolk.

Written or oral statements may be presented at the hearing. Written statements also may be submitted to the department within 10 days after the public hearing.

Driver's Education Classes Offered

Four behind-the-wheel driver education course sessions will be taught by Virginia Beach Public School this summer.

The first session was slated to be held at First Colonial and Green Run high schools through June 24. Each session had three classes: 8 to 10 a.m., 10 a.m. to noon, and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

All behind the wheel sessions are open to Virginia Beach students who have satisfactorily completed the classroom phase of their driver education and who have a valid learner's permit. A $60 fee must be paid upon registration for all behind-the-wheel class sessions.

The remaining three sessions will be held at Princess Anne High and Kempsville Junior High. The second will be from June 25 to July 8, the third session from July 12 through July 21, and the fourth session from July 26 through August 4. The class times for sessions 2, 3, and 4 are the same as for the first session.

Students must register on the session starting date at the school where they wish to take the course. Registration will be held in the school's auditorium or cafeteria. Checks and money orders must be made payable to the school where the student will be attending the driver education classes.

A classroom driver education course was to be offered to Virginia Beach students at Princess Anne High and Kempsville Junior High from June 15 through 25. That course was to be open to students who had failed the classroom phase of driver education in regular school or to students who had recently moved to Virginia Beach and not taken the course as a tenth grader.

Students who missed the start of the classroom instruction in driver training and who are interested in a possible later summer course should call Virginia Beach Public Schools, Department of Instructional Services, at 427-4716.

Pitcher Jack Dempsey

Adult Softball Very Popular; Takes A Lot Of Dedication

BY JACKIE MATTHEWS
Sun Correspondent

When you go to a city-supported ball game to see your lot of friends, you are seeing the end results of many long hours of planning and organizing.

Mr. Ned Cheely, Assistant to the Administrator of recreation for Athletics, talked with me about the behind the scenes action that takes place before the men, women, and children line up to hit that first pitch.

One booming branch of the Virginia Beach Recreation is the adult softball.

"We started in 1966 with only 30 teams total, eight were church teams," Cheely said. "We now have grown to 400 total, this includes divisions of major, limited, unlimited, woman and 39 church teams." There are approximately 23 lighted fields used five nights a week. Four games a night are played on each field from 6:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Some changes had to be made over the years in order that more teams could play. The resulting changes were after five innings with a 15 run lead, the game is terminated. No more three strikes and you're out, it's two strikes and you're out, three balls and you walk. This speeds up the game and the one hour limit per game is tricky abided by.

The fee to participate in the league is .100 dollars and if your teams wants to play, you had better sign up early or you will be among many on a waiting list. Cheely said, "We do our best to see that as many teams can play as possible and many on the waiting list are called." There's an average of 15 members on a team with 400 teams, that's about 6,000 playing city sponsored softball. Can you imagine the chain of calls made when the Recreation Department calls the coaches and cancels because of rain?

Mr. Harold Whitehurst is the director of parks and recreation. Mr. Richard Murphy is the Administrator of Parks and Recreation. Mr. Ned Cheely is the Assistant to the Administrator of Recreation for Athletics and Mr. Richard Branch is the Administrator for Parks and Maintenance. These men coordinate all recreation of athletics for the city. Also included in the responsibility of this vast job is Mr. Rubin Lebo, in charge of youth, Mr. Jay Smith, with women's division, and Mr. David Van Coven with the unlimited. These men also make spot checks throughout the sport seasons making sure rules are met and all is running smooth.

Before schedules are made and the fields are assigned and divisions are planned, they look to Mr. Branch. He is the man who makes sure all fields are properly cared for and is in charge of all construction and follow up maintenance. Princess Anne Park, Red Wing, and the Elementary Schools are just some of the areas that fall under the care of Parks and Maintenance. When the sport season changes so do the fields. The fences come down from use in baseball and softball and goal posts go up for football and soccer. A continuous cycle is maintained to make sure everything stays in good condition for the Virginia Beach Athletics.

Some of the local churches who began with Virginia Beach Recreation in the men's softball league were, Thalia Lynn Baptist and Kempville Baptist. Aragona Church of Christ on Witchduck Road started in 1970. Jack Dempsey and Gene Matthews began as the coaches and are still coaching the team. The coaches say they have won the division once and have come in second a couple of times, but the best part is getting together with friends twice a week and meeting so many people from other churches. It also offers many the chance to play softball who otherwise would not have the opportunity.

Rock Church, City Champs

Rock Church, another church enjoying softball, started in 1974. The first two years were slow, coming in last, however in 1976, they took off winning the City Championship. From 1976 until present they have been city champs. In 1979, they qualified for the Men's Church World Nationals in Orlando, Florida. In 1978 and 1979 they went to the Atlantic Central Regionals. This was by means of elimination. Only two teams Delaware and the D.C. area. In 1978, they placed fifth and in 1979, they placed second. Then in 1980 they were the host for the ASA Church Nationals held at Northside Park and Lakewood Park in Norfolk, Virginia. Mr. Willie Jimerson is the coach of this outstanding team.

Then, you must remember the lovable umpire. Contrary to some opinion we cannot do without Mr. Always Right Umpire. Mr. Hollis Drake previously the Commissioner of Umpires from 1973 to 1981 says Virginia Beach totally supports the umpires. He also said, "the cooperation and organization of the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation is excellent." Mr. Mickey Call is now the Commissioner of the Umpires.

At the start of the season a workbook is sent to Mr. Call from Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation. He then assigns the umpires to the fields of play. Approximately 75 umpires are used nightly, 35 of which are employed by the City Recreation.

This is just a small view into a large scale operation. We look to our recreation department not only for our sports entertainment, but for many other arts and educational programs. Virginia Beach is very fortunate to have this fine organization.

Pier Owners Predict Good Season

For Profits, Fish

Sun Staff Report

It is going to be a good season for recreational fishermen in Virginia Beach according to operators of local piers. The prediction comes despite what all parties term a "slow spring."

"It was a pretty slow beginning this year because of the cool water temperatures," said Julian Absolom, co-owner of the Lynnhaven Inlet Fishing Pier. "But it has really picked up lately. The people are hauling in a lot of spot, croaker, roundhead and crabs. The crabbing has been excellent."

As far as profits are concerned, Absolom predicted a good season as well. "With gas prices so high, people are going to be staying home or right around in the area for fishing instead of going out-of-state."

Richmond natives James and Mary Ann Best visited Virginia Beach last weekend for a little fishing and relaxation. "We didn't have the time or money to go real far away, so we came her instead," said Best. The Bests did not meet with much success at the Lynnhaven Pier Saturday, but the lack of catches did not dampen their vacationing spirits. "We're having a good time anyway," she said.

Absolom said a large run of blue fish in recent weeks may have scared off the smaller fish. He added bloodworms, squid, shrimp and cut-bait have been used by patrons in recent weeks and all have been successful in luring the smaller catches. "As long as the people are catching something, they're happy," he said.

Rain and stormy weather has been the cause for slow fishing according to Mildred Lachman, Manager of the Virginia Beach Fishing Pier. "We had a lot more fish here until we got a series of Northeastern storms blowing through, driving most of the smaller fish away," she said. "The rain has really hurt us, but it is going to get better when the rain stops."

Lachman reported spot and croaker were the most-often caught fish at her pier, and two king mackeral were recently landed there as well.

Neither pier operator reported any decline in the amount of flounder caught, despite a recently published report in Marine Resource Bulletin which said a blood parasite is causing mortality of young summer flounder in Chesapeake Bay and several other east coast estuaries.

Since 1978, a blood parasite called Trypanoplasma bullocki has been present in some summer flounder, the number one ranked Virginia finfish trawler catch. The fish is considered excellent for human consumption and is highly sought-after by charter and head boat parties in the lower Chesapeake Bay and the shallow oceanside waters of the Eastern Shore.

Laboratory experiments to assess the lethal effects of the parasite on young flounder demonstrated that monthly trawl catches in the York River and lower Chesapeake Bay produced 100 percent mortality of the fish in the Bay between November, 1980 and February, 1981. All of the fish contained the parasite and all were dead when brought up in the trawl.

"I feel that Trypanoplasma bullocki was directly responsible for the mortality of the young summer flounder during that period," said Dr. Eugene M. Bureson, a senior marine scientist in the Department of Microbiology-Pathology at the Virginia Institute of Marine Sciences. Bureson added extremely cold temperatures during the experiment period may have contributed to the deaths of the fish.

Bureson emphasized that the parasite is not damaging to humans. "Even if a person consumed a fish carrying the flagellate, which would be highly unlikely, no health hazard would occur."

"We've had a lot of people eat flounders they caught here and none of them have complained about being sick," Absolom said. "They're catching the usual amount of flounder," added Lachman.

Richmond Fishermen, James and Mary Anne Best didn't get a nibble, but had a good time.

Ballance Honored

Jeffrey R. Ballance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Selby Ballance of 637 Cunningham Road, has been selected as the first recipient of the Maury Riganto Student/Athlete Memorial Award.

"This new award will be presented annually in loving memory of Mr. Maury Riganto and for what he did for the athletes of the Tidewater area," said G. Garland Payne, vice chairman, Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission. Riganto served for 20 years as chairman of the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission. Chairman now is Richard Webbon. Director is Harold Whitehurst.

Ballance received a trophy for the honor, donated by the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission. A permanent trophy with Ballance's name will be displayed in the trophy case of the student's school, in this case, Princess Anne High School, and the student will be given a replica.

"It is our wish that, with this trophy, the name of Maury Riganto will live on in the hearts and minds of the area students and that as they grow with age, they might also reach out and help others the way Maury Riganto did all his life," Payne said.

"I would also like to acknowledge and thank the two other members of the selection committee, Mr. Bob Hicks and Mr. George Schachle, for their valuable assistance in this regard."

The award was made to Ballance, a graduated senior, during recent opening ceremonies of the new Munden Point Park.

Lainhart To Vie For Title

Virginia Beach's Ric "the Bomber" Lainhart will fight for the state light-heavy weight crown June 1 when he takes on Bluford Spencer of Richmond at the Pavilion.

Sports, Inc., Stan Bennett, promoter, the night of boxing will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets will be $7 and $10 and will be available at the door.

THE VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

ANNOUNCES A SPECIAL EDITION

"The Virginia Beach Story" To Be Published This Summer

Dedicated to the progress and growth of the City of Virginia Beach its people, its business concerns—where it is and where it is headed in all aspects: commerce, industry, agriculture and tourism.

Blessed by a rich history, Virginia Beach looks confidently to the future. Today it is recognized as one of the fastest growing cities in the United States.

Many new firms have been established in the past decade, joining other progressive businesses dedicated to building a strong economic foundation for Virginia Beach's future growth.

This special edition of The Virginia Beach Sun will have dual purpose. Considerable space will be devoted to valuable data and statistics and the "human side" of the past, present and future of Virginia Beach. Copies will go to libraries, schools, legislators, congressmen, business and civic leaders, and to firms that may move to the Tidewater area. The Virginia Beach Sun also believes this special edition will serve as a platform for individual businessmen to tell their own exciting story through public relations copy and institutional advertising. Your support and interest in this project is cordially solicited and welcomed.

A Possible Olympian?

Yogi Hightower, 20, of Virginia Beach, is participating in a special training program at the United States Olympic Training Center Located at Colorado Springs, Colo. The program is designed to prepare potential Olympians for national and international competitions, in particular, the 1983 Pan American and 1984 Olympic Games.

Hightower is a member of the field hockey team at Old Dominion University where she has won three letters at the right link position under coach Beth Anders. Last year she was honored as a member of the Mitchell and Ness College all-American team.

While at the Training Center, Hightower will prepare for a tournament between the U. S., Holland and Canadian under-21 National training teams. The tournament is under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Field Hockey Association and is being supervised by Nancy Stevens, head coach at Northwestern University and assistants Denise Desautels and Sue Kloss. All are past national team players.

Hightower was first recognized as a potential Olympian last year when she was named to the U.S. National team and competed in the National Sports Festival, which she says was her most memorable moment in her hockey career.

The national sponsor of the Olympic Training Center is Miller High Life of Milwaukee. Located at the former Bent Air Force Base, the Center has been used by more than 35,000 potential Olympians since the Complex opened in the summer of 1978. The Complex accommodates 550 athletes and all expenses are borne by the United States Olympic Committee.

A 1979 graduate of Kempesville High School, Hightower won three letters as a center half and was named to the all-city and all-Tidewater teams. Next fall she will be a senior at ODU where she is majoring in health and physical education.

Hightower is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas Hightower, 1049 Lockwood Court, in Virginia Beach.

Beach Resident Hightower in Action.

PA Band, Marching Cavaliers Honor 81-82 Participants

BY JACKIE MATTHEWS
Sun Correspondent

The Princess Anne High School Marching Cavaliers held their annual Band Banquet recently at the Officers Club at Fort Story.

Joe Ligart, director of instrumental music, and Sam Reynolds, guard sponsor, presented various awards and trophies to the members of the band and guard.

The sophomores received letters, the juniors received pins and the seniors received trophies. A trophy was also given to Kristin Kremisiss, the majorette.

Medals and certificates were given to the participants of the District Festival, the 35 who went to all Regional Band and the 14 who performed solos in grade six music and received a superior rating at the Solo and Ensemble Festival.

Special recognition was given to Ed Ambrose, Imelda Ayud, Ned Campbell, Billy Pease, Craig Strohecker and Mark Thompson for qualifying for All State Band. Lisa Eklund received The National Arion Award and Holly Jones received The Semper Fidelis Award. Ed Ambrose received The Mermitage Foundation Award for Musical Excellence. The Golden Music Awards went to Ed Ambrose, Lee Cooper, Eric Dayton and Billy Pease. The National Band Masters Association Certificates were given to Carolyn Lowenthal, Lisa Whitney, Lee Cooper and Maynard Pease. The highest band award to be given, The John Phillip Sause Award, went to Billy Pease.

Homer Jones, last year's Band President introduced the officers for the coming year: Ellie Eklund, President, Dick Kreassig, Vice President, Diane Baker, Secretary, Mary Ward, Financial Secretary and Ed Adams, Treasurer.

The Commanders for Silk's next year are Wendy Maxwell and Lisa Schimmel. The Commander for the Rifle Squad is Denise Swallow. The Drum Majors are Billy Westbrook, senior and Imelda Ayud, junior.

The Marching Cavaliers received over 17 competition trophies for their performances this season. They have just returned from an exciting trip to Canada. Many of the students earned credit for their trip by selling candy, supporting bake sales, selling Christmas trees, sandwich sales, and promoting subscriptions to the Sun Newspaper. Projects are already in progress to make next year an equally exciting band year.

Beachers Graduate From W & M

Seventy-two Virginia Beach students received degrees from the College of William and Mary in recent commencement exercises in William and Mary Hall.

Principal speaker for the occasion was cartoonist Garry Trudeau, creator of the Doonesbury comic strip, who received a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from the College. Honorary degrees were also awarded to Dr. Vincent Theodore DeVita, Jr., director of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, ME; Frederick C. Stewart, eminent botanist and cell biologist; and C. Waller Barrett, lecturer, author, library scholar and former member of the University of Virginia Board of Visitors.

Commencement 1982 marks the 289th year of the College of William and Mary, which lists among its priorities, being the second oldest institution of higher education in the country, founded in 1693 by Royal Charter from King William III and Queen Mary II of England, and the founding of Phi Beta Kappa by students of the College on December 5, 1776.

School Board To Convene Tuesday, June 29

The Virginia Beach School Board will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, June 29, in the Board room of the School Administration Building at Princess Anne. The meeting was called by the Board to consider the matter of tuition for students in the school system.

In addition, the Board has voted to change the date of its next regular monthly meeting from Tuesday, July 20, to Tuesday, July 13, at 2

Call 427-4300 For School Info

Virginia Beach Public Schools has a new HOTLINE. The number is 427-4300; the HOTLINE is located in the Public Information Office.

Callers will hear a short recorded message, possibly giving information about a forthcoming important school event or meeting, when applicable. At the sound of a tone, they will be able to leave their names and phone numbers, along with any questions they may have about schools and school operation.

The HOTLINE will be in service 24 hours-a-day; regardless of the time of day that a call is made, the Public Information Office will receive the message. Callers will then be contacted as soon as possible with the answers to questions. If a call involves information that will take some time to gather, the call will also be notified that the request is being acted upon.

The HOTLINE is designed to help school officials quickly solve some problems that patrons may have concerning schools; they are hopeful that the number, 427-4300, will receive considerable use. It is possible that a caller will receive a busy signal if all lines are in use; if this does happen, callers are asked to wait a few minutes, then to try again.

Public Information Officer Joe Lowenthal said, "I see the hotline as an added service to the people of Virginia Beach. It's a way our citizens can get information quickly. If we don't know the answer to questions we will find out."

Beach Cops Target Drug Traffic

By Beach Detective Mike Durwent

Pot, Pill Pushers Had Best Beware

In our society today, tons of narcotics are ingested by our population daily and millions of dollars are made annually from their illegal sales. This week Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is hoping to make a dent in this lucrative business by offering up to $1,000 in cash for information that leads to the arrest of anyone involved in illegal drug traffic.

During 1981 in Virginia Beach alone, over $4,000,000 of contraband narcotics, including heroin, cocaine, valium, quaaludes, LSD, hashish and marijuana were seized. Along with these narcotics, a multitude of drug paraphernalia was also confiscated. In connection with these confiscations, 1,326 people were arrested for a variety of drug violations compared to 728 in 1980. This is a 55% increase in arrests.

Though the majority of these arrests were for possession of narcotics, other arrests were made for sales and manufacturing of narcotics, inhaling noxious drugs, prescription forgery and having prescription drugs in your possession without a valid prescription.

If you have any information about any drug related crime, call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Crime Solvers will also pay up to $1,000 for information about any serious crime, wanted persons, or the recovery of stolen property. Crime solvers guarantees you never have to reveal your identity.

Planetarium Shows Slated

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium public program for July will be "From the Shadows of the Pyramids."

Planetarium hours: Sunday 7 to 8 p.m., July 4, 11, 18, and 25 and Tuesday 7 to 8 p.m., July 6, 13, 20, and 27. The planetarium seats 120 people and is easily accessible from the Route 44 toll road by taking the Lynnhaven exit (exit 5) to

Muhammad Ali

Muhammad Ali Opens Hilltop Store

Sun Staff Report

He used to be the mouth that roared, but when former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali appeared in Virginia Beach last weekend, the legendary vocal chords produced little more than inaudible mumbling.

But it did not matter to the thousands who flocked to Fosek Film Factory in the Hilltop North shopping center Saturday to catch the Ali road show. To them, he was still "the Greatest."

The event was the grand opening of the film processing outfit in which Ali, it is rumored, has considerable financial interests.

The boxing fans were in attendance, shouting "Hey champ" and "what did you think about the Holmes-Conney fight?" Ali, for the most part, remained positioned in a tiny mock-up boxing ring dutifully scribbling autographs and blankly staring off into the vast expanse of blacktop and shopping carts.

With hundreds of ca. ears pointing in his face, however, the old Ali charm could not remain concealed forever. One young man challenged the former boxer to a few rounds of slap-boxing. "You ain't—," the man said. And that was all it took. Ali was out of the ring, and dancing about the parking lot, taking a number of playful pokes at his opponent. "I would have beaten him," the man said later, "if the crowd had only given me some elbow room."

Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr. was on hand to exchange a few punches with Ali, and to introduce him to his fans. "He was once the heavyweight champion of the world, now he is a champion in the business world," McCoy said.

New Women's Club Officers announced

The G.F.W.C. Cape Henry Woman's Club of Virginia Beach recently installed officers for 1982-83 and presented "the Woman of the Year" award at its annual meeting held at Tandon's Pine Tree Inn, 2932 Va. Beach Blvd.

The following officers will serve for 1982-83: President, Mrs. Charles Traub, III; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Clifton Doxey; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Richard Coradi; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. Latane

Sale; Recording Secretary, Mrs. K. James Crouch, Jr.; Treasurer, Mrs. Paul Chevalier, Jr. Mrs. H.J. Seasmith, President of the Tidewater District of the Va. Federation of Women's Clubs was the installing officer.

Mrs. Clifford J. Hughes was honored as "Woman of the Year" for 1982 for her contribution of outstanding service to the club.

Entertainment for the meeting was provided by the Green Run High School Madrigal Chorus.

Chamber Selling New Game

Sun Staff Report

"It's a tremendous promotion item for the city, and its businesses," said Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce Assistance Manager, Bill Henry, referring to Virginia Beach's very own game entitled, "All About Virginia Beach."

The monopoly-like board game, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and local businesses, is available to local residents and tourists in 26 retail outlets across the city. After the initial 3,000 of the games are sold, Henry said it is uncertain whether more will be printed.

The object of the game is for the players, using dice and playing pieces, to acquire eight "travel cards" by moving about the gameboard. The length of the game varies depending on the number of cards the players stipulate are required to win.

"All about Virginia Beach" was conceived by The Chamber and supported by about 45 participating Virginia Beach businesses.

"We would have liked to have had about 60 or 65 sponsors," Henry said, "But it's tough to get going on anything new.

Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce Assistant Manager Bill Henry looks over some of the 3,000 "All About Virginia Beach" games with Chamber staffer Becky Rhedon.

Nobody wants to be the first to sign up."

"All About Virginia Beach" will retail for between $12 and $13. The game is considered, in addition to being a promotional piece, to be a collector's item. Also featured on its board are

"Besides, not every city can boast that it has its very own game."

"All About Virginia Beach" was produced in Woodlands, CA. For more information, or to find out where the game can be purchased, call the chamber, 490-1221.

six to eight Virginia Beach landmarks.

"The game serves as a great reminder that Virginia Beach residents have much to be proud of," Henry said. "The game is unique, special, a collector's item and is great for a gift."

Try One Of Council's Favorite Books

Library
SUNlines

By Beach Librarian Carolyn Piggott

For a great many of us in Virginia Beach, books are an important source of enjoyment and information. We have our favorites whose special meaning makes us return to them over and over to savor their unique effect once again.

While we easily recall titles important to us, we also wonder what other people, especially those in the public eye, like to read; which books have made lasting impressions. One group constantly in the Virginia Beach public eye is City Council. Recently the library department sampled members of this group asking for responses to "How books have affected my life." Their responses were varied, interesting and personal.

The library is the perfect place to relocate that favorite title which you've been meaning to reread, or to try one of Council's favorites.

Nancy A. Crech

"Books have always been very special friends to me and I am incapable of passing by a bookstore without stealing a few minutes to browse and ultimately buy," Crech said.

"Long before entering first grade I had learned to read and, very early, had read every book in the children's section of the Norfolk branch library near my home, not once, but several times. In those days children were not allowed to check out volumes from the 'other,' or adult, side of the library without special permission so I resorted to reading the encyclopedia, front to back, which endeavor won me that coveted 'special permission.'

"Books have always been very special friends to me and I am incapable of passing by a bookstore without stealing a few minutes to browse and ultimately buy"

Crech

"My love of books is equally strong today and I cherish them as sources of information, relaxation, comfort and pleasure. Unfortunately I cannot cite a particular volume which is my favorite as I am afraid my taste is less than discriminatory and I am likely to read whatever is handy.

"Time constraints force me to limit my 'for pleasure' reading and given a chance I usually select biographies, autobiographies, practical business or motivational books along with the Greek philosophers to whom I return over and over."

Harold Heischberger

Mr. Heischberger responded to the question of "How books affected my life" by mentioning his admiration of William Styron, "an excellent American Author," whose books "Sophie's Choice" and "The Confessions of Nat Turner" were personal favorites.

Jack Jennings

"Only after reading 'Restoring the American Dream' by Robert J. Ringer did I finally decide to once again seek election to our City Council," he said. "During the recent campaign I tried to put forth a belief similar to some of the ideas touched upon in this unusual book. The author explains and proposes solutions in layman's language to many of the government created problems such as taxation, the energy crisis, government over-regulation, unemployment, etc.

"Says Ringer, 'the American Dream was not about government's taking huge sums of money (under the label of taxation) from citizens by force. The American Dream was about individualism and the opportunity to achieve success without interference from others. It is time for Big Brother to get out of our private lives and off our backs - to let go of the reins and allow us to control our own destinies. For you and me, the pictures is pretty clear: we either restore the American Dream right here and now, or we most certainly will never live to experience it again.'

"Says (R.J.) Ringer, 'The American Dream was not about government's taking huge sums of money (under the label of taxation) by force. The American Dream was about individualism and the opportunity to achieve success without interference from others'"

Jennings

"Former Secretary of the Treasury, William E. Simon says about the book, 'People throughout the world who believe in the cause of human freedom, who have a common belief in the liberty of man, will surely share in the spirit of this book, and I urge each one of them to spread the word to as many others as possible so that the restoration of the American Dream can become a reality.'

"While I may not be in agreement with all of Mr. Ringer's views, I do believe his solutions provide the reader with a stimulating, thought-provoking mental exercise... so much so that I have purchased a number of copies as surprise presents for my friends."

Louis R. Jones

"The opportunity to absorb knowledge and experience of others is probably the most important benefit of reading to me," Jones said. "Use of other peoples' research, experience and knowledge represents one of the ways an individual may move ahead of his own limitations to more rewarding and profitable life experiences.

"One author whose works I have enjoyed greatly is Peter F. Drucker. Mr. Drucker's writings include: "Managing For Results," "The Effective Executive," "Management: Tasks, Responsibilities, Practices, Men, Ideas and Politics," "The New Society," "The Practice of Management," "Managing in Turbulent Times" and a number of other related books. One of the most important lessons that Mr. Drucker espouses is the idea of setting goals and objectives, developing strategies to achieve those goals and objectives and organizing plans of action to obtain those goals and objectives.

"Mr. Drucker projects a sound, common sense philosophy toward business organization, personal organization and governmental organization. He demonstrates an objective viewpoint about what responsibilities the business community has to the economic, social and governmental segments of our society. His philosophy makes sense to me. Like Mr. Drucker, I believe that the business community has a responsibility to itself and to the community in which it resides. I also believe that the greatest opportunities for any business lie in meeting its community's needs.

Louis Jones

"The exercise of this philosophy in my own business experience has enhanced my personal and business endeavors immensely. I look forward to using the same responsible philosophy I have used in 25 years of business as I serve in City Government."

Robert G. Jones

"Since reading is one of my favorite activities, I have read any number of books that have influenced my life and thought," he said. "To respond to your request I have tried to identify a dozen books, or authors, that I have found especially enriching. Within this self-imposed limitation many have been left out.

"Since reading is one of my favorite activities, I have read any number of books that have influenced my life and thought... It would take too much space and to far beyond anyone's interest to relate what it is about each that I find significant"

Bob Jones

"It would take far too much space and too far beyond anyone's interest to relate what it is about each that I find significant. The list doesn't include law cases, journals, magazines and newspapers that have nourished me over the years and which I read regularly. However, The Wall Street Journal, which I read daily, deserves special mention.

Council's Favorite Books

Reba S. McClanan

"The constant stack of agendas, studies and reports which confronts a City Council member makes me wonder some times if I ever had or ever will have again the time for pure pleasure reading," McClanan said. "I feel that there is so much that I must read that I really do not have the time to delve into my 'would like to read' list. I must confess that I read newspapers much more because they give me a diversified viewpoint with a variety of facts and insights."

McClanan

"I also loved the Bible stories and readings from the Bible because they told of the good which triumphed over evil... the stories were written with such beauty, detail and description"

"When I was a child my family could not afford books so I relied on relatives and friends for reading material; later the school library became an unending source of reading material. I also loved the Bible stories and the readings from the Bible because they told of the good which triumphed over evil as well as portraying many exciting parables. The stories were written with such beauty, detail and description."

"As I grew older I came to love books of poetry such as the poems of Robert Louis Stevenson and Robert Frost. Novels such as "Heidi," the Nancy Drew books, the Mark Twain stories, and later, "Jane Eyre," "Gone With The Wind," as well as books by Frances Parkinson Keyes and Alica Tisdale Hobart were favorites. In more recent years my taste has run to books on government and history as well as the biographies of great men and women in these subject areas. I have also enjoyed Gail Sheehy's "Passages" and Ian McHargue's "Design With Nature." Khalil Gibran's writings always provide a new insight and thought with old familiar subjects. Like many I also have an extensive cookbook collection with I 'read' occasionally for new and different ideas.

Translated, all of this means that I cannot select any one book or category of books as the greatest inspiration of my life because even the books I did not particularly like enhanced my knowledge and experience. Books, magazines and newspapers are a constant source of inspiration, pleasure, and knowledge of the world around me."

Meyers Oberndorf

"I've always been an avid reader with a heavy emphasis on biographies of famous people, coupled with historical works," she said. "These books taught me that it is not enough to merely live in a community. Instead, one must have ideals and philosophies they will not compromise with a vision for the future. They must pursue these ideals through community service no matter how rough or lonely a path it may be."

"The Diary of Anne Frank" was one of the books which has influenced my life and the particular quote that has guided my life is as follows: "It's really a wonder that I haven't dropped all my ideals, because they seem so absurd and impossible to carry out. Yet I keep them because in spite of everything I still believe that people are really good at heart."

Oberndorf

"I've always been an avid reader with a heavy emphasis on biographies of famous people, coupled with historical works... These books taught me that it is not enough to live in a community. Instead one must have ideals..."

"One of my favorite authors for pure relaxation blended with wisdom is Erma Bombeck. Her book "The Grass is Always Greener Over The Septic Tank" evokes pure unmitigated laughter and joy from my inner being. She reminds me that if people lose their sense of humor they have lost their equilibrium."

San Staff Report

Phil Donahue is able to wear many different hats at a time. He can't be perceived as a liberal and a defender of women's rights. Then, he can turn around and castigate the promiscuity of today's youth, sounding somewhat akin to a fundamental Baptist preacher.

What was clear from his appearance last week at the Pavilion before some 2,500 fans is that Donahue is a professional, the premiere talk-show host in America. He can play up to any audience, he can sound sincere, and he can do it without coming off as a phony.

Most of those in attendance were women, each of whom shelled out $8.50 a ticket. The appearance was not taped for broadcast, as some patrons later said they thought it was supposed to be. Donahue told the crowd he was in Virginia Beach on an annual pilgrimage which this year takes him to 10 cities in seven days to speak, and to feel the pulse of the country. Donahue said he and his 19-member Chicago-based staff can easily lose touch with the grassroots, so it is important to get out and talk to the people.

Donahue said any profits from these engagements would be divided up among his staff members because "the amount of their salaries is considerably less than mine."

By 7-4 Council Vote

City To Purchase 2 Private Utilities

Virginia Beach City Council agreed to purchase two private utilities companies for $4.3 million, shortly after starting its fight against the creation of a new private sewage system in Sandbridge.

By a vote of 7-4 Monday evening, Council decided to purchase Counties Utilities Corporation and Kempsville Utilities Corporation in line with the city's policy of acquiring all private utilities companies within the city.

By unanimous vote, it also went on record as opposing in a resolution to the State Water Control Board the application for a national pollution discharge elimination system by Ocean Island Associates in conjunction with a 200-unit hotel at the southern end of Sandbridge.

A special meeting was scheduled for Tuesday evening for a second reading of the resolution authorizing the sale of $4 million in water and sewer revenue bonds to finance the purchase making it the last official act of the present City Council. It also skirted any possibility that the action would be voided on second reading by the new Council which takes office on Thursday. Four of the outgoing Council members—Dr. Clarence A. Holland, Reid Ervin and Patrick L. Standing and Dr. E. T. Buchanan—voted for the purchase.

Voting against the purchase were Councilwomen Meyera Oberndorf, Reba McClanahan, Barbara Henley and Councilman W. H. Kitchen III. Also voting in favor of the takeover were Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr., Vice Mayor Harold Heischober and Councilman John A. Baum.

Opposing Council members and private citizens felt that the price was too high. The city will purchase the stock of the companies owned by developer Stanley Warach and members of his family with payments over a 25 year period.

Standing said the principal and interest over the period will come to approximately $9.2 million.

Bruce McCall of Thornberry Lane, said the $4.3 million was more than the city could afford or that the system was worth. He said the city should employ a consulting firm to find out exactly what it was purchasing. He said that the taxpayers were not fully informed and that some may not care now but will object afterward.

Buchanan said the city has been considering and negotiating for the sale for five years.

McCall said that the high cost will be reflected in higher fees to the citizens. He said the purchase will impact everybody. "I don't know what they're buying," he said. He said that he had tried three years ago to get a plan of the sewage system but nobody had one. "If a study has been made I know nothing about it. Apparently not much has been spent in maintenance and repairs. . . (The city is adding another (hidden) tax to the utilities charge.)"

Ervin said the city has had consultant studies and that Council is not acting without information.

Some of the information sought by McCall has been labeled confidential, because of the sale negotiations.

The city also has been sued for $1.2 million by the private companies charging that the city has taken customers away from the companies.

City Attorney Dale Binson said that some of the information not made public previously will be available to the public following the second reading of the resolution Tuesday evening.

Baum said that whether Council agrees or disagrees with the price, the price is determined by the estimated fair market value.

Ervin said that the city's problems stemmed from the failure of the State Water Control Board to enforce regulations requiring the private companies to clean up their plants. He said this has had a lot to do with the price. "We didn't get the help we needed from the state." He said that the SWCB has a history of "rapping knuckles but doing nothing more."

Holland said that through the purchase, the city will help alleviate the pollution of the city's waterways and will get rid of the suit. Once the sale has been consummated the suit will be dropped.

Holland said that "no one person in the utilities areas" called him and said not to buy the system. He pointed out that the city turned down an opportunity to purchase the systems four years ago.

Oberndorf said that the two utilities companies came into existence during a period when government was not as open. She said she still found it difficult to accept the fact that a decision was made back then which "mortgaged our future."

She said the purchase was not in the interest of the people, that the companies had numerous violations in different forms and the systems were not kept current, and that the private companies are not going to be permitted to raise rates to enjoy profits any longer. She said that if the city had hired a firm four years ago to inform Council of the violations as they occurred the city would have been in a better position. "The threat of a suit is a large axe hanging over the heads of the public officer," she said.

Ervin said the city hired the firm of Wiley and Wilson to do a study six years ago. He said the builders had protested building a plant, but that at the time, the State had more control than the Princess Anne County Board of Supervisors and told the builders than they were to build a treatment plant or could not build houses.

Buchanan said the city probably has exhausted its legal remedies.

"Government if the only body in creation that rewards people for doing a poor job," Oberndorf said.

Heischober said that if left alone, the two utilities will be increasing rates to close the city rates.

"I agree it's a lot of money," Heischober said, "but what alternatives are there?" He said service will be improved, the pollution problem will be mitigated. He said the city should in the future not allow private utilities companies to exist. He said that the best legal advice informed Council that the city would have to spend $7 million rather than $4.3 million if it went the condemnation route.

In its action opposing the Sandbridge plant Council hopes to forestall a similar predicament.

Ocean Island, whose principals are J.H. Kabler and S.N. Riggs, has proposed building a plant which will discharge between 10,000 and 50,000 gallons of treated effluent per day year-round into Back Bay.

The property on which the hotel is expected to be built is already zoned B-4 which permits that so that Council control is limited to commenting on the permit proceedings before the SWCB.

Reasons for the opposition are the impact on Back Bay and the Sandbridge area and the permit could lead to a proliferation of malar plants at the north end of the Bay which at present has no discharges. Because of the limited mixing and flushing characteristics of the Bay, the city maintains it is doubtful it can assimilate the discharges. Also, the proposal is inconsistent with the city's comprehensive plan and with the Hampton Roads Water Quality Management Plan of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972.

Further, the city stated in its resolution that the plan could conflict with the possibility that Back Bay may represent a substantial potable water source for the city.

The Back Bay area has over 264 acres of undeveloped land, the resolution points out, which is zoned for high intensity uses and such development represents potential implications for the future of the area in regard to potential effluent discharge into Back Bay.

Dan Hopkins, president of the Sandbridge Civic League, said the residents are opposed to the plant because of the ecological impact on Back Bay, approval will present a dangerous precedent, and the plant would be inconsistent with council's position on waste water treatment.

Heischober asked whether Hopkins thought that if treated the SWCB would properly monitor the plant.

Hopkins replied, "No."

Heischober also asked that if Hopkins lived in another area of the city would he be against a similar project.

Hopkins said he would.

Buchanan referred to a statement that another private utility company was lessening pollution in the Lynnhaven.

Baum remarked, "If you have water that's 30 percent polluted and you put in it water that is 15 percent polluted, it's not better." He said that private utilities companies are a thing of the past and would be a "tremendous step back."

Who will be the City of Virginia Beach's next mayor and vice mayor has been the name of the guessing game for months. But the guessing game will be over following Council's reorganizational meeting Thursday at 2 p.m.

If the process follows the form set two years ago, there should be several ballots and matching executive sessions. Incoming Councilwoman Reba McClanahan even chose to remain outside the executive sessions then.

Meyera Oberndorf who led the ballot in the 1980 election lost to compromise candidate Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. as mayor. She also was edged out of the vice mayor's position by newcomer Harold Heischober who this year has been mentioned strongly as the mayoral winner.

There are others who would like the job, probably half of the Council. All of the Council members are eligible including new members Mrs. Nancy A. Crech, at large; Jack Jennings, Lynnhaven Borough; Louis R. Jones, Bayside Borough, and Robert G. Jones, at large.

Returning to Council will be John A. Baum, Blackwater Borough; Heischober at large, Mrs. Barbara Henley, Pungo Borough; William H. Kitchen III, Virginia Beach Borough; McClanahan, and Oberndorf, at large.

J. Curtis Fruit, clerk of Virginia Beach Circuit Court will preside over the organizational meeting of Council and administer the oath of office to new Council members.

The mayor and vice mayor for the next two years will then be elected by Council and formal seating will be assigned with the Council members with longer service seated closer to the center.

Prior to the Monday evening meeting (the last scheduled meeting) although a special meeting was called for Tuesday night old and new Council members and members of their families along with department heads were entertained at a buffet in the Clerk's Office.

Solar Energy's Horizon

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Laszlo Aranyi is considered to be Virginia Beach's leading expert in passive and active solar design.

The Hungarian born and educated architect moved to The United States in 1956, at which time he had studied more about solar energy, design and theory than most Americans know today. An now, as president of the award winning Virginia Beach architectural firm, The Design Collaborative, and chairman of the Tidewater Solar Energy Association, he openly admits he had no interest in solar energy until five years ago.

According to Aranyi, who has been a Beach architect since 1963, there was very little public or professional interest locally in solar energy until 1973, when the Arab oil embargo erupted and the price of crude skyrocketed.

"In 1965 there was no interest at all in solar energy," Aranyi said. "Then, oil and electricity were cheap, simple to use, and plenty of it. Only a few isolated people cared about maintaining the national environment or conserving energy."

Even 10 years ago when Aranyi, a 22 year Virginia Beach resident now living in Thalia, designed his home, he did not incorporate solar design.

"I never thought about it," he said. "I designed my house 10 years ago and do not have any operable windows, nor cross ventilation."

But Aranyi, who finished his final year of architectural school in 1956 at North Carolina State, was convinced of the practicalities of solar design in 1977, when, Richard Fitts, an architect still in his employment, enlightened him.

"Richard started talking to me about it, and taking me to seminars," Aranyi said. "The idea of solar energy and design began to interest me, especially in relation to using it in designing buildings. I had always enjoyed designing using natural lighting, and the solar energy design was an outgrowth of that. I liked to bring the outdoors into a building."

However, Aranyi was more receptive to solar design ideas than are most of his clients today.

"Over in Europe there was much more awareness of the solar energy," he said. "Over here the awareness has come very slowly. Even when meeting my clients for the upcoming Green Run Condominiums, I had a hard time keeping solar design in the scheme of things. Solar energy is not a prime prerequisite to many people as they begin discussing plans for designing their building or home. They'd rather use conventional heating."

Aranyi says he has to try to persuade most of his clients to incorporate solar energy, passive or active, in their design plans, realizing that although not all people do, he does "have an interest in new and progressive things."

The key to an increased public awareness of solar energy is education. According to statistics from the American Institute of Architects, only about 2,000 of the 30,000 to 40,000 architects across the country promote solar energy design. One reason for solar energy's low profile is that not all areas of the country are conducive to effective solar design, but the overall public perception of its advantages is likely to change since President Reagan recently expressed his interest in alternative energy.

Currently, there are only about 1,000 Virginia Beach homes using any form of solar energy, despite reports that homeowners can save between 30 and 50 percent on their home heating bills. Solar energy can even be used to reduce cooling bills in the summer with properly designed outer-home shading and natural ventilation.

A national solar energy association was formed 25 years ago, with Frank Lloyd Wright as one of its principle proponents. The recent SUNTREK '82, a Design Collaborative tour of solar homes and businesses in Virginia Beach and Norfolk, swelled the TSEA membership by almost 100 percent. But Aranyi predicts it will be another five to 10 years before solar energy in homes and business is accepted as dishwashers and microwave ovens are now.

"For some reason people think that solar energy is only for the rich," he said. "That's not true. It costs no more to incorporate solar energy when designing a home as it does conventional heating."

Aranyi has also approached Virginia Beach public school officials about designing new, or modifying existing schools with solar heating, noting that if the schools can reduce their heating bills it would ultimately benefit Virginia Beach taxpayers. His suggestion plans, however, have fallen on unresponsive ears.

"The schools consciousness is not up to that level yet," he said.

Instead, Aranyi notes, "they build the schools with little slits for windows."

Business is good for Aranyi and The Design Collaborative. Consequently, he is relocating from his offices on Rosemont Road, and building a new solar energy building on N. Lynnhaven Road, behind Tandem's restaurant. The new building will allow-Aranyi not only to describe the functions of solar energy, but demonstrate them when clients come to call. His new building will be contain about 10,000 square foot, be roughly about the size of The Virginia Beach Sun building, where he has 10 months left on his lease, and will be two stories tall. He expects to break ground in three to four months.

"I think the future for solar energy in Virginia Beach is good," Aranyi said. "We've had some good projects planned, but because of the economy and high interest rates, they fell through. I expect that to turn around."

Military May Be Nailed By Reagan

Reaganomics have hit home again. This time, those affected by the administration's economic policies are the very people who were supposed to remain unscathed: the military.

Thanks to uncertainty over the future of federal impact aid to public schools, the Virginia Beach School Board is preparing to establish a policy which may eventually charge tuition for military dependents.

Impact aid is presently paid by the federal government to school systems attended by children of civil servants who live on government property. More than $10 million in federal funds have already been provided to schools system in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Virginia Beach.

However, administrative bumbling on the part of federal Department of Education led to an inaccurate projection of how many systems nationwide would qualify for certain categories of funding. School officials, perceiving a lack of support from the government, have decided to push forward with implementing alternatives to impact aid. The city is currently waiting for the balance of more than $5 million.

The Department of Defense is opposed to members of the armed forces having to pay for free public education. At the same time, the Department of Defense is against picking up the tab for its employees, were the federal government to be billed for the educational services as local administrator have promised.

Gary Fullerton, assistant public information officer for the school system, explained that only those students who live on government-owned property would be liable under the proposal. "Their parents do not pay any taxes to the city, yet the city would end up paying for their education," he said. Fullerton estimated 4,000 of the city's 54,000 students would be affected by the changes.

Two city schools, North Landing Elementary and White Oaks Elementary, were built specifically for use by students who live on government property. "I'd say 90 percent of the students there have parents who work for the government," Fullerton said.

In 1980-81, it cost $1,638 per-pupil per-year to attend school in Virginia Beach. Most of that was absorbed by the state, with local taxes picking up much of the remainder and the federal government taking care of the rest. Per pupil costs in other cities were as follows: Norfolk, $2,355, Portsmouth, $1,983, and Chesapeake, $1,805.

Fullerton reiterated that no military families will be billed for educational services. "We're going to send the bill to the federal government," he said. And what if the government stands by its pledge not to pay? "We'll probably get sued," Fullerton said.

Obviously, for the sake of our schools, our children, and our armed forces, the Reagan administration must loosen the purse strings a bit, and restore all of the currently frozen impact aid funds.

Legal Secretaries Say Thank You

Editor:

I wish to thank you for the beautiful article and the tremendous publicity spread you gave the VBSLA. How you made sense out of all my garbled conversation and managed to put it into a cohesive column is beyond me. You did an excellent job and I appreciate your tastes and editing talents. You did a super job--and even managed to make me look good in a photo, which is something rather unique by itself.

The Association has worked long and hard without much recognition from any sort of media in the past ten years, and your article has gone a long way to salving that wound. It was really well done and I thank you, personally, and the Association thanks you from all the Le-Gals in Virginia Beach and the State. I will be forwarding it to the State Publicity Director and the National Publicity Director, and perhaps you will be getting calls for reprint okay's on a National level. VBSLA looks forward to working with the Sun in the future now that our lines of communication have been established.

Soil Volunteers needed

Editor:

Virginia Beach volunteers are needed nationally to help battle soil erosion and other natural resource problems. The U. S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service is looking for people in Virginia Beach who will volunteer time and talents to help put more conservation on the land while keeping federal costs down.

In the new volunteer program, authorized by the Agriculture and Food Act of 1961, people can perform a wide range of services on a part-time or full-time basis, such as using with:

Even though volunteers are not considered federal employees, they will receive legal protection as well as insurance for any work-related injuries. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer should contact the Soil Conservation Service at P. O. Box 6097, Virginia Beach, VA 23456 or telephone 427-4775.

How To Get The Job

THE RESUME

It is customary for an employer to ask a job applicant to submit a resume. The resume, or data sheet, is an organized summary of the applicant's background which ordinarily includes his age, marital status, business experience, education, and references. It differs from the application letter in that it is generally in outline form and does not carry an inside address, salutation, complimentary close, or signature. The resume is not a substitute for an application letter, but a supplement to it.

Employers like the resume because it provides in convenient form a complete documentation of the applicant's qualifications. It is helpful to hire applicant, too, because it can be Xeroxed or otherwise duplicated for enclosure with any job letters the applicant writes. Resumes also make it possible to shorten one's letters, for many of the details in the resume do not have to be repeated. The letter accompanying a resume serves the function of making a direct appeal for the job by highlighting the main qualifications and referring the reader to the resume for the full record.

PHYSICAL APPEARANCE. The resume is typewritten on 8 1/2 by 11-inch white bond paper. With good planning and arrangement, only a single sheet should be necessary, but that sheet should be reasonably well filled. The use of headings, indentations, and other typographic devices add to the attractiveness of the page. A title like "Resume," "Data Sheet," or something more personal for instance, "Personal Record of James Smith," is optional.

CONTENT. The topics treated in the resume include the following, though the order may be varied to suit the particular tastes and qualifications of the applicant.

1. Name, mailing address, and telephone number.
2. Position desired or job objective.
3. Education, including major courses, honors, and extracurricular activities.
4. Positions held, with inclusive dates, title of position, name of employer, and duties.
5. Military experience, if any.
6. Hobbies, interests, special skills and achievements.
7. Personal data, which may include age, height and weight, draft status, marital status.
8. References (optional).

COMPOSITION. Many of the same suggestions already given for emphasis and proportion in the letter apply as well to the writing of the resume. The idea is to play up one's strong points, such as education or job experience, by giving them the most space. It is not necessary under any circumstances, however, to list all schools attended. The last may be sufficient if it provides the only record the applicant wishes to present as an asset for the job. However, there is often some advantage in listing all jobs held, so that a complete or continuous record will be provided. In the absence of job experience, emphasis should be put on educational achievements and special skills and interests. Schools and jobs should be listed in inverse chronological order, that is, in the last first. All the data in the resume should be highly specific and stated very tersely in phrases rather than complete sentences.

Average Annual Wage $162,000 A Year??

By "Rip" Coard

Americans are more concerned then ever before about their economic security as they watch the purchasing power of their paychecks being sapped daily by inflation. Moreover, while the nominal amounts listed as gross earnings on these paychecks keep rising impressively for most people, actual take-home pay inches up far more slowly. Thanks to the structure of progressive income tax brackets legislated in less inflationary times, the well-off are taxed as if they were extraordinarily rich, the middle class as if they were well-off and blue-collar workers as if they were middle class.

Nevertheless, all around are the signs of unprecedented abundance and prosperity. Shop windows overflow with luxurious merchandise, and the commercial din is exuberant and incessant. Advertisements extoll 20 different styles of designer "jeans," formerly the farmer's dungarees, and each pair costs as much as a good suit did, not many years ago. A perplexed citizen may wonder how people can afford the dime-thin watches, the suede suitcases, the ubiquitous fur coats and the high-priced restaurant dinners when the weekly food bill alone brings tears to the eyes.

He looks at his paycheck and wonders whether he is missing something. Is he in the wrong career? Are others in his line of work making much more than he is? How can other people buy these things that are so obviously out of his financial reach given today's prices? Who is making "real" money anymore? Americans are considered an uncommonly materialistic people. One consequence of this weakness has been to equate a person's intelligence and significance with how much he makes. Because of this ingrained attitude, many Americans are driven to try to learn or guess how much someone else earns, to see, in effect, how they measure up. The same people are usually just as anxious to prevent other people from discovering how much they themselves make. Almost everyone denies playing this game at the very moment they are playing it most. High-minded denials aside, the game is played at every level of society and affords no end of recreation, amusement, chagrin, malice and food for thought.

The game of discovering incomes has numerous variations and unstated rules, some long established, others of recent and practical origin. The rich pretend to be less rich so that they will be less resented; the almost rich act rich; the middle class, the artists and the intellectuals pretend to be indifferent, although it hurts; and the poor, or those unaware of their limitations, simply lust to be rich.

To ask a friend how much he makes is to court suspicion and rejection; to ask a stranger is considered extremely rude and invites hostility, even a punch in the nose. These responses are understandable when the size of one's income is considered to reveal so much about a person's place on the social, economic and even intellectual ladder. The person's place on the social, economic and even intellectual ladder. The best course is to say nothing specific, but to imply with a shrug or a smile that you are making more than you do if you think you are overpaid. And how many people think they are making neither more nor less than they deserve?

The most recent addition to the rules of this ancient game, an American variation, is that the rich, the almost rich, the middle class, and the artists and intellectuals do not want the government for obvious tax reasons to know any more about how much they make than is absolutely necessary. Therefore, only public servants, politicians holding office under the scrutiny of the public eye and the media and top executives who must answer for their usually generous salaries to stockholders are legally bound to openly declare their incomes.

One is astounded and possibly enraged by some of the incomes for "top earners" in various fields. Just they become too dependent, it is worse considering how relative these numbers are as demonstrated by a rather awesome projection made by the Social Security Administration. If inflation continues but gradually drops off to about one-half the present rate, the average annual wage in the year 2025 will be $162,000. Of course, what such a salary will buy is another question.

Beach Game Sales Better Than Expected

"All About Virginia Beach," a Monopoly-like board game sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, is selling "Quite well," according to Chamber Assistant Manager Bill Henry.

After the first week of marketing, Henry says that many of the 26 retail outlets which are selling the game have reported better-than-expected sales.

Only 3,000 of the games were made by the All About Town company of Woodlands, California.

"We specifically limited the number of games so that they could become collector's items," Henry said.

The object of the game is for the players, using dice and playing pieces, to acquire travel cards by moving about the playing board. The length of the game varies depending on the number of cards the players stipulate are required to win.

Vice mayor Harold Heishober was on hand last week to kick off the "All About Virginia Beach" campaign. Joining officials from the Chamber, the vice mayor said he was delighted to be a part of the project.

The game retails for between $12 and $13. It is available at the following Virginia Beach establishments: Tandon's Fine Tree Inn, Tencha's Hair Styling Salon, Frank Atkinson Real Estate, Cox Cable of Tidewater, Inc., Chesapeake Bay Bridge and Tunnel Dist., Uniway of Tidewater, Inc., Best Holiday Trav-L-Park, Plastic Surgery Center, Inc., KLA Campgrounds, Inc.,

Mercer's Hallmark Shop, Continental Telephone of Virginia, Marshall's Hotel, Tom's Tiki Tai, The Lemon Tree Pancake House, Small Business Computer Center, A-1 Plumbing and heating Co., Inc.,

Destroy Wasp's Nest At Night

Bee Or Wasp? Look For Hair

Sun Flower

By Beach Extension Agent
Greg Lowmyer

Yellowjackets, wasps and hornets can be serious pests around the home this summer. It is not uncommon for these insects to build nests near the house and forage for food around your's and your neighbors' yards. Most people don't know that ninety-five percent of all stinging wasps species are seldom seen and present no health hazard. The remaining species include the social wasps-yellowjackets, wasps, and hornets and are the ones responsible for giving bees, wasps and hornets their bad reputation. The fact is that all of them are very useful because they prey on insect pests, not to mention their pollination qualities. Yellowjackets as well as wasps and hornets use their sting primarily as a defensive weapon. Stings are almost always the result of disturbing the individual insect or the colony. In addition, because social wasps live in colonies of 30 to several thousand individuals; stings inflicted by disturbing the colony are usually multiple and therefore more serious. This situation leads people to want to destroy and nest of stinging insects and this is not the recommended practice.

The first question that should be asked when dealing with stinging insects is, "what is it?" Most people cannot identify the different problem wasps and may even confuse them with bees. Bees are very beneficial and should be preserved if at all possible. To tell whether the insect in a wasp or bee, inspect the body for hair. It is hairy, the insect is probably a bee because wasps, in general, have little hair. If someone has been stung and a stinger remains on the site of the sting, the insect was a bee. If no stinger, then it was probably a wasp. If honey bees are the problem, contact us or a beekeeper for removal information.

Once the stinging pest is identified as being other than a bee, try to locate the nest. The nest is a good means by which to identify stinging insects. The first step is to find out whether the nest is built in the open or in a protected location such as in a hollow tree or in the ground.

If the nest is visible (even though it may be built in a dense shrub or on the branch of a tree) and covered with gray paper material, then it is a wasp nest. Yellowjackets and bald-faced hornets will build nests such as these. If the nest consists of single open comb and constructed under the eaves of a house or a similar protected location, then it is a Polistes wasp. These wasps are by far the most common pests around the home. The third type of exterior nest is one constructed of mud "papers." These are mud daubers and are the only mud nest builders around the home.

The location of interior nests can not give positive identification of a stinging insect. The nest plus visual observation of the inhabitants, however, can give one fairly accurate identification. If the nest is in the ground, it is usually yellowjackets, but can be bumble bees. To distinguish between the two is easy.

Yellowjackets are relatively small and yellow and black while bumble bees are much larger. If the nest is in a hollow tree or inside the wall of a building, then close observation of the insect is required. If the insect is small (Less than 1/2 inch) it is a honey bee or a yellowjacket. Remember, honey bees are very hairy. If it is larger (about one inch), then it is a giant European hornet which, by the way, are not prone to attacking and stinging people.

Now that the sting insect is identified, control measures can be decided upon. As we mentioned before, honey bees should be removed not destroyed. Wasps and hornets should be left alone unless their nests are located in areas frequented by people. An example would be a ground nest near a lawn area that is mowed. Lawn mowers will easily agitate a ground nest. Ground nests can be destroyed by pouring a cup of household bleach into the entrance(s) and covering the entrance(s) with soil. This as well as other controls are best done at night without lights. Nests in walls can be controlled by dusting the entrance(s) with carbaryl (Sevin). Exterior nests can be sprayed with carbaryl (Sevin) or any household wasp spray. Be sure to do this at night and without lights. If light is required, have a companion hold a flashlight. Wasps and hornets need light to fly and, therefore, darkness is your best protection.

Legal Secretaries

In a recent edition of The Virginia Beach Sun, an article about the Virginia Beach Legal Secretaries Association contained a misprint because of a proofreading error. The line, which read,

"The VBLSA is nonunion, non-partisan, non-secretarial, and non-profit," should have been printed as follows: "The VBLSA is a, non-union, non-partisan, non-secretarial, and non-profit."

Headline Goofs

The headline on the story on towing operators in the June 16 issue The Virginia Beach Sun should have read "Innkeeper Charges Beach Police Side With Trespassers" instead of "Innkeeper Charges Beach Police Side With Towers." Also, the headline on a continuation of the story misspelled "Chaplain" in reference to Wilson Chaplain, innkeeper.

Chaplain had asked Virginia Beach City Council to take restrictions off of towing.

100,000 Flock To Boardwalk For Art Show

Sea Staff Report

More than 100,000 people visited the boardwalk between tenth and twentieth streets last weekend to view the 27th Annual Boardwalk Art Show, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center.

There were 550 artists from across the country on hand, displaying their wares and competing for cash prizes. When it was finished, Steven Jordan of Mr. Pleasant, S. C. took honors for best artwork in the show, a title which carried with it $2,000. Paige Davis of Bakerville, N. C. won the governor's trophy for her creation, and was awarded $1,000. Also capturing a $1,000 prize was Deborah Broad of Morehead, Maine with the award of distinction.

"Overall, it really was a great show," said chairman Joe White. "I've been told it was one of the best shows ever because it was representative of so many different styles of art. It was good this year, if not better, than ever before."

The show was very profitable for the artists according to White. "I just had two guys check out early because they had sold every bit of their work," he said. "The artists say they are doing very well." White added oil and acrylic paintings were probably the hottest items on the boardwalk in that they were selling the best.

"This kind of show is so important to the community because it gives the public a chance to see the best artists in the country and their works," White said. "The real important aspect of all this is the culture that is brought in to people who would normally not be exposed to it."

Northampton Home For New Building

Succulent juices from a fattened calf, cooked to medium rare, glistened beneath the blue and white canopy which protected the guests and their catered repast from a scorching midsummer sun. Nearby, a tractor was gearing up to remove a scoop of soil from the Diamond Springs Road site.

Television cameramen and other members of the press mingled with corporate types, in anticipation of the groundbreaking ceremony which was to begin shortly. The wine remained chilled and the rice pilaf warmed as Walter Alford, vice president of Eastern International, welcomed the crowd to the event which marked the first stage of construction of the company's phase I development of the seven acre tract to be known as the Northampton Executive Center when the facility is opened to commercial renters in one year.

The 68,000 square foot, full-service midrise structure will cost an estimated $3 million. The six-story complex will be composed of a super steel structure with an exterior skin of exposed aggregate accented with masonry at the street level.

The importance of this new addition to the community was not lost on Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf, who acted as the city's representative for the occasion. As noisy 18-wheel tractor-trailers chugged by on Northampton Boulevard, Oberndorf merely smiled. "That isn't the sound of traffic behind us," she said. "It is the sound of industry, industry which will bring more tax revenues to the city of Virginia Beach."

Alford pledged to solicit industrial renters for his new building from all over the east coast, and not merely from neighboring Norfolk.

The building will include such features as an automatic sprinkler system, fluorescent lighting, tenant-controlled heating and cooling, and a wide selection of high quality wall and floor coverings and other finishes to accent individual offices.

Financing for the facility is being handled by F & M National Bank. The structure, design and engineering is by Basco & Associates Site engineering is by Langley & McDonald.

Shields assumed this position February 9, 1981 after serving as Assistant General Sales Manager for the previous year. Prior to this promotion, Shields served as Embassy's Western Division Sales Manager since February 1979.

Prior to his association with Embassy, he was General Sales Manager of Far West Films, and earlier had served as Southern California film buyer for Mann Theaters as well as New York District Sales Manager for Twentieth Century-Fox. He has also held sales positions with MGM and New World Pictures.

Stahl Awarded By Garden Club

Virginia Beach's lovable "Rid-it-Frog" (alias Brenda Stahl, Litter Control Chairman of Broad Bay Garden Club and of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach) recently won special achievement awards from the National Council of State Garden Clubs, as well as from the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs.

Clubs, for outstanding garden club work. At the Council's recent awards luncheon, held at the Old Cavalier on the Hill, Mrs. Edward Hennessy, President of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, presented the National Special Achievement Award to Brenda and reminded her of the honor to be so selected from the national organization's 350,000 members of the 12,000 garden clubs throughout the country.

Mrs. Stahl has been a diligent crusader for litter control and her impersonation of "Rid-it-Frog" in parades, schools, churches, TV talk shows and civic functions has helped to make the community more aware of the problem and possible solutions. She has also spent many hours working with the City's dune grass planting program and with the distribution of pine seedlings to school children.

Old Swimming Hole May Contain Ameba

The Virginia Beach Health Department warns citizens that the good old swimming hole may not be safe. A free-living microscopic animal called an ameba found in some fresh water ponds and lakes has caused the death of several children in Virginia since 1970. The ameba lives in the silt of warm ponds and lakes and is especially active when the water temperature is 70 degrees to 90 degrees F. and when the water is still or stagnant. The ameba causes a condition (meningoencephalitis) which is usually fatal within eight days after exposure to warm fresh or brackish contaminated water.

The infection occurs when a swimmer dives or swims underwater stirring up mud and silt. Muddy water is forced into the nose and any ameba present can enter the sinuses and invade the brain and meninges. Symptoms of severe headaches with nausea and vomiting occur rapidly. If these symptoms occur a physician should be called and should be alerted to the swimming episode.

The Virginia Beach Health Director of Public Health notes that "hotfoot pits" in the City are not a major concern since they are generally deep and have low bacteria counts. However, shallow lakes could cause a problem.

NRA Awards $350,000

At its recent meeting in Chicago, the Board of the National Restaurant Association (NRA) allocated $350,000 for the development of a program to increase hospitality in the nation's restaurants.

NRA Board member Michael Savvides, Black Angus Restaurant, Virginia Beach, Virginia, said, "Like other industries, food service is constantly seeking more efficient ways of operating in order to keep menu prices from rising. But we can't let efficiency interfere with the warm interaction between restaurant staff and customers. This new program will teach employees how to make customers. This new program will teach employees how to make customers feel genuinely welcome."

The NRA hospitality program will be developed after an extensive study of what kind of treatment people expect in restaurants. It will feature seminars for food-service employees as well as manuals, slides and tapes.

A recent NRA survey showed that in atmosphere, family and fast food restaurants, people look first for "quality food" and "friendly service." Other qualities like "fast service" or "convenience" ranked far below quality and hospitality.

"In the food service industry, the customers are guests. This program will help us make them feel at home in our restaurants. In fact, they will feel more relaxed than at home because we do the cooking," Savvides said.

The NRA seminars will be developed by next May and presented in major cities across the country during the following two years.

Norfolk Khedive Temple Circus At Beach Stadium

Khedive Temple of Norfolk will present the 11th Annual Hamid-Morton Shrine Circus at the Virginia Beach Stadium (Adult Learning Center), Virginia Beach Blvd. at Witchduck Road, Virginia Beach, Thursday, June 24 through Sunday, June 27. Two performances daily at 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. Three performances on Sunday, June 27 at 12:30, 4 and 8 p.m.

This all-new 3 ring circus is truly family entertainment with no side shows or extra attractions. The general admission of $3 for adults, $1.50 for children is all that is required to see the entire performance which is presented within the stadiums infield.

Each year, the Nobles of Khedive Temple with the generosity of local merchants, make available free tickets to deserving children, disabled persons and senior citizens. Over 30,000 free tickets have been distributed for this year's circus by the area Police and Fire Departments and civic organizations.

Another animal act spotlights "Marvana" and his 19 lions and tigers, including one rare white tiger, performing in the huge steel enclosure.

without the clowns headed this year by Captain "Boxcar" Young with his comedy space shuttle cannon.

Natole Named To Dean's List

Deborah A. Natole, 5324 Crossfield Rd., Virginia Beach, has been named to the dean's list for Spring Semester, 1982 at York College of Pennsylvania.

The statue lady stands looking down at New York Harbor at America! She is looking over a nation which has still not cast off dissension... a nation of soul-searching, of division of all things that marked its revolutionary beginnings.

True, we are living in troubled times. But haven't times always been troubled? And since men and women are not saints, won't there always be problems and soul-searching and division?

But the important thing is that ultimately our unity has always transcended our differences... just as the unity of the Church has triumphed over even more difficult differences and division.

Our nation is over 200 years old. But it is merely a child compared to the age of the Church. In celebrating our nation's independence, isn't it a good time to turn to the Church and to everything for which it stands?

Museum Gets Boiler

The boiler from of the S. S. George Farewell came to rest for the second time last week. The first stop came October 20, 1906, when the ship was driven aground during high winds, heavy seas and a dense fog off Cape Henry. The second and final stop of the one and one-half ton of iron came last Thursday when the U.S. Army delivered the relic to the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum.

The gift from the army is an early birthday present for the museum, which celebrates its one year anniversary July 1. The Army post at Fort Story, under the command of Col. John T. Sprague, Jr. was in charge of the donation.

The remains of the ship had been visible to tourists for more than 75 years, as surf and sand broke the ship apart and destroyed all but the boiler. Only the 12-foot high generator turbine was left exposed, and became a Virginia Beach landmark at the north end of the oceanfront.

The Farewell, a 977-ton steam transport built in 1895, was driven aground during a northeaster at what is now 89th street, the boundary that separates the city and Fort Story. The ship, home-ported in New York, was on its way from Jacksonville, Florida to New Haven, Connecticut with a cargo of timber.

Men from Cape Henry Life Saving Station and the Seatack Life Saving Station managed a daring night rescue of the 16 people aboard, using a breeches buoy.

The portion of the boiler donated to the museum was removed May 4 during a cleanup conducted by the Port Station and the Seatack Life Saving Station managed a daring night rescue of the 16 people aboard, using a breeches buoy.

The portion of the boiler donated to the museum was removed May 4 during a cleanup conducted by the Port Construction Company number 497 from Ft. Eustis. Only the upper portion of the cast iron boiler was recovered; the majority of the remains are still buried in the sand where the ship went aground.

Fannie Molello and Nance Smith, volunteers at the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum, were happy to receive the latest addition to the one-year old museum last week.

Virginia Beach Business Section

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce

Organized to achieve objectives:

The organization of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce as such, is to preserve the competitive enterprise system of business by:

- Creating a better understanding and appreciation of the importance of business people and a concern for their problems
- Educating the business community and representing them in city, state, and national legislative and political affairs
- Preventing or addressing controversies which are detrimental to expansion and growth of business and the community, if they arise
- Creating a greater appreciation of the value of a more liberal investment of substance and self on behalf of the interests of competitive business

Promoting business and community growth and development by:

- Promoting economic programs designed to strengthen and expand the income potential of all business within the trade area
- Promoting programs of a civic, social and cultural nature which are designed to increase the functional aesthetic values of the community
- Discovering and correcting abuses which prevent the promotion of business expansion and community growth

There is an on-going drive for new members. To this end, Mr. Richard W. Conrad Jr., the Byerly Publication Account Executive, has been charged with the communicative liaison between business and the Chamber by the Mr. Hanes Byerly, president, Byerly Publications. All interested prospective members are invited to call him at 547-4574 or 486-3430.

Bache Command Account Available In Virginia Beach

The Bache Command Account, a financial service product from Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Incorporated, is being made available for the first time to investors in the entire Bache Group Inc. and Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Incorporated, its securities subsidiary.

Bache, one of the nation's leading securities firms with more than 175 U.S. branches, has an office in Virginia Beach. H. Layton House, Jr. is manager of the branch.

The Command Account is more than a brokerage account for investors to buy and sell securities. It offers a wide variety of financial services including the automatic investment of cash balances at money market rates and the ability to make the assets in the account instantly available to investors through check writing and a Visa card. The Command Account also provides full margin borrowing privileges, a consumer buying service and Citicorp Passwork Service. The latter provides presigned travelers checks that can be ordered by phone and delivered either to the office or home.

Affirmative BBB Help

Millions of inquiries and complaints are received annually by all the Better Business Bureaus combined. The more calls, the better, because it means so many more informed consumers who can expect and get their money's worth. The aims of the Better Business Bureaus today are threefold:

- to protect the buying power of the consumer;
- to encourage honesty in business;
- to inform the public on how to do business so the consumer can buy intelligently and gain maximum satisfaction from his purchases.

If you, in your capacity as a consumer, have questions regarding the reliability of any firm you plan to deal with, check with your BBB. A call may save you from buying unwisely.

Here, specifically, are some of the things a Bureau can do for the consumer:

Handle complaints. You've bought a washing machine, it doesn't work, and the store won't give you satisfaction. Or the TV set you just purchased produces a jumpy picture and the store manager says he is too busy to talk to you. What now? The BBB will determine if this is the sort of complaint that it can handle. If so, it will then take the matter up with the firm. If there appears to be a reason for checking into the pattern of the firm's practices, a shopper from the Bureau may be sent to size up the situation as well. If you have a legitimate complaint against an ethical firm, the BBB will almost always be able to help you settle it quickly.

Check on advertising claims. Experts read ads regularly, looking for unrealistically low prices, tricky phrases, phony illustrations, deceptive offers of free merchandise with purchases and fictitious claims of "Below Our Cost."

For example, a BBB executive noticed that a given dealer was offering a new model sedan at an implausibly low price. He suspected that none of these automobiles would be sold at this price and that they were advertised merely as a come-on to trick prospective purchasers into buying a higher-priced car. He dispatched a Bureau shopper to try to buy this particular car. Within a matter of days, five shoppers visited the merchant and found the auto would not be sold at the stated price. The forms were filed, and action was taken to apprise the public of the deception.

Preparing you. One of the major functions of the Better Business Bureau is to help you, the consumer, go out into the marketplace well prepared. But the area of buyer-seller relationship and of product quality is a broad one. The BBBs restrict their activities to questions of honesty and ethical practices in business. I may be helpful to list some of the things Bureaus do not do for the general public:

- They do not handle complaints about the pricing of goods and services. This is a matter between merchant and customer. Only if there is misrepresentation will the Better Business Bureau act.
- They do not appraise products. For instance, whether one appliance is better than another is not within a BBB's province.
- They do not give legal advice or recommendation. They give you facts. While they advise you of the complaints they have received about a firm you have inquired about, they do not go beyond these facts. They expect you to form your own conclusions and to act accordingly.

The BBB's contribution as affirmative. It is intended to guide you toward intelligent buying by providing you with the know-how for making sensible choices and then leaving you free to exercise your own judgement. Next week - Advertising "Tricks" and how to recognize the "type."

TIRED OF BIEGE?

Living In An Interesting Interior

By Jay Levin, Associate ASID, (Inside/Out Inc.)

Tired of the bland beige and tan environment you have been living in, well you're not the only one. There are many of you out there that are ready to scream from being so Bland!

Have not fear there are solutions without throwing everything out and causing your husband heart failure.

There are some helpful hints to help spruce up the old tired interior without going in to shock from what you have been used to.

The use of medium tones in pastel colors such as peach, old rose, violet and celestine are subtle colors that react with beige and gray and perk up the dull drums.

Throw peach, violet or rose pillows on that beige or gray sofa. Pick up and accent color with ceramic vases and ashtrays on cocktail tables and end tables. A pair of colorful lamps placed around the room carries color. Silk flowers in clear or color vases add beauty to any environment. (If you can relax flowers always show good taste and ultra beauty) Area rugs can change an environment and many times act as a wise investment another investment is art work, pictures, paintings and sculpture can turn any room into a showcase.

Last, but could be most important if you're not sure about what your doing or how to do it consult a professional designer. They can save you money and mistakes.

MUSIC! MUSIC!

Glenn Frey's new album, "No Fun Allowed", on Elektra/Asylum records is a fine collection of catchy pop tunes that get better with each listen. The former founding member of the "Eagles" has not lost his knack for writing and finding short little mainstream numbers much like the kind found on the classic Eagles albums of the seventies. Stand out tunes include: "I Found Somebody", "I've Been Born Again", and the oldie but goodie, "Sea Cruise".

Marshall Crenshaw's self-titled debut album on Warner Brothers records and tapes is one of the pleasant surprises of the summer. Fronting a 3 piece band consisting of: Crenshaw on guitar and vocals, and Chris Donato on bass and vocals. This band (along with artists such as Squeeze and Dave Edmunds) epitomizes the current trend of getting back to the basics of '60's pop rock. They succeed very nicely, especially on cuts like "Mary Anne" and the radio-oriented "Someday, Someway".

"Windsong", Randy Crawford's follow-up album to last year's well accepted "Secret Combinations" offers much of the same "laid back" soul influenced harmonies and lyrics that made the latter such a pleasure to listen to. With a virtual "who's who" of session men consisting of Jeff Porcaro on drums, Steve Lukather and Dean Parks on guitars, David Sawborn on sax and a host of others on solos and backing vocals, this effort should be a real treat for Randy Crawford fans. Her relaxing and hypnotic voice is like a cool summer night on the beach. She truly gets better with each album because she knows how to consistently surround herself with quality writers and musicians.

American music arranger, Ry Cooder, brings his treatment of rock to his latest album, "Slide Area". Crisp production and tastefully layered guitars, long Cooder trademarks are epitomized in a classic rendition of "Blue Suede Shoes". Yes, Carl would approve. Tongue placed in cheek, please, for "UFO has landed in the ghetto." "I'm Drinking Again" carries on in the same genre as in "Bop Till You Drop". No matter what your musical neuroses or preferences may be, "Slide Area", like many Cooder efforts, will have your attention and appreciation. If you've heard the "Stones", Taj Mahal, or seen "Border" or "Long Riders" you've experienced the eclectic genius of Cooder. Step into the "Slide Area".

THE DANGERS OF "THE POOL"

These questions and answers are provided by Polyneesian Pools as a public service to develop public understanding regarding the use and/or abuse of swimming pools. Most of the answers are based on recently released scientific research conducted over a period of eight years. The National Swimming Pool Foundation sponsored this vital research and Polyneesian Pools passes it on to you.

Q. Are "swimming pools the source of many accidents?"

A. No. In relation to other recreational activities, the pool is very tolerant of vigorous physical activity. For example:

•The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates there are over 434,000 accidents associated with playing basketball each year, while 126,000 accidents of all kinds occur in and around swimming pools - most of which are cuts, scrapes and bruises.

•And, over 60 million people participate in swimming each year, as opposed to 29 million participants in basketball.

Q. Is diving the primary cause of spinal cord injuries?

A. No. Approximately 50 percent of the reported spinal cord injuries were caused by automobile accidents, 20 percent by falls, and 12 percent from diving.

Of the estimated 500 serious spinal cord injuries each year that occur from diving, three out of four occur in lakes, rivers, and the natural aquatic environment rather than in man-made swimming pools.

While it is true that more sports-related spinal cord injuries are associated with diving, industry studies indicate that proper diver training in a swimming pool (which is the safest environment for training) will reduce spinal cord injuries in all aquatic environments.

Q. Do diving boards cause most serious spinal cord injuries such as quadriplegia?

A. No. Nine out of ten diving accidents that occur in swimming pools happen in the shallow water.

Q. Is diving into aboveground pools banned?

A. Yes. The industry recognizes that even though a shallow dive may be done properly, there may not be enough glide out room in an aboveground pool for a head first entry.

Q. How many drownings occur in pools each year?

A. Of the 7,000 total drownings that occur each year, 450 are related to residential and public swimming pools, according to National Safety Council statistics. The number of pools has increased 400-fold from 1948 to 1980, while the number of drownings has DECREASED by 33 percent.

Q. Should head first entries in the shallow end of residential pools be banned?

A. Head first entries can be dangerous, if you dive too deep or don't have enough glide out room. But prohibition would be difficult - proper diving techniques must be taught.

THE BOOK REVIEW

Contributing Editor: Fireside News & Books Shop Book Review. Eden Burning, by Belva Plain. This romantic saga is set on a fictional Caribbean island, and conveys history, political turmoil, and social issues now prevalent. Two brothers, who are unknown to each other gradually reach intersecting lives by way of a maletto issue of rape of Tess Francis, a member of a prominent island family and the Cambridge educated Patrick, who becomes a school-master and eventually, the Island Prime Minister. Francis Luther, the offspring of Tess Francis' marriage to a wealthy New York stockbroker, comes to this island to revive his family's fortunes, acquires a social conscience, and meets the true love of his life - almost too late. The lives of the brothers and their idealism lead to pain and then to tragedy, but love triumphs in a bittersweet finale. Delacorte, 15.95 at Fireside News and Book Shop.

CANINE HEARTWORM

Timberlake Veterinary Hospital

By Dr. Linda Hayles

Canine heartworm disease is a growing problem in Virginia Beach. Because heartworms are transmitted by mosquitoes, the danger of infection is greatest during the summer months. Consequently, controlling the spread of heartworms has become a high priority among veterinarians and dog owners alike.

The problem starts when a mosquito draws blood and obtains microfilaria, immature heartworms, from an infected dog. These microfilaria develop into infective larvae into another dog while taking a blood meal. These larvae develop into adult heartworms in about 200 days and the females begin producing thousands of microfilaria which will then circulate freely through the arteries and veins. The adult worms collect and live in the right side of the heart and major pulmonary vessels. These parasites can increase the heart's workload and restrict blood flow to the lungs, kidneys, and liver. Continued, untreated infection produces an increased strain on these vital organs which may eventually result in death of the dog.

Visible signs of heartworm disease may not appear until a full year after infection. The disease may be well advanced before the dog shows evidence of heartworms which includes coughing, tiring upon exercise, labored breathing, and weight loss. An accurate diagnosis of canine heartworm disease can be made by your veterinarian by examining a blood sample for the presence of microfilaria. All dogs over 6 months of age should be tested for heartworms on an annual basis. Those dogs not started on heartworm prevention should be tested every 6 months.

Canine heartworm disease can be treated successfully in a very high percentage of the cases. But, all dogs, due to age or abnormal liver or kidney functions, would not be appropriate candidates for treatment. Your veterinarian will be able to determine this prior to treatment.

After adult heartworms and microfilaria are eliminated, an infected dog may be started on a program to prevent reinfection.

Most Virginia Beach veterinarians recommend starting a preventative program in April of every year and continuing on a daily basis through December. A negative blood test should be obtained each before starting preventative medication.

The heartworm prevention is available in pill form, liquid, and chewable tablets. The cost over a 9 month period, depending upon the form of medication and size of the animal, will range from $1.00 to $4.00 per month.

IS UNIVERSAL LIFE THE ANSWER?

Universal Life insurance is the answer to many skeptics of traditional life insurance. If offers low rate term insurance and also can build a cash reserve paying current money-market interest rates. In addition, it gives the consumer much more flexibility, in that he or she can change their premiums, lower or higher. There is even the option of not paying premiums for a time.

Most contracts that are offered under the Universal Life have an automatic consumers' price index increase. Therefore an individual can be assured that his insurance will always maintain the same benefits as it did at time of purchase.

The majority of the plans have a provision for increasing the death benefit without having to purchase a new contract. A person could be covered by a single policy for his entire life.

Considering all these factors, it is wise to investigate the Universal Life concept to see if it fits your financial planning for now and for the future.

ARTHROSCOPY

By THOMAS S. MEADE, JR., M.D.

Arthroscopy is the visualization inside a joint using an arthroscope. An arthroscope is a surgical instrument which acts as a telescope. It has a lens at one end and a fiberoptic light cable going through the scope which is used to illuminate the inside of the joint.

The arthroscope has a sheath surrounding it which allows either the flow of fluid into or out of the joint, which helps in the visualization of the interior of the joint. An arthroscope is used by a trained physician for diagnostic and for surgical procedures.

Originally, the arthroscope was just used for diagnostic evaluation of the inside of the joint; most commonly used for the knee joint, but more recently being used for other joints, including the shoulder, elbow and ankle. With the revolutionary advance of specialized surgical equipment, surgery utilizing very small instruments is now possible using the arthroscope to visualize what is wrong inside the joint. Small instruments are used to try to remove abnormal tissue such as: a torn portion of meniscus, which is the cartilage within the joint, or actual foreign bodies, such as a broken off needle or a bullet.

Diagnostic or surgical arthroscopy is a surgical procedure that may be offered to you by your orthopedic surgeon once he has evaluated the problem that you are having with your joint. The procedure is usually done in the operating room under some form of anesthesia, most often general anesthesia. Diagnostic arthroscopy can often be done as an out-patient, with the patient being able to go home the same day that he has the procedure done. Surgical arthroscopy can sometimes be done as an out-patient, depending on what type of surgery is needed. The following technique is used for arthroscopy in the operating room.

A tourniquet is used to stop the flow of blood to the operative site during the surgical procedure. Often a thigh immobilizer is used which helps the surgeon to manipulate the knee or joint involved so that good visualization of the inside of the joint can be obtained. This is accomplished under anesthesia so it is not painful to the patient.

The joint is infused with sterile saline, thereby expanding the joint capsule and allowing more space for the arthroscope in order to visualize the interior of the joint.

The arthroscope is an instrument about the size of a ballpoint pen, that is 5mm or less. It is inserted into the joint involved through a small skin incision approximately 1/4" or less in length. With the light running through the arthroscope, the inside of the joint can be well visualized. Often several puncture incisions will be used in order to allow use of a probe or surgical instrument for further diagnosing and surgically treating problems within the joint.

Saline is inserted into the joint involved with a special needle that is placed inside the joint. Also saline can be removed from the joint by vacuum through the arthroscope or other surgical instrument. Oftentimes, for surgical procedures, an electronic shaver is used to remove abnormal tissue found within the joint. Other surgical instruments include special scissors and biting instruments for removal of abnormal tissue.

At the end of the procedure, all of the fluid within the joint is removed. Oftentimes, a local anesthetic can be used at the end of the procedure to help decrease the immediate post-surgical pain.

The advantages of these techniques are:

More accurate diagnoses of the problem and less painful surgical means of taking care of the problem.

Not all problems within the knee can be solved by arthroscopy or arthroscopic surgery. Your Orthopedic Surgeon should be able to evaluate this and advise you whether this type of surgery would be useful for you. The biggest advantage of this type of surgery for the patient is that it is less painful, the rehabilitation following surgery is often faster than previous types of surgery for similar problems of the joint, the hospital stay is usually much less and thereby, hospital bills are often less than they would be for other types of knee surgery.

The disadvantages of this type of surgery are:

The equipment is expensive, the surgery is technically very demanding, and not all surgery is possible by these techniques. However, it is good to have these advanced techniques available to aid the surgeon in choosing proper treatment for his patients.

London Bridge Baptist Church

Learn About Puppets at London Bridge

The London Bridge Baptist Church will hold a seminar on the usefulness of professional quality puppets as effective instructional tools on Thursday, July 22 from 6:30 to 10 p.m. at the church, located at 2460 Potters Road.

The three and one-half hour training session will be conducted by professional puppeteers from Puppet Productions, Inc. (PPI), a San Diego, California company that has trained more than 73,000 persons in similar sessions.

Live performances will be used to demonstrate the effectiveness of puppetry as a communication tool.

Included among the demonstrations will be instruction in single and double puppeteer performances as well as intensive training in puppetry techniques.

The universal appeal of puppets is also reflected in the thousands of churches and schools which have begun using puppets in their education programs.

"Puppets create an excellent climate for learning, whether the subject matter is secular or religious," says Bill Hawes, President of PPI. "The seminar is designed to aid both beginners and experienced puppeteers with emphasis on training as well as actual participation at the seminar."

Subject areas covered in the seminar include how to manipulate hand puppets, selecting and training puppeteers, organizing an effective puppet team, immediately improving your performances and maintaining high performance standards.

Seminar sizes are limited to insure adequate personal attention so early registration is recommended. Individual registration fees are $18.00 with reduced rates available for groups and families. For additional details and registration information call 463-0612.

Volleyball

Virginia Beach Masters
Place 2nd in Tourney

A 45-year-old Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic Marine has been named an All-American Volleyball player by the U.S. Volleyball Association All-American Selection Committee.

Lieutenant Colonel J. R. Duckworth, a member of this command's G-3 operations section, received these honors during the 53rd Annual U. S. Volleyball Association National Championship held at Hilo, Hawaii.

"Our team, the Virginia Beach Masters, comprised of local military and civilian players, finished in second place in the championship," Duckworth commented.

In addition to the Beach Masters, he has coached and played on two other volleyball teams this year.

"One team, a member of the local Tidewater Volleyball Association League, finished first in the Tidewater area, second in this year's State of Virginia competition and third in the East Coast Regional Championship."

Duckworth also played on the local Camp Elmore Headquarters and Service Battalion team which won the East Coast All-Marine Volleyball Championship held at Camp Lejeune, N.C. in April.

"During the championship we never lost a game and no team scored more than eight points against us."

Besides being an All-American player, Duckworth has been named an All-Marine player nine times since he began playing volleyball in 1960.

"I was taught the game when I was a lieutenant stationed at Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center Twentynine Palms, California by an All-American Navy player."

"Volleyball is a great team sport which requires superior individual skills but, at the same time, must be played as a team sport. It's one of the few competitive team sports that can be played by people in their middle age. I'm 45 and still competitive and I plan to continue playing for as long as I can."

"I'm already beginning to plan for next year. I think we'll have some of the best military and civilian teams on the East Coast in the Tidewater area."

Donahue

Donahue discussed a wide range of topics during his hour-long address, covering his college days at Notre Dame, his marriage to actress Mario Thomas, his rearing of five children as a single parent, and his views on the roles women play in society and in the home.

Donahue called for an equal distribution of domestic chores around the household. "There is nothing I'd like more than to come home from work at five o'clock and have Mario meet me in her secdet dress with a cold beer in her hand," he said. "I know, however, that that is a ridiculous scenario. The man is perfectly capable of fending for himself."

The silver-haired Donahue, decked out in a trim gray pinstripe suit, spent a large portion of his talk discussing changing attitudes held by youths. "When I was a kid coming up in the 1950's, the most important thing on a date was whether or not you got a goo-night kiss," he said. "Today, God Knows what they worry about, but it certainly isn't just kissing."

At the conclusion of his lecture, Donahue turned over the talking to those in the audience, who were directed to microphones set up throughout the auditorium. Fans queried Donahue on topics ranging from benefits for Navy wives to teenage sex. Ever the diplomat, Donahue, when faced with a hostile questioner, always maintained his composure, smiled, and said, "thank you for sharing your views with us."

the land in question is privately owned. The rules, most of which are modeled on a copy of rules furnished the owners by former City Manager Hanbury that pertain to City owned beaches, are as follows:

RULES AND REGULATIONS

The following rules and regulations are now in effect: the wording has been essentially copied from the City of Virginia Beach Code regarding public beach property:

The right is reserved to patrol this property. Violators may be prosecuted. Any person violating the rules and regulations may result in his or her entire household being denied future access to the property.

The above rules apply only to residents of the subdivisions commonly known as "LYNNHAVEN COLONY," "CAPE STORY BY THE SEA," "CAPE HENRY SHORES," "CAPE HENRY SYNDICATE," "BROAD BAY COLONY" and "BROAD BAY ISLAND."

All others who do not live in one of the above named subdivisions have no right whatsoever and will be treated as trespassers if they attempt to enter the boundaries of this property after Friday, July 2, 1982 at six a.m.

Police Looking For Pervert

By Beach Detective Michael Derwent

Within the past nine months, the residents of Lake Edward section of Virginia Beach have been the victims of 15 incidences of indecent exposure. Crime solvers need your help in attempting to identify the person responsible for these crimes and will pay up to $1,000 in cash for this information.

Since September 5, 1982, a white male subject has been going to the patio door at the rear of the apartments and townhouses and after drawing the attention of the victim by tapping on the glass, the suspect exposes himself. The suspect has not confined himself to one area as he has been observed in Lake Edward, Lake Edward North, as well as Hampton Court and Wesleyan Court Apartments.

The suspect has been described as a white male in his late teens to early twenties, 5 feet 8 inches to 6 feet tall, 150 to 175 pounds, medium build with blonde curly or wavy hair and from all indications is responsible for all fifteen exposures.

If you have any information about these exposures, call Virginia Beach Crime solvers at 427-0000, and if an arrest is made from your call, you will be eligible for a cash reward.

Crime solvers also pays up to $1,000 cash for information about any serious crime, apprehension of wanted persons or the recovery of drugs or stolen property. Also remember that you will never have to give your name.

Sun Classifieds Get Results

Mr. Randy Matthews recently ran this ad in the classified section of the Virginia Beach Sun.

Mr. Matthews had chosen to run his ad in the Virginia Beach Sun for four weeks because of the special price for a four week ad. After one week he canceled his ad after one week. He gave his puppy away after the third day.

Yellow Lab Pup-Free to good home, excellent with children. Call after 6:00 p.m.

Mr. Matthews had this to say: "I was very satisfied with the calls I got, it gave me a chance to pick out the best home I thought the pup would have." Mr. Matthews added that the reason the Virginia Beach Sun classifieds received so much response was because of the way the ad was written.

The cost of a 20 word ad in the Virginia Beach Sun is only $4 per week or $12 for four weeks (the 4th week is free).

To place your ad call 486-3430 and speak with Robin. She will help you word your ad so you can get the same good results.
